CIRCUIT COURT NEXT WEEK

The October term of the Kent Circuit Court will begin next Monday. The prospect is for a short term as there is very little business on the docket. In fact it is more than likely that the judges may adjourn court to December after drawing the jury and calling the docket on Monday morning.

BIG BUSINESS DEAL

An $18,500 business deal was closed on Tuesday last in Chestertown. The old reliable firm of R. F. Parks & Son sold its entire big stock of goods for the above sum of money to the Philadelphia Undersellers. The latter by advertisement will sell some great bargains from the R. F. Parks & Son store. We are sorry to see this reliable firm close out its mercantile business as they will be missed by both the farming community and town people.

The senior member, R. F. Parks, will take things easy for a time but we know he cannot remain idle. The junior member, Claude F. Parks, will continue in the fertilizer, seed, etc., business, and he is a hustler, too.

Gasolineless Sundays Over.

Fuel Administrator Garfield on Friday lifted the ban on gasolineless Sundays, effective at once. He says that 1,000,000 barrels of gasoline was saved for military use by the people not using their cars and boats on Sunday.

AIR SHIPS IN KENT

Quite a little excitement was occasioned in Chestertown Tuesday morning by the arrival of two air ships here. Everybody was out looking at the graceful fliers. After flying circling above the town one of the machines piloted by Lieut. Schofield landed at the Fair Grounds and the other piloted by Lieut. Daniels landed in the field of J. T. Dixon above Washington College. They made the fly from Aberdeen to Chestertown in just seventeen minutes.

After spending several hours here and repairing one machine they left for their home at Aberdeen. Lieut. Schofield gave a wonderful exhibition in the air before leaving. Such somersaults, dives and turnings he made in the air as to electrify the hundreds who gazed in awe at him. Come again gentlemen and see Kent folks.

THE "FLU" EPIDEMIC

The epidemic of "Flu" which has swept over this entire country for the past two weeks, is, it is believed, on the wane and a brighter outlook is in sight.

The epidemic is without parallel in the history of this country. Death has stalked about in spite of medical skill—the toll in many sections having been record-breakers.

The young seem to have been the victims of the deadly scourge. Men prominent in the business and professional world have fallen victims and every human agency seems to have been powerless to stay the deadly onslaught, upon human lives. Many harrowing tales of suffering in families have come out, where several entire families have been prostrated with the malady, and in some cases have been without attention for days.

Though the death rate remains high in some sections, the fight against the influenza scourge is at last beginning to tell.

But this is not the time for undue optimism. We cannot afford to relax a single precaution. Indeed, preventive and curative measures must be increased instead of lessened. The ban on public assemblages is to remain inflexible as ever.

It is still imperative to avoid the crowds, poorly ventilated places and contact with influenza sufferers. Scrupulous cleanliness of home and person, frequent sprays and gargles with antiseptics and care as to rest and diet are still the only insurance against the disease which is carrying off hundreds every day.

The health authorities were much amused at reports that the present epidemic of influenza is an outbreak of the pneumonic plague, which ravaged Manchuria and the East five years ago and killed thousands of persons.

The authorities declare that the present epidemic has little in common with the pneumonic plague and that the epidemic in this country is merely an outbreak of the disease which struck Russia, then Germany, then Spain, the Allied countries and then the United States. They emphasize again the fact that it spread in the usual way—through travel, and that persons who try to make the situation worse than it is are either pro-Germans who want to take advantage of the epidemic to interfere with war work as much as possible or are naturally "scary."

They say the effort to make it appear that the outbreak is due to the spread of germs in this country by Germans should be stamped as absurd. Many persons profess to have inside information about "just how the Germans spread the disease in this country." No health official, either national, State or city, can be found who will even admit that it is likely that the Germans had anything more to do with spreading the disease here than that they were hard hit by it and thousands of persons died of it in Germany a few months ago.

Big Apple Crops Being Harvested

W. Mason Shehan, Easton, harvested a big crop of apples from his Richland Orchard. This orchard is principally planted out in peach trees, but from the few apple trees he secured 400 large carriers of perfect Stayman Winesaps. The picking was done by ladies of Easton.

The big Cover orchards, on the St. Michaels Freshetts farm near Easton, are now engaging the attention of the Cover Company. They have about four cars of Ben Davis apples and will have several more. Other varieties are coming on, so that the picking and packing will go on until late in November. Local labor is being largely utilized in picking.

General Seth, from his Orchard Knob orchard, also picked about 500 carriers of fine apples.
