PACIFIC A MODERN OCEAN.

At All Events It Is Very New to Men of Caucasian Antecedents.

It seems rather curious to recall the fact that very little more than 100 years ago the Pacific was regarded as a Spanish lake. That nation claimed it on the strength of Balboa's discovery in 1513 and insisted that it should be regarded as a mare clausum. This will bear comparison with the claim recently made to a like effect by the United States in regard to the northern part of the same ocean, called Behring sea.

When Sir Francis Drake circumnavigated the globe his sailing across these waters was seriously resented by Spain, which demanded restitution to her of the plunder which he took, but Queen Elizabeth made a haughty reply. Not long before the close of the last century the Spanish crown again began to make a fuss because its monopoly of the Pacific was infringed on. It ordered the commandant of San Francisco to seize the Columbia, the first vessel that carried the American flag around Cape Horn. In 1789 two Spanish men-of-war seized several English fur traders on the northwest coast, and war was very nearly the result.

It is odd that the Spaniards, though discoverers of new lands and waters, were among the poorest navigators of their time. After coming upon the Solomon islands they could not find them again, and they were lost for 150 years. The water supply of their galleons was not kept in casks, but in big earthen jars. As it was impossible to provide a sufficient supply for a six months' voyage on board of a ship carrying 400 or 500 people, they always took to sea great numbers of mats. Whenever it rained, the mats were spread to catch the drops, which were drained off into jars through split bamboos. The mortality from scurvy on long trips was frightful.

Cortez, after the conquest of Mexico, fitted out three small ships to sail to the Moluccas and re-enforce the Spaniards there. They were scattered by a tempest, and two of them were lost. One of these is imagined to have been the strange vessel which was wrecked on the rocks of Hawaii at about the same time as nearly as can be reckoned. According to tradition, only the captain and his sister were saved. The natives received them kindly and gave them food. They intermarried with the Hawaiians and became the progenitors of certain well known families of chiefs.

In early times the control of land on the Hawaiian Islands was held by the ruling chiefs, who reserved what portions they pleased for their own use and divided the rest among the leading men subject to them. The position of the latter was analogous to that of the barons of European feudalism. They furnished supplies to their sovereign and in case of war were expected to take the field with what fighting men their estates could furnish. These barons held almost despotic sway over their domains, apportioning the territory which they controlled among their followers, according to the whim of the moment or the demands of the policy. Every time a new chief came into power there was a fresh distribution of lands. Thus the country was always full of people who were dispossessed and homeless. Kamehameha III overturned this system by granting to his people a bill of rights which made their tenure of the soil permanent.—Washington Star.

Punishment In Persia.

Among the Persians the usual mode of punishment is the bastinado, from which men of the highest rank are not exempt. It is inflicted with very great severity, frequently so as to render the sufferer almost a cripple for life. The victim is thrown upon his face, each foot is passed through a loop of strong cord attached to a pole, which is raised horizontally by men, who, twisting it round, tighten the ropes and render the feet immovable. Two executioners then strike the sole alternately with switches of the pomegranite tree well steeped in water to render them supple. A store of these switches is generally ready for use in the pond which adjoins the courtyards of the houses of the great. The punishment frequently lasts for an hour or until the unfortunate victim faints from pain.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Curiosities About Ireland's Emblem.

The shamrock, Ireland's floral emblem, is a trefoil or three leaf plant much resembling our white clover, but of the oxalis genus of grasses. While St. Patrick was preaching to the pagans of the Emerald Isle in the year 433 he attempted to explain the "trinity in unity," but his hearers could not understand it. At last he plucked a trefoil (shamrock) and said, "Is it not as possible for the Father, Son and Holy Ghost to be one as it is for those three leaves to grow upon a single stalk?" The pagan Irish were convinced and soon afterward adopted the shamrock as their national emblem.—Philadelphia Press.

Dealing With An Honest Man.

"Here's your fare," said a gentleman to a Finnish peasant who had driven him for three hours through the woods, and he handed him four shillings.

"No, sir, that's double my fare," he replied, returning half the money.

And when he was told he might keep it for his honesty he slightly nodded his thanks with the dignity of one of nature's gentlemen.—"Russian Characteristics."

No Advice About Kissing.

A prominent publication, in which a department is given to answering questions sent by letter, has been obliged to request young women not to send inquiries concerning when, where and whom to kiss. "Any girl needing advice on this subject would, we are sure, not be guided by any advice of ours."

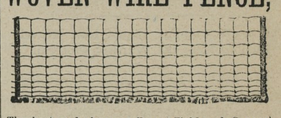
WOVEN WIRE FENCE,



The best and cheapest Farm, Field and General Purpose Fence on Earth. Over 30 miles sold in Queen Anne's county in two months. It is now being extensively used in Druid Hill Park, Baltimore, and is highly recommended. C. H. Latrobe, Esq.: Will last a lifetime, and only 3 posts to the one hundred feet.

ITS ADVANTAGES:

Being a SELF-REGULATING it is always ready for business, slacks up for 30° below as cheerfully as it takes a new grip for 90° in the shade, gently, but firmly, persuades a runaway team to reconsider its action. An unruly bull is as safe as a canary in its cage; it saith unto the festive hog, "thus far shalt thou go." The fierce wind and drifting snow pass by and it heeds them not. There is no terror in the locomotive spark. The trespasser is not led into temptation, and the rail stealer's "occupation is gone." The hired man and the lagging tramp, alike scorn its proffered shade. Like the model housewife, when well-supported, it is always neat and tidy. ITS ONE FAILING is the continual tugging at the end posts. The requisite strain of several tons needs thorough bracing and anchoring of these posts. But forewarned is forearmed.

COMPARATIVE COSTS.

Remember the first cost does not always determine the cheapness of an article. One dollar's worth of barbed wire has been known to save a man from paying taxes on a thousand dollars worth of horseflesh. An inefficient fence often seem to fail when just needed most. A short lived fence, or one that needs constant care, will be dear at half the price of ours. While there are some good wire fences on the market besides the Coiled Spring, they are entirely lacking in elasticity which we consider the most important feature of our fence. We therefore compare ours with post and board fence. This is the favorite of all breeders of fine stock who have not yet become acquainted with the merits of our fence. We asked one hundred users of our fence to give an estimate of its value compared with this style. Three out of a hundred place ours on a par with the board, while ninety-seven rated it from twenty five to several hundred per cent. better. In most cases our fence can be furnished complete at 25 per cent. less than one made of boards and posts.
