Mrs. Langtry Was Dainty.

A gentleman of varacity relates this story to me, says W. B. Hawkins, in the Detroit Free Press. He was going from Boston to New York by a train which was due at the metropolis at 7 A. M., but a wrecked freight train delayed it for nearly five hours about fifty miles out from Boston. There was no buffett on the train and, since the law of Connecticut forbade the sale of anything on Sunday, the passengers were unable to procure breakfast. The short stays at the stations made foraging impracticable, and appetite soon became the sole topic of conversation. Finally, at one station, where a stop of two minutes was made, the gentleman who tells this story managed to buy two pies and a number of sandwhiches. With these he set up business in one end of the car. He cut up the pies into eights and offered them at $500 a slice, payable in promises. The sandwiches he doled out watchfully, being careful that nobody should get more than one.

Mrs. Langtry occupied the state-room and her maid the berth next to it. The maid had already had her share of the food when she came to get some for the madame.

"Not much," said the tyrant who owned the edible earth; "if the madame wants breakfast she must come after it. This is a democratic eating house."

So Mrs. Langtry came daintily and seriously down the aisle.

"Aw," said she, "what hawve you to eat?"

"I have pie and——"

"Aw, my deah sir," said she, turning up her pretty nose, "pie at this time of day! It's too early for pie; and besides I cawn't eat pie anyway. What else hawve you?"

"I have ham sandwiches."

"My, my," and the pretty nose tilted still higher. "Ham sandwiches! why, it's altogether too late for ham sandwiches, and besides I cawn't eat ham, ye know. What else hawve you?"

"Madame," said the gentleman, "I have quail on toast, blue fish, sirloin steak, extra with mushrooms, stuffed canvas-back duck, potatoes au gratin, pate de fois gras, seven kinds of spring vegetables, ice cream, cakes, nuts, fromage de brie, coffee chocolate—in short, I have a complete bill of fare——"

Mrs. Langtry's face was beaming with joyful anticipation.

"But, madame," continued the hard-hearted restaurateur, "I have none of these things with me at the present moment."

The upshot of it was that Mrs. Langtry took two slices of dry bread and the extortioner tried to make her promise to give him a royalty of 10 per cent. on her gross receipts from her New York engagement, but finally compromised on a box at the theatre.

Death of William E. Perkins.

Mr. William E. Perkins, a member of the great importing firm of Young, Smith, Field & Co. of Philadelphia, died at his residence in that city on Wednesday last. Funeral services Saturday at 11 A. M. at the Church of the Incarnation, Broad and Jefferson Streets. Mr. Perkins is a native of Chestertown Kent county, Md., whither his remains will probably be taken for interment. He is a son of Dr. William Perkins and a nephew of E. F. Perkins Esq., of the Chestertown Bar and also of the late George W. F. Perkins. He has been connected with firm of Young, Smith, Field & Co. for many years and about two years ago was admitted to membership in it. He was on one of his semi-annual trips to Europe for the purchase of the season's goods when he was seized with that illness which proved fatal and was brought home only to die. Mr. Perkins was a gentleman, universally esteemed and a merchant of promise. His wife is a niece of Judge D. P. Davis of the Cecil Orphan's Court, and daughter of the late James L. Davis.—Democrat.

WHEREAS, Section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of Maryland makes it the duty of the Governor to order the publication in certain newspapers to be designated by him, of any Bill, or Bills, passed proposing any amendment to the said Constitution.

And whereas at the January session 1890 of the General Assembly of Maryland six separate Bills were passed proposing that number of amendments to the Constitution; which several amendments are described as follows:

Chapter 194 which, for convenience of description, I hereby designate as amendment number one; Chapter 195, designated as amendment number two; Chapter 242, designated as amendment number three; Chapter 255, designated as amendment number four; Chapter 362, designated as amendment number five; and Chapter 426, designated as amendment number six.

SECTION 17. To guard against hasty or partial legislation, and encroachments of the Legislative Department upon the co-ordinate, Executive and Judical departments, every bill which shall have passed the House of Delegates and the Senate, shall before it becomes a law, be presented to the Governor of the State; if he approve, he shall sign it; but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to the House in which it originated, which House shall enter the objections at large on its journal, and proceed to reconsider the bill; if after such reconsideration, three-fifths of the members elected to that House shall pass the bill, it shall be sent with the objections to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if passed by three-fifths of the members elected to that House, it shall become a law, but in all such cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each House respectively, if any bill shall not be returned by the governor within six days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he signed it; unless the General Assembly shall, by adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law, the Governor shall have power to disapprove of any item or items of any bills making appropriations of money, embracing distinct items, and the part or parts of the bill approved shall be the law, and item or items or appropriations disapproved shall be void unless repassed according to the rules or limitations prescribed for the passage of other bills over the executive veto.

SECTION 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing section hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall be at the next general election held in this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in article fourteen of the constitution of this State, and at the said general election the vote on said proposed amendment to the constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be written or printed the words "for the constitutional amendment," or "against the constitutional amendment" as the voter shall elect, and immediately after said election due return shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment, as directed by the said fourteenth article of the constitution.
