GORMAN IN KENT.

A Splendid Meeting Held in Chestertown—Wm. L. Marbury, Blair Lee, Alonzo Miles and Other Brilliant Speakers.

Firemen's Hall was packed with white men last Friday afternoon and evening at the Democratic rally. The Chestertown Cornet Band made good music.

Chairman Noland called the meeting to order, and Harry Davis, County Commissioner, was made presiding officer, with Messrs. William B. Usilton and Clifton L. Jarrell as secretaries. The vice-presidents were one from each district, as follows: First, Adam F. Huey; Second, Tilghman Shafer; Third, James S. Harris; Fourth, Thomas H. Topping; Fifth, Lawrence Stevens; Sixth, Joseph Leverton: Seventh, William Townsend.

After this selection the speaking began, the speakers being, in order, Emerson C. Harrington, Blair Lee, Edgar Allan Poe and Senator Arthur P. Gorman.

Gorman Arouses Enthusiasm.

Senator Gorman aroused the greatest enthusiasm among his hearers. Even the men who have traveled the State through with him crowded upon him at the close and congratulated him upon his pronounced success, and when he was introduced a vociferous reception was given him.

At one point in his speech it was interrupted by the loud squaling of a pig in the back alley. Mr. Gorman raised his voice; so did the pig. It was evidently a Republican pig and tried to break up the meeting. The pig squealed still louder, and Mr Gorman shouted. Then he said: "It is hard for even a farmer to argue with or talk against a squealing pig," and the crowd roared. The pig subsided and the speech was continued.

When Senator Blair Lee arose to speak somebody shouted from the audience, "You ought to be our next Governor!" Taking the tip as quick as lightning, but without displaying that he noticed the remark, he spoke so kindly, pleasantly and humorously and wound up with so splendid a talk for union of effort after passing through the party's court, the primary election, that he lined up the whole assemblage for the candidates.

What Mr. Gorman Said.

Among other things Senator Gorman said:

"That Maryland is more than abreast of her time, that she is in a most excellent condition and marching along in the front rank of progress, is due to a long continuance of Democratic control. Save for those four black years in which the control of the State reposed in other hands Maryland has progressed, prospered, developed and since 12 years ago, when our loved State was rescued from Republican rule, she has gone forward by leaps and bounds.

"Our State debt in figures is $3,700,000, but in our strong box there are securities of $1,500,000 of the Northern Central annuity, offsetting the visible debt and bringing it down to $2,200,000. There are also many bonds issued for building the State Penitentiary, improving the State House, building State insane asylums and the building of our glorious good roads through all sections of the State. The policy has been, in fact, to exact the direct tax mainly in such respects as are made mandatory by the Constitution of Maryland so long as the public is safe and solvent by the taking of income from other sources.

Talks of Taxes.

"Think, fellow-Democrats, of what weath for the State's legitimate expenses comes from the imposing of a proper tax upon automobiles, the collateral inheritance tax and the taxes upon the increases of stock of corporations. Think how careful the administrations have been in these respects. But think, too, the public schools are near and dear to the hearts of the people of Maryland and how we tax ourselves 16 cents on the $100 for the schools, as against the whole 23½ cents we pay as a direct tax. And more than this, I am full of confidence in that, if the Democratic party continues in control, ways and means will be found to reduce still further the State tax rate.

"As to our new roads, there has been some criticism as to slowness in constructing them. Remember that they have just gone through the experimental stage that all great enterprises undergo.

"I know that in four or five years from now many more miles of splendid road will have been built than we have constructed in the beginning, and I shall favor the use of local material and local labor. We want to give Maryland a road system unexcelled by that of any of her sister States.

Commends Wilson Bill.

"And now, notwithstanding the splendid record of the Democratic party the Republicans ask you to turn it out. They say it is shameful to pass the Wilson Law or any other measure to deprive 10,000 or 15,000 negroes of the right to vote and to dominate the white intelligence of our various sections. I was in the State Senate when the Wilson ballot law was passed and I was for it that it might result in preventing the ignorant African vote from controlling affairs against the wishes of white people where they were in the minority. I state sincerely and without fear that I hope some constitutional way may be found to deprive the negroes of the power to contravene the wishes of the real people of this State. That is one of the charges of the Republicans."

Wm. L. Marbury's address at night was one of the best ever heard in Kent. We have the address but other matters have crowded it out.

R. E. Lee Marshall dwelt upon the alleged unfitness of the Republican party to govern the State because of the negro voters in it. He declared that Goldsborough was the creature of bossism, while Gorman and his associates were named in an open primary, in which 90,000 white men voted.

Alonzo L. Miles, of Baltimore, also spoke, counseling adherence to the party standard and emphasizing the gravity of the negro as a political issue.
