versus
Wilhelmina Bosee, Gertrude Alberta Bosee Lilly, John Kennard Bosee, Henry Thompson Bosee, Infant.

In the Circuit Court for Kent County in Equity. No. 1756.

The object of this Bill is to procure a construction of the last Will and Testament of John Kennard Bosee.

The Bill states that John Kennard Bosee, late of Baltimore City, deceased, departed this life on or about the first day of May, 1906, seized and possessed of a farm or tract of land situated in the Second Election District of Kent county aforesaid, and leaving a last will and testament which was admitted to probate by the Orphans' Court for Baltimore City, a certified copy of which and the probate thereof has been recorded in the office of the Register of Wills for Kent county aforesaid in Liber G. S. H. No. 1 folio 423 etc. and a certified copy of which is filed herewith, marked Complainant's Exhibit No. 1, and prayed to be taken as a part hereof. That the said Testator, John Kennard Bosee, left surviving him his widow, Wilhelmina Bosee, who resides in Baltimore City; and the following named children: Gertrude Alberta Bosee Lilly, who married Charming F. Lilly, and who resides out West either in Ohio or Indiana, John Kennard Bosee, who lives either in Baltimore City or New York City, State of New York, and Henry Thompson Bosee who is an infant and resides in Baltimore City.

That the said last will and testament of John Kennard Bosee by the first and second items thereof provides as follows: First, "I give, devise and bequeath to my wife, Wilhelmina, all my estate, real, personal and mixed, of whatsoever nature and wheresoever situated, to be held by her during the term of her natural life, with full power to her to sell and convey, mortgage or lease any or all of my estate, and re-invest the proceeds thereof in her own discretion; and from and after the death of my said wife, then to the child or children by my said wife, then living, and to the heirs and personal representatives of my three children, Gertrude Alberta, John Kennard and Henry Thompson, who my then be deceased, per stirpes and not per capita." Second, "I constitute and appoint my said wife to be the Executrix and Trustee of this, my last will and testament, hereby revoking all other wills and codicils by me heretofore made." That the said Wilhelmina Bosee in her own name and as "Executrix and Trustee under the last will and testament of John Kennard Bosee, deceased," by deed dated the 3rd day of September, 1907, and recorded among the Land Records for Kent County, aforesaid, in Liber J. T. D., No. 16, folio 38, etc., a certified copy of which said deed is filed herewith, marked Complainant's Exhibit No. 2, and prayed to be taken as a part hereof, conveyed or attempted to convey unto Thomas N. McGinnis a fee simple estate and title in and to the above mentioned real estate. That the following persons as devisees and as grantee of said devisees are interested in the construction of the said first and second items and paragraphs of said last will and testament, namely: Wilhelmina Bosee, Gertrude Alberta Lilly, John Kennard Bosee, Henry Thompson Bosee and Thomas N. McGinnis.

That this Honorable Court may pass a decree with reference to said last will and testament as fas as the same is set forth in the above case upon the following questions: A. Whether the words of the first and second items of the said last will and testament create a fee simple estate of the above described real estate in the said Wilhemina Bosee, or only a life estate, coupled with a power to convey the same. B. Whether the said Wilhemina Bosee under and by virtue of said first and second items of said will and the power therein conferred has a right and the power to convey a fee simple estate and title to said real estate, free and clear of all claims and remainderary interests of the three above named children of the said testator, or whether it confers upon the said Wilhelmina Bosee power to convey only a life estate of her own in the said property.

That your Orator may have such other and further relief as his case may require.

It is thereupon this 18th day of Dec 1910 ordered by the Circuit Court, of Kent county, in Equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Kent county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 16th day of January, 1911, giving notice to Gertrude Alberta Bosee, Lilly and John Kennard Bosee, non-resident defendants of the object and substance of this bill and warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 3rd day of February, 1911, to show cause if any they have why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Awaiting Installation of Modern Machinery.

