"Only eight out of 100 attend morning worship, and two out of 100 evening worship," he asserted. "Cocktail parties in Baltimore interfere with the Sabbath."

Making the remarks during the course of his report on Sabbath observance, Dr. Davis said it was important that the Sabbath be observed more faithfully.

Rumors that the Federal government contemplated shipping 12,000 cows and 6,000 heifers from the western drought area into Maryland put officials of the Maryland State Dairymen's Association on guard who entered an immdiate protest.

Apparently some statistician in Washington dug up figures to show that there are 12,000 so called farms in Maryland without a cow and some of the bright boys in the capital decided this was an ideal place to ship starved animals.

Scabbed Wheat May Interfer With Prospect

Estimate Crop At 400,000 Bushels----AAA Grants Contractors Cent More

Up to last Friday there was supposed to be a bumper crop of wheat expected in Kent. It is estimated that 400,000 bushels of wheat would have been harvested but for the appearance of scab. This injury while not general is seen in scores of fields. It is caused by the dews followed by hot suns.

To add slightly to the promise of the situation was the announcement by County Agent McVean that official notice has come from the AAA that the spring payment to wheat contract signers has been increased in the county several thousand dollars.

This is due to an additional one cent per bushel made by the Government. In other words the spring payment will be nine cents per bushel less County Administrative costs instead of eight cents as originally announced. According to the County Agent the local administrative costs will be approximately one cent per bushel.

Agent McVean has also been advised that restrictions on contracted wheat acreage have been released to the extent that this land may be used for pasture or hay to be fed to any type of livestock. This change was made due to the severe drought in the west and the liklihood of a similar drought throughout the Eastern States.

There are 32,000 acres of wheat in Kent county.

Music Broadcast By Telephone In 1877

Transmitting music over telephone wires for broadcasting stations here, there and everywhere—now a daily occurrence—is not a new development. Alexander Graham Bell in 1877, just a year after his invention of the telephone, utilized these instruments for this type of entertainment.

In order to arouse public interest in the telephone, says Robertson T. Barrett in the Bell Telephone Quarterly, Dr. Bell gave demonstrations or lectures in various cities of the east and one of the features of these affairs was the transmission of songs, cornet solos, cabinet organ and similar musical selections from some outside point to the auditorium in which the lecture was held. In the light of present knowledge of the telephone art, Mr. Barrett says, it is perhaps safe to assume that these demonstrations, though they amazed the audiences which heard them, were reminders of Dr. Samuel Johnson's comment on the performance of a dog, which he had seen dancing on its hind legs. The good doctor remarked that the spectacle was extraordinary — "not because the dog danced particularly well, but because it danced at all."

Imaginative writers in the early days of the telephone, Mr. Barrett says, delighted in predicting the time when entire audiences, as well as individual telephone subscribers, would be entertained by opera and orchestra programs transmitted over the wires. That this prediction has come true is evidenced by the daily feature radio programs of a widely diversified nature that entertain audiences in their homes almost everywhere.

To meet the demands of radio broadcasting companies, Bell System Companies have installed equipment in central offices throughout the country to enable any program passing through a particular point to be distributed by radio stations in various directions over separate routes. In many other telephone offices special testboard equipment for adjusting, monitoring and re-arranging broadcasting networks has also been installed. Utilizing this apparatus selected types of programs can be supplied certain stations in a given area while other stations are supplied entirely different features. This emphasizes the part played by telephone communication lines in everyday radio broadcasting.

THOSE "GOOD OLD DAYS"

Old-timers can easily recall that forty or fifty years ago hens were selling for $3 a dozen; eggs, three dozen for 25c; butter. 10c to 15c a pound and milk 5c a quart. The butcher gave away backbones, spare-ribs and liver, and the hired girl received $2 a week—and did the washing.

