CHURCH NOTES

After quarreling for several years over Rev. John McElmoyle, a deposed pastor, the members of the Elkton Presbyterian Church, at a meeting held this week bridged the differences.

For the use of the rector of Old Wye Parish, the Easton Diocese last week received $11,700, when Henry J. Waters, Chancellor of the Diocese, turned over that amount to Judge W. H. Adkins, treasurer of the Diocesan trust funds. This sum of money is a bequest of the late Miss Sue Williams, of the "Hermitage," Queen Anne's Co., and was left to the diocese with the expressed hope that the income from it would be paid over to Wye Parish for the use of the rector. Old Wye Parish includes St. Luke's Church, of Queenstown, and Old Wye Church, of Wye Mills.

League Of Women Voters

Maryland has a law on its books requiring a report to the Department of Health of the birth of every child. The League of Women Voters, under its Child Welfare Department, has been asked to assist in having 1000 mothers ask for the registration of their children under five years of age. This is preparation for the Child Hygiene Bureau, which opens this fall under Dr. J. H. Mason Knox. The Child Hygiene Bill was passed at the last Legislature, following the federal passage of the Sheppard-Towner Bill. Kent was fortunate in having its representatives endorse the Hygiene Bill. The League is an organization of women who wish to make their votes count for the public good and its slogan is "Every woman an intelligent voter. It is non-partisan and stands for education, registration, legislation.

Didn't Like The Editor's News

The editor of a country newspaper received the following letter:

Dear Sir—I am a-writing a letter to complain about a piece i seen in yore paper a-friday which hit says Wm. Shehan has purchased a work mule. Now i haint nuthing agin uncle will Shehan him and me bein nabers fore yeres and still frenly accounter i can see right down in his yard and I aint never ketched him in no devilment not to mont to nuthing.

But i would like fer to know Mr. editor, how come you print about him a-buying of a plow mule and not say the same about nobody else? And haint the man what sold the mule got a right to have his name in the paper same as him at bought? Fact is the mule what Uncle Will bought come outen my shed whar he ben chawin up good corn and roughnes and not a doin no work and it look like me a gittin shed of him is bigger news than him a-buyin him.

And moren that Mr. Editor i was down south a-tuesday to landrum and i buyed me a mule and brung him right thru Tyron in broad day light in plain sight of yore orfis winder, and what you aid about hit Nary word? No Sir. Nary word. And my mule a heap pearter an what uncle Wills is, and done broke half my south land. And i wants you to print it abouten my mule. Taint no reason as fur as i ken see why i aint as prominent as Uncle Will Shihan, me a-livin a-top of a hill and him a-living in a holler. And if you can't print it about me a-buyin a mule same as what you said abouten him, you can stopa-sending me yere paper.
