The appointment, it is understood, was made at the time local Reemployment headquarters, maintained since last fall and in charge of Miss Margaret E. Durney, were closed on instructions from State Employment Commissioner Oliver C. Short.

Under the new set up, the office at Chestertown will handle registrations of the unemployed and assign laborers in Queen Anne's, Kent, Cecil, Caroline and Talbot Counties.

One Hog Cholera Case Listed Here

Outbreaks of hog cholera in May usually run low, and that month this year was no exception. Only six outbreaks were reported, which compares favorably with an average of 15 for May during the last 14 years. There are probably as many hogs in the State in May, as there are in September, yet year after year the heavy losses occur in the latter month. Of the 6 outbreaks, 2 were classed as backward, and 4 occurred on farms where hogs are bred and raised. Five were primary, or new centers of infection, and 1 was of unknown origin.

Of the 23 counties, 5 had hog cholera losses. Baltimore county had 2 outbreaks, and Kent, Montgomery, Talbot, and Worcester, had 1 each. Five of the outbreaks were caused by feeding cholera-infected pork scraps in the kitchen refuse. In 1 of these cases, however, fresh hog bones were purchased for hogs, but some young pigs running at large got a small share of the bones and a large share of cholera. In 1 other case, insufficient information could be obtained, to determine the source of the nefection.