For 30 years the properties represented by the WALDO CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINING COMPANY of Oregon have not failed to yield more than current dividend requirements. The 2,500 acres of rich Placer Ground comprising the properties have not been scratched, as miners say, and the gravel that has been washed of its gold is but a small fraction of the demonstrated reserves awaiting sluicing.

Only 100,000 Shares of the Preferred Stock are being sold at this time. Upon request we will be pleased to send fully illustrated booklet and all particulars of this demonstrated mining success, which President Turner says is even a better proposition than Tonopah Mining was when he first launched it. Tonopah Mining, Common Stock, given as a Bonus, has paid $7 a share to date in dividends and is quoted regularly in the open market above $8 a share. We are satisfied WALDO CONSOLIDATED will do even better. Write for details of this peculiarly attractive proposition.

Fred Travers' Christmas Eve.

Written for the NEWS by Mrs. Rhebenia Fithian, of Kent county, Md.

It was Christmas Eve. How odd it is that at the mention of Christmas one usually thinks of snow. But the Christmas of which I write there is no snow as yet, only a heavy dull fog, that makes one draw their coat more tight about them and nestle into furs.

Fred Travers had just returned from abroad that day and was wandering aimlessly up and down the streets of New York, glancing now and then at the shoppers, now and then at the windows. How he envied those happy folk. Young men and girls, old folk and children; and just there a young wife leaning so fondly on her husband's arm. Oh! how it brought back the past. Surely in all New York there could be no more miserable man than he.

He would go to his place of business and notify them of his return and then to his rooms. For he felt unfit for any pleasure, he would pass that Christmas eve in brooding.

For him there could be no Christmas. Turning up —— street he noticed a little boy of perhaps seven years, whose eyes looked longing in at the shop window. The child looked up as he passed along and with one of those impulses which we can never account for Fred Travers stopped and looked in at the window, too.

There were magic lanterns, jumping jacks, books, balls and toys of every kind displayed within and there, just at the back was a large swinging horse that could go at a great rate. Just such a horse he was going to buy for his Ted as soon as he was large enough to mount. Ted, his own dear little boy. Oh! heavens how long ago it seemed since he had seen Ted last. He had kissed and cuddled him close in his little bed the night he had left his home almost two years before. How large would Ted be now? Would he have forgotten him, his own dad? He wondered if they had cut his curls yet, and even wondered in his pain if they had cut the curl that Ted always called 'Dad's curl.' His mind went back and he could see the holly and evergreens that he and Madge had fixed together, the tree they had decorated, the presents they had such joy in buying, and all for Ted. And then on Christmas morning when Ted in his pajamas came tumbling in for papa to carry him down on his shoulder such shouting and laughter, and oh, so much joy. What was Ted doing now? he wondered. Would Madge trim the tree alone? Would she think of him? Of course not. He gave himself a shake, why should she think of him? Did she not say she wished never to see him again? There was only a slight misunderstanding at first over a note. Why had not Madge trusted him? Why had he not shown it to her? There was nothing really to be kept hid. What devil had prompted him to treat Madge as he had and to show his authority as master? He had intended to show her the note in his own good time, which was only a few lines from one, Elsa Manning in behalf of her husband who was ill. Manning had been in his employ. Madge later found the note, or at least a part of it, a piece bearing the woman's name of course, and had jumped to a hasty conclusion of facts. Bitter words had followed. Surely she could never have loved him to doubt him as she did, and yet he knew in his own mind that she did. He could take all the blame on himself now, when it was too late. And he heaved a sigh.

