BREEDING WORK MARES YIELDS GOOD PROFIT

According to experts of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry of the United States Department of Agriculture, the least profit that a farmer can make from a mare comes from breeding mares that earn their feed by furnishing farm horse power. An additional source of revenue lies in breeding a mare to a good, thoroughbred stallion and selling the colts. A good mare, bred to a good sire, not only will do her farm work but will raise several hundred dollars' worth of colts.

To aid in the work of making farm mares produce more revenue for their owners, the Maryland Breeding Bureau, which is offering stallions free of all cost to farmers who will properly care for them, has suggested the following points as worth observing:

If a good, registered stallion is available, pure-bred mares of the same breed will give best results. It costs no more to raise a pure-bred colt than it does a grade—and they sell for better prices.

Try for uniformity in mares. The colts of mares of a type, bred to a good sire, can often be sold as pairs, in which form they nearly always sell at a premium.

Watch for indications of good breeding in your mares. Femininity of expression, style, good disposition, clean flat bone, concave open feet, strong constitutions, good proportions, deep roomy barrel, width across hips and well-developed vulva and teats are to be desired.

Beware breeding unsound mares, or sound mares to an unsound stallion.

Take good care of your mares and they will take good care of your bank account.

Breeding the working mares places a double duty on them and they should be robust animals properly conformed and must be given good care and treatment.

By saving the feed bills (good mares will work them out) and getting hundreds of dollars profits from colts, says an expert of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, farmers can well afford to pay more for such mares, feed them more heavily and give them that special attention which money-makers deserve.

The small farmer can get most excellent results from such a plan, because he usually works his own teams and in a position to watch them more closely and see that they are not ill-treated.

Maryland in recent years has not given the subject of horse breeding the attention it deserves. Today, with all the great possibilities before them Maryland farmers are beginning to realize what profit there is in breeding the kind of stock which has the heart, the stamina, the wind and the robust bodies needed.

Poultry raisers have found there is less profit in raising the dung hill grade of fowls than in raising the pure strains. Farmers have discovered there is no more expense but better profits in raising thoroughbred horses, or horses having a good blood strain.

The Maryland Breeding Bureau, through this paper, will be glad to answer all inquiries concerning horse breeding and the care and management of stallions and of mares and colts. Address all questions to the editor of this paper who will forward them. The answers will be printed in an early number of this paper.

She Did.

She was a four-flusher, particularly as to her abilities in various sports. "Do you golf?" he asked.

"Oh, I love golf," she answered. "I play at least 36 holes twice a week."

"And how about tennis?"

"I won the woman's championship in our state."

"And do you swim?"

"The best I ever did was a half mile straight away," she replied.

Somewhat fatigued he changed to literature. "And how do you like Kipling?" he asked.

"I kipped an hour only yesterday," was her unblushing reply.—Journal of the American Medical Association.

Large Offer for Map Haig Used.

Offers up to $1,750 have been received for the map used by Sir Douglas Haig in the direction of the British armies on the western front October 8 and three following days, and sent to the lord provost of Glasgow's secretary for disposal in aid of the king's fund for disabled officers and men. The map eventually will be put up at auction.

More Uses for Electricity.

As might be expected, the use of wire resistances in fabrics to give electric heating has suggested a great variety of applications. Besides the electric pad as a substitute for the hot water bottle these devices include electrically heated bath robes, sweating robes, heating bags, rugs, foot warmers, ear warmers, motorman's gloves and even an electric blanket for the old and rheumatic horse. Electric current may be taken from lighting circuits or special batteries.

BROUGHT BOY TO HIS DAD

Red Cross Workers Set Out to Find the Young Soldier and of Course They Succeeded.

Dad was from some little town near Cincinnati. He had come all the way to Indianapolis to see his boy, his only son who had been away from home for four years. The boy was in the army and was being transferred. He was to be in Indianapolis on Sunday and wired his father to meet him. Somehow, father and son missed connection in the union station. Dad decided to appeal to the women of the Red Cross canteen booth.

"I was to meet him here," dad said. "He hasn't shown up. I know he's in Indianapolis somewhere."

The canteeners got busy. Dad and his boy had to be brought together. First the canteeners summoned the military police. They got a description of son. The M. P.'s started out to find him. The canteeners also started scouts. They visited every downtown corner and haunt of the soldiers. An hour later the canteeners looked up toward the station door. In came dad and his boy—arm in arm.

"I did just as you told me," the father said. "You told me to go uptown and stand on that corner. You said he'd pass there, and pretty soon he did. The military police kept coming by to ask if I had a trail of him. And then he came. My, but he was glad to see me!"

Of course he was glad to see him. The boy's smile told how glad he was to see his dad.—Indianapolis News.

When People Wait

Waiting is one of the most profitless things in the world, and waiting at the telephone is almost like sitting still with your eyes closed — the time seems so much longer.

To busy people a short wait seems magnified and correspondingly unprofitable. You can help to lessen such waits for those who call you by answering your telephone promptly, and at the same time protect yourself against lost calls — for the other person often "hangs up."
