Potatoes Should Be Making Thrifty Growth

Timely Cultivation Will Kill Weeds While Spraying Will Prevent Disease.

T. H. WHITE.
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

If potato seed is covered with a plow, the land will be left in a rigid condition. A week or two after planting, these ridges should be levelled down with a board or clod crusher. Just as the plants appear a smoothing harrow should be used to level the ground and kill the weeds. Very often, especially in late crops, it is not necessary to do any hand hoeing if this harrowing is thorough. Cultivation can be done with an ordinary five shoveled cultivator. Small shovels can be used the first time, stirring the soil deeply. At the last cultivation a broad shovel behind will work about the right amount of earth up to the hills.

Spraying to keep off diseases and insects is an important part of potato growing. For insects and diseases affecting the tops Bordeaux Mixture with either Paris Green or Bordeaux is mostly used. To make Bordeaux Mixture dissolve five pounds of copper sulphate in twenty-five gallons of water, slake also five pounds of good stone lime in the same amount of water. Pour both together into the spray barrel. To this may be added eight ounces of Paris Green or three pounds of Arsenate of Lead which will kill the insects.

The spraying should be done thoroughly every ten days until the vines begin to mature. When the spraying is done mechanically the machine should, if necessary, be driven over the patch several times, or until all the foliage is protected with a coating of spray material.

You will receive a certificate showing the amount of work done in the summer school. This certificate entitles you to due credit for College work done, and to credit on your teachers certificate.

TAKING A BATH IN THE DIRT.

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dusting a flock of hens by hand to get rid of lice is a laborious and tedious task and is none too efficient unless carefully done. Dig up a little patch of ground about four feet square in front of your poultry house and let your hens dust themselves. They will enjoy the work very much and probably will do a much better job than you can do.

SOY BEANS MAKE VALUABLE MARYLAND CROP.

Improve the Soil and Yield Hay Of High Feeding Quality.

N. E. SCHMITZ,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Soy beans make a valuable general crop to grow on the average Maryland farm since they both benefit the soil and give a hay of high feeding value, practically equal to alfalfa. They are well adapted to our climate and to most of our soils good varieties that will mature in any section of the State are found on the market.

The soil should be in the same condition and be prepared in the same manner for soy beans as for corn, except that soy beans may be grown in poorer soils than those on which corn can be profitably grown. Soy beans will not grow in very poor sandy land lacking humus as well as cow peas will. On the other hand, soy beans are better suited than are cow peas to the clay soils throughout the State west of the Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland. The best soil for them is a clay loam.

Soy beans may be planted from the time corn planting is finished until the middle of July, depending upon the location and what the crop is grown for. In general, the best time is from June 1st to 20th. When a crop of hay is desired, the method of seeding is the same as with cow peas or wheat,—by using the drill. The rate of seeding for hay is about 1½ bushels per acre.

In growing soy beans for seed, they should be planted in rows 24 to 36 inches apart to allow for cultivation as with corn. For this about one-third to one-half bushel of seed per acre is required. The planting may be done with a regular corn planter, or wheat drill by stopping the proper seed holes.

Few soils in Maryland are naturally inoculated for soy beans. When they are being grown for the first time, inoculation should be provided for by securing soil from a field in which soy beans have been grown and working into the soil at the rate of three to four hundred pounds per acre.

The principal advantages of soy beans over cow peas are their upright growth, their high and certain seed yields, from 15 to 35 bushels per acre, less trouble in curing for hay and better hay, and uniform maturing of seed, which makes harvesting for seed a simple operation. Where a fair growth has been made, binding with the wheat binder and shocking the same as wheat is the simplest and best way of harvesting. When well shocked, the bean may remain in the field all winter without much injury from the weather. The threshing is very simple, an ordinary wheat thresher will do the work very effectively, when the cylinder speed is reduced to 500 or 600 revolutions per minute, but the separator speed must be maintained at the normal rate as for wheat.