"What's the matter, mister, ain't you got no Christmas or no little boy?" asked the child at his side. Fred Travers started, he had been so lost in thought he had forgotten where he was, but he managed to answer, "Oh, no, no one belonging to me." "I am so sorry" the child said, "cause it must be lonesome for you. There is mother and Jack and me; mother sews and Jack works and I am too as soon as I am older; before father went away," and here his little lips quivered and he stopped. Then suddenly growing confidential, he said, "You see father went West to work an' mother ain't heard in a long time from him. Bill Myre's says 'we ain't got no father, he has de-serted us,' but you don't think so do you mister, you think my own father will come back?" What made the sudden mist before Fred Travers' eyes? While the blood flew to his face, and the word deserted rang in his ears. Deserted. What an ugly word. Suppose some boy at some future time should taunt his Ted with having no father, with being deserted by him. His hand clinched and his heart sank at the thought. "Do you think my own father will come back?" He was recalled by the childest treble. "Right sure I am my little man especially to such a little chap as you," he answered. "But as I leave you here, here is something to help on your Christmas to be a merry one," and he put a bill into the small hand. "Now run home, and tell your mother to have a Merry Christmas with my good wishes." And without waiting for the child's happy thanks he hurried on to his place of business.

His partner, Mr. Stavley was very glad to see him, and after greeting him most cordially said, "Mr. Travers, of course there is much that needs attention and some business plans that need discussing, but I will not trouble you at present, the truth is sir I had a letter about ten days ago from Mrs. Travers asking me of your whereabouts, and of course knowing you were on your way home, I could only send her that one word; it seems your little boy has been ill. Why man, don't take it like that, here take some brandy," but Travers only gasped, "Go on" as he waved the decanter aside. "I judge it can't be so bad, else I would have heard something more," continued Stavley. "But I promised I would tell you as soon as you came and sent Mrs. Travers word to that effect." Travers hastily pulled out his watch, he had barely time to catch the 5.20 train. With a grasp of the hand, and a brace up Travers all will be well, from Stavley, he hurried out called a passing hansom and drove to the —— station. Passengers paused even in a busy New York train to notice the white face of the man as he sat gazing out at the flying scenes. Every thought that his mad brain could conjure up was, am I in time? How heart-less Stavley's words sounded, as he recalled them, but then Stavley was unmarried. He did not have a boy like Ted.

Suppose everything was over, and Ted was gone from his home? Could he live and bear it? As the train pulled in at his station, he was the first one off. It was barely fifteen minutes walk to his home, but to him it seemed endless. As he neared the house he was attracted by a light from the drawing room, but it was only the light from the fire in the grate. He could not well see within. He would go in; at least it was his home even if Madge did not care for him, Ted was ill, and his boy too, and he must see him at any cost. Stepping up he softly opened the front door and found himself in the dimly lighted hall. All was still. He could hear his every heart beat. Suppose he should be taken for a thief? Suppose Madge should come suddenly upon him there, what would he do? How would she act? While he stood there hesitating what he ought to do; he became conscious of the sound of voices in the adjoining room; he hardly dared breath lest he should lose the sound of those dear voices. "Will it be Christmas tomorrow muver?" it was Ted's voice. Travers sent up a quick prayer of Thanksgiving. He was not too late to see Ted after all. "Yes dear if you will only go to sleep, mother will take you up to bed." That was Madge's voice, but it still had the power to thrill the man waiting without.

"Do you think dad will come soon muver? Oh! I wish he would; Ted is so lonesome. Are you lonesome muver?" There were tears in the little weak voice.

There was an inarticulate cry as the mother knelt by the side of her boy and gathered him close to her heart.

"Am I lonesome Ted? Little Ted, oh! darling mothers heart is breaking, oh! boy dad has forgotten us."

Travers was only humane, he could stand no more. Pushing aside the curtain he stepped into the room. Going quickly forward, he knelt and gathered wife and child in his arms. "Forgive me Madge, forgive," he repeated over and over.

* * * * * * * *

Did she forgive?

Only those who know what true love can do will know how easy it was for her to forgive. And little Ted. It was a joy to look on his little white face as he gazed on his idolized father. Much was explained and forgiven, and as they sat in the firelight, over the distant hill came the chime of midnight. The bells pealed forth welcoming in the glad Christmas morn.

"Bringing joy, Peace and Good Will to all men," said Travers. "And to me the least of any." And he bent to kiss his wife, as they went together to trim Ted's tree.

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.
