Smart as an Eight-Year-Old Boy

Fellow, a German shepherd dog, understands between 300 and 400 spoken words and has the intelligence of an eight-year-old boy, says his master, Jacob Herbert of Detroit, who is in New York with his phenomenon. The canny canine will receive a special psychology test at Columbia university to prove that Mr. Herbert knows what he is talking about. Prof. C. J. Warden of Columbia is shown talking to Fellow.

Culture of the Future to Be All Embracing in Its Common Spirit

By DR. MacCRACKEN, President Vassar College.

University circles have been criticized as tending to crystallize into castes. Increasing concern with the selective process in college often leads young students to dissatisfaction. They feel their classmates are of a type familiar to themselves as their own mirror.

It is the duty of colleges to give some training in that deeper sort of communication by which the real selves come to light, most of which comes from experience in daily living.

The culture of the future will be full of strange tongues. Not simply new tongues in European mouths, such as those of Sun-Yat Sen or Tagore, but new languages of science, which must be interpreted to us by popular soothsayers. It will be rich and manifold in its effects, though beyond comprehension in detail, like the figures of international debits and credits, in which the newspapers deal.

Influence of Church Needed as an Aid to Proper Law Enforcement

By JUDGE CLARENCE A. BURNEY, Kansas City.

The church by its teachings, upon which all law really rests, can counteract evil influences. The law can go only so far in purging the news stands of vicious literature. The church can go farther.

In one of our magazines, Judge Lindsey is writing the sordid secrets learned in the privacy of his chambers from those who had found misfortune in life. He generalizes from these stories and tells us marriage is for lust. This is an unqualified insult to decent society. We always have been taught that loyalty and fidelity made marriage upright and religious. We believe enduring marriage is the corner stone of society.

Darrow, who has served a lifetime earning great fees by defending criminals, excuses them before our bar association. He tells us they should be put in special schools. They should be punished swiftly and surely if they are guilty. Good citizens should resolve to serve intelligently on juries, seeing that no innocent man is punished, that no guilty man escapes.

A man can be saved easily by defense, too. The law has created too many doors of escape for the criminal.

Economic Facts Ignored by United States in War Debt Settlements

By JOSEPH S. DAVIS, Adviser to Dawes Commission.

The United States used its legal position and economic power to force war debt settlements which fall short of commending themselves to allied and neutral countries as fair, reasonable, or even political.

Except on the humiliating ground of capacity to pay, our representatives apparently ignored practically all suggestions and considerations brought forward by our own critics and by the debtor nations.

As the allied powers did in the cause of the Versailles treaty and as Germany's reparation creditors also did for several years, the United States arrogated to itself the right to be the final judge of what was just and expedient. As a result, it is likely that adjustments of the debt settlements will have to be made.

America's position as the great creditor nation of the world has given latitude to its foreign investments, which are estimated at between 11 and 13 billions of dollars. Because of this, the nation is interested in maintaining political and economic conditions that will make such investments safe and productive, and thus may take a more liberal attitude on the question of debt adjustment.
