
At the Service of the Nation

With the whole nation an armed camp, the toll lines of the Bell System are the message bearers of the country's vast war organization.

The Bell telephone message traverses the continent in less than a second. Important military points and industrial centers hundreds of miles apart are in close touch with each other and with Washington by telephone. More than three million miles of toll wire in the Bell System are the highways over which the messages pass.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

GOBLIN CURES GEORGE.

"A little Boy named George," said Daddy, "was very ill. He had not told his Mother he felt Sick and wretched because he was afraid she might give him some horrid Medicine, so he went to Bed without saying a word.

"He felt as though he had been in Bed for hours and as if he would never go to sleep when suddenly a little Goblin hopped on his window sill, peeped around the curtain, and said:

"'Good Evening. May I come in?'

"'Who are you?' asked George.

"'I am the Goblin who looks after little Sick Boys—when they have your kind of sickness. The only trouble is that I can't see half the little Boys I want to—for I can only go at nighttime when they're sleeping, and there isn't time for my rounds. I do believe I shall have to get some Assistant Workers,' and the Goblin looked puzzled.

"'You're a Goblin?' gasped George.

"'To be sure,' said the Goblin.

"'Why,' continued George, 'I thought they were terrible looking creatures.'

"'Ha, ha,' laughed the Goblin. 'You make just the same mistake that so many Boys and Girls do. You see I am not terrible at all. In fact I am very nice and I cure little Boys and Girls of their pains.'

"'Are you a Doctor Goblin, then?' asked George.

"'No,' smiled the Goblin. 'Doctors and I really need have nothing to do with each other. Doctors should only be called in when little Girls and Boys are really, really Sick and not when they're only pretending.'

"Ha, ha!" Laughed the Goblin.

"'I'm not pretending,' said George, almost in tears. 'I feel just as sick as can be.'

"'Nothing to brag about, is it?' asked the Goblin.

"'No-o,' said George.

"'And why are you Sick?' asked the Goblin.

"'I don't know,' said George. For surely, he thought to himself, the Goblin couldn't know what he had been doing in the daytime—and George did know, perfectly well, why he was Sick.

"'Did you enjoy those candies?' asked the Goblin, and George looked quite uneasy.

"'I don't know,' said George.

"'I suppose it is hard to make up your mind now whether you liked them or not—since they have made you Sick.'

"Oh dear, oh dear,' cried George, who had thought he was going to have fun with the Goblin, and he hid his head under the bed clothes in shame.

"'You see,' continued the Goblin, 'you were getting into the habit of really making a little Piggie of yourself! You were getting too fat and lazy. You didn't like to play Ball with the Boys nearly so much as you once did. Isn't that true?' And George, who had stuck his head out of the bed clothes again, nodded.

"'And some of the Boys were beginning to call you "Rolly Polly George," weren't they? And they were telling you that soon you'd be able to join the Circus as the Fat Boy? It wasn't very kind of them perhaps, but it was true, eh?' And the Goblin grinned.

"'Yes,' was all George could say.

"'And last of all, when you ate that whole layer of chocolates in the box that was hidden in the pantry, you thought you were having a great feast. Until—until—until—'

"'Oh I know,' said George. 'I felt dreadfully Sick—but I'm better now. Don't scold me any more, please.'

"'I won't,' said the Goblin. 'I visit little Boys and Girls like you because I know you don't want to get Sick—and half the time you don't know that so many sweeties are very, very bad for you—and that you'll grow fat and lazy and no one will care for you when it comes play time.'

"'I'll be good—and not a Piggie any more!' said George. 'I did feel so Sick—and I don't want to be the Fat Boy in the Circus. I want to stay Home and play with my Friends!'

"'And you will!' said the Goblin. 'Tomorrow morning you'll be all right—but first of all—tonight we're going to take you for a sail in our airboat just to show you that Goblins are really nice creatures after all!'

"And several weeks later, George was so well and so strong and quick in the Games that he was made Captain of his Baseball Team!"

No Grounds for This.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

CROSS GEESE.

"Mrs. Goose," said Daddy, "was sitting on some Eggs. She was waiting for the little Geese to break through and come peeping out into the Barnyard.

"'I would like to get a cool Drink of Water from the Stream,' said Mrs. Goose. 'Whatever shall I do? I can't leave these Eggs! And somehow, I am very hot and my Throat is very dry.'

"'Go along and get your Drink from the Stream,' said her husband, Mr. Gander, for he was very devoted to Mrs. Goose.

"'Will you look after these fine Eggs then?' said Mrs. Goose.

"'Indeed I will,' said Mr. Gander proudly.

"Now Mrs. Goose and Mr. Gander were very fond of each other but they did not have any Friends in the Barnyard. They were cross to all the other Animals and no matter if they were treated just as kindly as could be, they were extremely disagreeable.

"Mrs. Goose had waddled along on her flat, queer Feet to the Stream. She was having a fine time—but Mr. Gander, back in the Barnyard was as angry as could be!

"Mr. Gander was a very fine-looking Goose. He was white but his wings were brown. Mrs. Goose was entirely white.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Gander,' said Mr. Peacock, as he walked through the Barnyard. 'Are you keeping House? Where is your Wife?'

