CHESTERTOWN, - JUNE 6, 1891.

Camels in America.

C. W. Cannon tells a story about a drove of camels that were used here in early days for pack animals. He says they were imported from Asia by the government for carrying supplies to troops over the plains of Texas, but were sold to an enterprising citizen after the government had done with them, and this man brought them to Helena loaded with provisions, and the grand old ships of the desert sailed over many a mountain trail carrying gods where wagons could not go.

They were taken out to graze in the hills adjoining Helena, and one day Jim McNeil, a well-known character of those days, caught sight of one of the camels as he was coming in from a prospecting tour, mistook it for a moose, and shot it with his rifle. The herder was promptly to the rescue and made Jim put all the collateral he had with him as security for the animal.

Each camel was worth about $70, and in spite of the fact that McNeil did not know Montana had suddenly become a camel country, he had to pay full price for his big game. The herd was afterward taken to California, Mr. Cannon says, and has thrived and increased there.

Don'ts for Wives.

Don't disturb your husband while he is reading his morning or evening paper.

Don't ever tell a man he is good looking.

Don't ever tell a man he has pretty legs.

Don't put the morning paper at the bottom of the pile, and don't have more than a dozen different places for the button hook.

Don't impose upon your husband just because he is good enough to assist you a little in your housework.

Don't leave the stove handle in the red hot stove, and don't ask him to empty the ash hod. Draw a line on the ash hod.

Don't gather up all his receipts and notes that he has put carefully away on the sitting-room table and tuck them in the fire the moment his back is turned.

Don't monopolize every hook in the closet. Graciously tender him one nail.

Don't ask him where he has been the moment he enters the house.

Don't waste your breath in useless vituperation against his favorite chum.

Don't mend his hosiery with cotton having knots in it larger than a pea.

Don't scold him because he leaves ashes in his pipe.

Farm and Garden Notes.

Test the corn before planting.

Don't use an over-worked stallion.

There is profit to every corn-raiser in a special seed-patch.

Hens frequently have spurs after the first year, but not always.

Young fowls generally have small combs and of a fresher color.

Feed systematically and regularly every day both old and young.

A sharp, bright plow turns a clear furrow and saves oats and horseflesh.

The best flesh with fowls is secured by liberal feeding from the beginning.

Hens that are well fed will lay most of their eggs in the first and second year.

At the start chickens should be placed where they are to grow up and remain.

Put in a variety of crops. Do not depend on one or two either for food or exchange.

The Advantages of Conversation.

The most agreeable way of getting information is by conversation. If you can talk with a well informed person, who can clearly express his ideas on any subject in which you are interested, you can ask questions, you can have explanations, you can go over the subject until you thoroughly understand it, and searching out in this way, in the mind of another, a thing which you earnestly desire to know, you are more likely to remember it and to profit by it. This is why a competent teacher is better than any text book. Besides, talk inspires both the speaker and the listener—the one becomes more eager to know and the other more eager to communicate.

Manuring Bearing Apple Trees.

It is generally conceded that bearing apples trees need manure, says an Eastern fruit-grower. But if a tree that has been in blossoms are formed, its growth is liable to be so stimulated that it takes a year or two for it to get into bearing again. At this time of year it is easy to notice by the buds what apple trees will be in bearing this year. Manuring these cannot be a mistake, as fertilizer will mostly go to perfect the fruit, yet leaving energy enough in many kinds of apples to form the buds for a fruit crop the following year.

THE longest bridge in the world, it is asserted, is the Lion bridge near Sangang, in China. It extends five and one-fourth miles over an arm of the Yellow Sea, and is supported by 300 huge stone arches. The roadway is 70 feet above the water and is inclosed in an iron network. A marble lion 21 feet long rests on the crown of every pillar. The bridge was built at the command of the Emperor Kieng Long, who abdicated in 1796 on account of old age.

IT IS NOT length of days that can make evil revered, nor persistence in inconsistency that can give it the power or the claim of orderly precedent. Wrong, though its title deeds go back to the days of Sodom, is by nature a thing of yesterday; while the right of which we became conscious but an hour ago, is more ancient than the stars, and of the essence of heaven.

THE crabbing season at Crisfield has opened very auspiciously and more soft crabs have been caught within the past two weeks than was ever known before in the history of the industry. At least 1000 people are employed in catching crabs, and all of them are realizing a good comfortable living.

IF there is one thing upon the earth that mankind love and admire better than another, said an eminent man, it is a brave man; it is the man who dares to look the devil in the face and tell him that he is a devil.

SAMUEL HICKS, near the Court House,

Gives his Exclusive Attention to HORSE-SHOEING!

I have learned the business thoroughly and have given my study, and had much experience in the work of Horse-Shoeing. For this reason I think I am better prepared to do Horse-Shoeing than shops which do all kinds of Blacksmithing.

My system of Shoeing prevents CUTTING and FORGING and preserves the horses' feet.

My best recommendation is the universal satisfaction of my customers, and I have no hesitation in referring to any for whom I have done work.

My prices I guarantee to be as low as the lowest.

Horsemen! Come and see me, and I will save you trouble and expense.
