Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, ofttimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

SAVED BY A BET.

Peculiar Instance of the Power of Mind Over Matter.

The power of the human will over the weakness of the human body has seldom been more curiously exemplified than in the following instance: One of the bravest officers in Lord Wellesley's peninsular army was Colonel Hay, who, however, was as notorious for his love of gambling and betting as for his deeds of daring. At Salamanca he was struck down by a bullet and lay upon the field apparently lifeless. Two brother officers coming up, one of them exclaimed:

"Poor Hay! He's gone at last!"

He had scarcely uttered the words when a faint voice came up from the ground:

"I'll lay you a level hundred he's not."

The colonel had opened his eyes, but they looked glassy with death, and it seemed but a case of minutes.

"Enter it," he went on, "and you, Captain Marston," addressing the second officer, "be witness."

Then, quite overcome, his eyelids dropped again, and he lay motionless. Major Windsor, the one with whom the bet was made, at once had the colonel conveyed to the hospital. It was found to be a very grave case, and after the patient had been restored to consciousness by means of restoratives the doctor told him there was a ball in his back which could only be extracted by a very severe operation.

"But I must warn you," added the surgeon, "that you will very probably die under it."

"If anybody will bet me £50 on the event, I'll consent," said the colonel. "Send for Windsor, and I'll endeavor to persuade him to make it double or quits."

The major was sent for and agreed to the terms.

"Now saw away with you," cried the colonel. "I won't die."

The operation was at once commenced, and the gallant gambler passed triumphantly through the ordeal, while the major, who was a generous fellow, paid the bet with the utmost satisfaction.

"I tell you," Colonel Hay used to say when relating the story, "but for that bet I should be a dead man now. It was only my determination to win that kept me alive."—Pearson's Weekly.

GETTING BREAKFAST.

Experience That Taught a Man to Respect Woman's Ability.

"Ever try to get your own breakfasts?" asked the man whose wife is away. "No? Well, it's a most valuable education in the art of holding more than one thing in the mind at a time. I can understand after a week of it how women get to be expert in matters of detail.

"We men go through life blundering along first at one thing and then at another, with the idea that what we are doing at the moment should be finished before anything else is taken up. You can't get breakfast on that principle. Women instinctively know how to run half a dozen things at once. When they have the coffee on the stove and the toast is browning and the eggs cooking they can put the finishing touches on the setting of the table with a light and cheerful heart. At the psychological moment the coffee will be whisked off, the toast extracted and the eggs removed to a place where further application of heat is impossible. It's a wonder to me how they do it.

"A man if he essays to make coffee must devote his whole attention to the operation; likewise with everything else. If he doesn't there'll be trouble. He isn't a success in a double act, and when the question is one of a triple or a quadruple act he might as well throw up his hands. At least," he concluded, with a shade of pride in his tone, "till he's got the hang of it."

"So you consider yourself qualified now, do you?" his friend inquired, with mock seriousness.

"If a succession of spoiled meals qualifies me," the first speaker rejoined, "I'm it."—New York Press.

Improving the Breed.

Shortly after a new administration took hold of a well known southern railroad a great number of claims were preferred against the company on account of horses and cattle being killed along the line in Kentucky. To make matters worse, it appeared that every animal killed, however worthless it may have been before the accident, invariably figured in the claims subsequently presented as being of the best blood in Kentucky. One day in conversation with one of the road's attorneys the president became very much excited in referring to the situation. "Do you know," he exclaimed, bringing down his fist on the desk by way of emphasis, "I have reached the conclusion that nothing in Kentucky so improves live stock as crossing it with a locomotive."—Montreal Star.

English Marriages.

Every year from 800 to 1,200 couples go to England from the continent, mostly from Germany, to get married. To comply with the conditions of the English laws the bride usually goes over first, stays one night in a hotel and gives notice of the marriage on the following day. Then the man arrives and the ceremony takes place. It is generally by license, as otherwise both would have to be in England for four weeks.

No Wonder.