"'It's not your affair whether I am keeping House or not, and I won't tell you where my Wife is. You're an inquisitive old Bird—that's what you are.'

"And Mr. Gander beat poor Mr. Peacock with his wings, and gave him a horrid twig with his sharp beak.

"'There!' he said, 'I hope that will teach you a lesson not to come meddling in other Folks' business.'

"'It will teach me,' wailed Mr. Peacock, 'never to speak to you again. I didn't believe you could be as cross as the other Animals said you were, I just thought I'd be friendly and come and call—and invite you to call on us some day.'

"'All you wanted,' said Mr. Gander, 'was to steal the Eggs!'

"'You old silly Gander,' said Mr. Peacock. 'As if I wanted a lot of little Geese coming out of their shells! But if you think that way, I'll leave you. And this I will say: That now I see why you all belong to the Goose family—for not only are you very cross but you're very, very silly! Good afternoon,' and Mr. Peacock, feeling very hurt from the shaking Mr. Gander had given him, strutted off.

"Pretty soon Mrs. Goose came back from the Stream. 'Well, my dear,' she said, 'I had a fine Drink and I went in wading too!'

"And then she noticed that Mr. Gander was looking angry and very much ruffled.

"'What has happened, Mr. Gander? You look as if you had been in a fight.'

"'Well, I gave that old Peacock fellow a good piece of my mind,' he said, 'and not only that—I gave him a bite with my beak and a thoroughly good spanking with my wings. He won't come here again.'

"'Good!' said Mrs. Goose. 'I do hate Visitors.'

"'And how are the Eggs?' she added.

"'Safe,' said Mr. Gander.

"The very next day the finest set of Geese came out of their shells and waddled after their Mother wherever she went. Mr. Gander kept very busy looking for food for the Brood.

"But every single one of the Geese were brought up to be cross and to hate all the other Animals in the Barnyard. They played by themselves or took walks with their Mother and Daddy.

"Sometimes they would fly around for exercise and then their Mother and Daddy would admire them—for they were all the most beautiful cream-colored Geese you can imagine and their wings were brown.

"Of course their Feet were ugly—but the Mother and Daddy never noticed that. And why should they? For they had just the same kind of Feet!

"But Mr. Peacock never called on Mr. Gander again—and all over the Barnyard Mrs. Goose, Mr. Gander and the little Geese were known as 'that cross Goose Family!'"

MAKING BALLOONS FOR THE GOVERNMENT

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company Also Furnish Country With 21 Per Cent of All Tires Used

As makers of speed records, balloons have never attracted any great notice. But in Akron the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. is manufacturing immense dirigibles at a cost of $50,000 each, which attain a speed of 42 miles a hour.

These dirigibles are being built for the U. S. Government for war purposes and will be used largely in coast patrol work. They are fitted up with a special Curtiss motor. About three large balloons are being turned out daily at the Goodyear plant and production will ultimately be brought up to six a day.

Some 2,000 men and women are employed in the balloon department alone. The company has purchased a large field near the plant, where daily tests of the balloons are made.

In addition to these immense dirigibles the company builds two smaller balloons for observation purposes, one known as the "Kite" and the other as the "Free Balloon".

This is not the only form of war work being done by the Goodyear company. More than 3,000 gas masks are being turned out daily at the plant there. The company is also a large manufacturer of heavy tires for army trucks.

At the start of this week Goodyear was more than 500,000 tires behind orders. Inasmuch as the company is working at capacity and turning out 20,000 tires a day, this means anywhere from two and one-half to three months behind orders.

Sales of Goodyear for the six months ended May 1, the first half of the fiscal year, were in excess of $66,000,000. This was an increase of about 40 per cent over the business for the same period in the previous year.

Inasmuch as the company did a business in 1917 of $111,000,000, a continuance of this rate of increased business over the closing six months will mean a business for the full fiscal year of something like $155,000,000. On this basis, Goodyear is the second largest manufacturer of rubber goods in the world, its business being exceeded only by that of the United States Rubber Co.

About 15 per cent of the company's business is war business. A year ago the war business amounted to less than 1 per cent of the total. On the dollar basis, Goodyear's war business is in excess of $23,000,000.

Most of the company's business is on the cost plus basis.

Another favorable feature is the fact that the company is well supplied with crude rubber. Its requirements in this line are taken care of for at least six months to come.

This company, as well as others, is having great trouble securing labor. Its Akron factories now employ 3,000 women and within sixty days there will be at least 5,000. A year ago the total number of women on the payroll was slightly over 300.

War taxes will cost Goodyear about $3,000,000 a year. The company recently offered its customers about $15,000,000 of new preferred stock at par. More than $8,000,000 has already been subcribed for.

The Continental Company, one of Maryland's strongest financial and investment institutions, whose advertisement is appearing in this issue, is offering the newly issued second preferred stock to the public and will send full particulars on request.

Examinations will also be conducted by the College Entrance Examination Board, Monday-Saturday, June 17-22, in Gilman Hall, beginning at 9 a. m. These examinations are accepted by the University.

APPLICATIONS FOR SCHOLARSHIPS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF ENGINEERING, established under the provisions of the Laws of Maryland, Chapter 90, 1912, will now be received.
