Song Of The People

We are the People! We, who broke
In ages past the stubborn yoke
Of Aryan kings, that fell upon
The painted walls of Babylon.

On Freedom's sacrificial fire
We offered Ninevah and Tyre.
Proud ancient temples, built to stand
For tyrant gods, have felt our hand,
And crumble now in dust that speaks
The vengeance man for bondage wrecks.

Rome, fallen, witnesses our might
To surge toward liberty and light,
And down the ages we have slain
The hope of every monarch vain
With power. Pharaoh and Caesar fell,
And Alexander. Lo! the knell
Of tyranny for kings to heed
Rank long ago at Ruunymede,
And St. Helena stands to show
The way that lustful emperors go.

Oh, blind, vainglorious, little Powers
Who dared to match your strength with ours,
Could you not see in centuries done
The way that all your mates have run?

Did you not know our mighty cause
Is justice, liberty and laws
Of brotherhood, to make earth whole?
One King is ours, one hope, one goal!

We are the People! None prevail
With us! God's Freedom is our Grail!

BEER STILL BEING SOLD

War-time Prohobition Law Abolishes Whiskey—Some Saloons Still Selling Beer

Two and three-quarter per cent beer is on tap throughout the land today where there are no state dry laws, as a result of Attorney-General Palmer's announcement that no arrests would be made pending court decisions.

The following shows how the law is being observed in the different cities:

Philadelphia—Large hotel bars sell soft drinks, and many saloons sell beer and light wines. Members of Retail Liquor Dealers Association close their bars.

New York—Majority of saloons sell beer. Several of large hotels say they will never reopen bars.

Chicago—Brewers decided to quit business pending presidential notice of completed demobilization.

St. Louis—Thirteen breweries continue making 2.75 per cent beer. Majority of saloons open.

Pittsburg—Non-intoxicating brew on tap.

New Haven—Liquor dealers decide to test law, choosing one of number to violate regulations.

Baltimore—Proprietors of hotels and cafes sell beer.
