NRA Observes First Birthday

Party Postponed To Friday Due To Tercentenary

On June 16th the NRA, known to Americans as the progenitor of codes, price fixings and General Johnson, completed one full year of existence; and, throughout the nation, the occasion was duly recognized by the press, the government and radio commentators.

In Maryland, however, official celebration was held up, due to the conflict of the 300th anniversary celebration of the Free State at St. Mary's, and the belated birthday party was not given until yesterday, Friday. At that time, from two to five-thirty in the afternoon, a celebration was held under the direction of Arthur E. Hungerford, director of the National Emergency Council for Maryland in Baltimore.

The birthday party for NRA in Maryland had as guests all those who worked for the Blue Ridge Eagle in the State, and "others who are working for Recovery." The invitation, received by many here, stated that the most enthusiastic supporters of NRA were those industries which have had codes the longest and which have given compliance to them. So far as can be determined, no representatives from Kent were present for the party.

The builders of the Morgan creek bridge are having difficulty in striking solid foundation for the abutment on north side.

The first home-grown ripe tomato was pulled from his garden on Cannon street Tuesday by "Uncle" Billy Blackway, the expert gardener.

Stephen R. Collins, Esq., attorney offered at public sale last Saturday the Emma C. Sutton farm of 119 acres near St. Paul's Church. It was held up and may be purchased at private sale from Mr. Collins on easy terms.

Queen Anne's county's tax-rate dropped to the lowest point in the current century Tuesday when the Board of County Commissioners at their regular weekly meeting egected a ten cent slash, bringing the combined county and school tax rate down to 78 cents.

The school rate for 1934 will be 47 cents on each $100.

In another column the Chestertown Ice Plant is offering prizes for making ice cream at home. There is some question whether their adv. is correct. Should the word be receipt or recipe? Please let Mr. Nicholson know which is correct.

Wm. Henry Ivens, Jr., son of Dr. Harry Ivens, formerly of Kent, graduated in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania Wednesday with honors. He will practice in Philadelphia.

The reduction of 16 cents in milk is for farmers of Pennslyvania only. Kent's representative on the Milk Board says it does not apply to Maryland.

The colored Baptist Church which was purchased by Walter T. Bramble in Chestertown has been reopened for service. George Brown, the fruit vender, has been licensed to preach and will be in charge.

The employes and other near-by visitors of the Kent County Court house were regaled with ice cream and cake on Tuesday in honor of J. Thomas Davis' birthday. The honored guest was Jesse H. Usilton, warm friend of Mr. Davis' and who had been quite sick, but now convalescent. It was a pleasant occasion.

Kent county welcomes new pastors to our midst, viz., Rev. W. H. Litsinger who comes to Christ M. P. Church from Salisbury and Rev. B. A. Bryan who is a native of Kent and returns to serve Kennedyville charge. Rev. W. A. Donaway was remained as pastor at Wesley Chapel and Rev. J. L. Marker at St. James. Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, who was elected President, will preach here Sunday. He will reside in the church parsonage in Baltimore.

Frightened by a bee Mrs. Charles E. Eshman, wife of the proprietor of the Voshell House here, lost control of her automobile near Kennedyville last Friday, crashed into a fence and was slightly cut and bruised. The car was badly damaged.

It does not seem possible that our friend, William R. Maul, is in his 88th year. But such is the case, because he quietly observed his 87th birthday Sunday. He attends church regularly and is interested in allthe news of the day. He also works in his flower yard and "supervises" everything he can.

School attendance figures for May in Kent county reveals Janiver maintaining its place at the top with another 100 per cent. attendance mark. Second to Janvier in May was St. Paul, taught by Mrs. Pearl Everett Hyatt, with a mark of 98.5. Sassfras, Miss Edna G. Peaper, was third with a mark of 96.7.
