It's a long walk to as good a stock

¶ That would make a first-rate motto for this store.

¶ For general completeness of stock, for all-the-time readiness to serve our customers, we can't see how it would be possible to surpass this store's usefulness to this community.

¶ We stand prepared to cater to every home's Furniture want—however large, however small.

¶ There is never any need for us to make any excuses for our goods.

¶ All that we ask is that you test our Furniture by the best that you know of.

¶ We will be glad to abide by your decision.

Mr. E. A. Kelley, Belvidere, writes us: "I am an ex-engineer with 22 years active service to my credit. About three years ago my kidneys were affected so that I had to give up my engine. First I was troubled with severe, aching pain over the hips. Then followed inflamation of the bladder, and specks appeared before my eyes. A sample of Foley's Kidney Pills that I tried, so benefited me that I bought more I continued to take them until now I can safely testify they have made me a sound and well man." Sold by all druggists. J. T. Power, Millington, Md.

ARMOUR PLANT AT RIDGELY

Proposition Made By The Town's Business Men Is Accepted.

The establishment by the Armours of a fruit preserving and juice extracting plant at Ridgely is now a certainty. William W. Seward, a local business man, has been formally notified by C. O. Davidson, of the Armour corporation at Chicago, that the proposition made by him and his associates has been accepted and that contracts will be signed at Philadelphia next week, when Armour representatives will be in that city on their way to the National Canner's Convention at Atlantic City.

The plant of the Alliance Preserving Company, heretofore used for packing tomatoes, will be acquired by the Armours and used by them this season. The new factory will afford a large market for local berry growers, who have often suffered great loss because just as the bulk of the crop was ready to go to the city market prices there dropped below a figure allowing much profit.

As a means of developing to a much greater extent the small fruit industry on the Eastern Shore Armour's departure will be watched with great interest and its extensions to other communities is regarded as a pleasing possibility of the future.

PROGRESS OF BUFF ORPINGTONS.

Written for Kent News.

The Buff Orpington when originated and first brought out by the late Wm. Cook in England in 1894 became more popular in short time than any other breed ever has or ever will. Of course there are reasons for all this. First, the American public when they see and know a good thing take hold of it much quicker than England did of her own stock. Second, really the backbone of their popularity is their marvelous merits, which are more pronounced in this country than any other, as the extreme climatic changes which do not effect the hardiness and laying qualities of the Buff Orpington do effect these qualities in other breeds.

The popularity of Buff Orpingtons over other varieties of the Orpingtons is manifested by a survey of catalogues of different poultry shows and the number of entries taken roughly show that 50 Buffs are shown against 20 Blacks and 12 White Orpingtons, this is about the average of small shows, and even to-day the Buffs are gaining in number of entries over many other varieties. But beside the exhibition end is the utility end of the matter which interests the farmer and the man or woman who wants a bird that will lay nice large eggs and furnish good meat. Many farmers especially in the West have given up Rocks, Wyandottes and Leghorns for the profitable Buff Orpington.

There is a certain facination in breeding Buff Orpingtons because it is a little hard to breed really practical perfect specimens, although every year they seem to improve and cause less trouble in breeding. The buff color is very attractive and you can raise them in different shades if you wish. They make surprisingly fast growth as youngsters, are large and attractive when matured, being cleaned-legged make a valuable table fowl. None other of the large breeds can compare with them as layers, while as a winter laver the Buff Orpington is greatest of them all, giving their competitors a merry chase

They are to be admired for many reasons as the farmers fowl, they are quite best of brooders and mothers, easily handled. A low inexpensive fence will confine them, and will stand confinement in houses the year round. They are hardy and withstand disease and exposure better than any other breed I know of, are cool in summer and keep warm in winter. What the farmer wants is the breed that weighs and lays, and this is the breed that pays. Our advice is to those looking for a fowl that will produce the largest income from the smallest labor is to invest in some Buff Orpingtons.

SPENDS MILLIONS ON HORSES

From some statistics published recently by M. Ruan, the German Minister of Agriculture, the land of the Kaiser leads the world in the matter of importing horses. In case of war the Germans are bound that they will be in possession of a liberal supply of horses. For the last three years there has been a slight decrease, the cause being that home breeders are doing well. In 1908 Germany imported 119,000 horses at a cost of $20,000,000. Most of the imports were made for draught purposes; light draught horses numbered 43,000 and were of the value of $4,500,000. The heavy draught horses numbered 48,500 and were of the value of $10,000,000. Supplies of the former class were drawn principally from Russia which sent 30,225 head; then came the Netherlands with 9,024; Austria and Hungary accounted for 2,525; Denmark for 467, and the rest were drawn from France and Belgium. The heaviest of the draught horses were mainly supplied from Belgium, 20,000 being imported at an average price of $310. Denmark delivered 16,309, France 5,847, Austria and Hungarv 3,369 Russia 2,051, the Netherlands 644 and England only 125. In 1908 Germany imported 267 half bred sires at an average cost of $1,020, most of them being from Belgium. Saddle horses are put down as numbering 6,562, of which Austria supplied 2,946, against 1,227 from England. These latter figures include the thoroughbreds. The favorite market for cheap horses for Germany has been Russia, which country supplied 16,883 at an average cost of $75.