Women did not powder and paint, smoke, vote, play poker or shake the shimmy. Men wore whiskers and boots, been was 5 cents a glass, and the lunch was free. Men worked 10 hours a day and never went on strike. No tips were given to waiters and grafters were unknown. A kerosene lamp was considered a luxury in the parlor. No one was ever operated on for appendicitis, and nobody thought of buying glands. Microbes were unheard of. People lived to a good old age and walked for miles to see their friends and neighbors.

Today, everybody rides in automobiles or flies in airplanes, plays golf, shoots craps, plays the piano with his feet, goes to movies nightly, smokes cigarettes, drinks gin and moonshine, never goes to bed the same day he gets up—and thinks he is having a big time. Today is the day of suffragetting and profiteering, and nobody stops to figure out whether life is worth living or not. Evidently not, in a good many cases, for there are a hundred suicides today to one in "the good old days." And you can figure out your reason.

Tercentenary Drew Throng To St. Mary's

Dancing on the green overlooking the harbor Saturday night, celebrants of the Maryland Tercentenary brought to a close the State's official three hundredth birthday party.

At Cowes, St. Clements Island and St. Mary's permanent markers or monuments have been dedicated The State House replica presented to the State was the final and most pretentious of the structures which have been erected in the anniversary year.

A crowd estimated at 20,000 thronged the town to witness the final celebration on the wooded hilltop where the adventurers of the Ark and the Dove made their first settlement in Maryland.

Although the day was hot, there were only twenty-seven cases of heat prostration, a steady breeze making the temperature bearable. One casualty was reported—the collision of an automobile with the motor cycle of Corporal Arthur W. Plummer, of the State police, who suffered multiple lacerations and was taken in an army ambulance to Maryland General Hospital for treatment.

Kent was well represented and played its part well.

OFFERS "FAIR" TRIPS

The Wilmington Morning News' World's Fair Educational Tour is really getting to be an interesting campaign now that boys and girls are finished with their school work and also with the definite announcement that the campaign will officially close on June 30. Their goal is the magnificent five days' trip to Chicago, and the World's Fair.

The additions to the tour group, include Eleanor Wilson, of Wilmington, and Elwood B. Fowler, of Galena, Md., both of whom have had interesting experiences during the course of the campaign.

Elwood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Fowler, of Galena, and is 18 years of age. He is a "veteran" of a former News-Journal trip to New York City and knows just how wonderful a trip can be when it is sponsored by the sponsors of the Chicago trip. He is a keen athletic enthusiast and enjoys particularly swimming and baseball.

Three Brothers Get Diplomas

Among the visitors to Washington College Commencement last week were Mr. and Mrs. T. Clark, of Ellicott City, who were celebrating graduation week as Charles, James T. and Basil in turn have received diplomas.

James T. Clark, graduated from St. John's College in 1928 with honors and at the present time Secretary to Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, was one of the outstanding graduates this year Georgetown University Law School, receiving his LLB. degree along with 119 classmates on Monday night, June 11. As honor man he was awarded the coveted faculty prize granted to the student attaining the highest average during the senior year, his being 00.62. He was also given honorable mention for standing second during the four years' course.

He has already been admitted to practice law before the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Charley graduated from Washington College on Monday morning, June 11, with an A. B. degree, Cum Laude. At the same time he was awarded the Harry P. Porter Character medal, awarded each year to that student who in the opinion of the Faculty has done the most to raise and maintain a high moral tone and standing on the Campus, and who has been most influential of the students in character building. The award is considered the most coveted given at the Chestertown College.

Basil received his diploma Thursday, from the Ellicott City High School. He hopes to continue his education on the college level.

Relics Aid Church Restoration

Finding of relics during a war on the death watch beetle resulted in the restoration of the south chapel of St. Mary's church, in Callington, England to exactly what it was in 1438, when the church was consecrated. During the restoration of the old wagon roof, which had been practically destroyed by the beetle, an ancient piscina and a massive altar stone were found. The altar slab was discovered some time ago at the back of the belfry, where it was being used as a stepping stone. All these and other finds have been placed in their original position so that the chapel is as it was nearly 500 years ago.
