HALL CAINE'S "CHRISTIAN" COMING TO THE LYCEUM

Few novelists of this generation have been more popular in English speaking countries than Sir Hall Caine, author of the novel, "The Christian," which Maurice Tourneur has produced as a motion picture for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and which will be the attraction for Wednesday and Thursday, October 10 and 11, at the Lyceum Theatre. "The Christian" swept England and her colonies and the United States by storm a quarter of a century ago when it was first published.

It was dramatised and produced with Edward Morgan and Viola Allen as the John Storm and Glory Quayle, scoring a great success. It was screened about ten years ago by Vitagraph, but since then there has been such an advance in screen technique that the new Goldwyn version bears small resemblance to the earlier photoplay. It is now one of Goldwyn's twenty big super-features for the current season and has been produced on a spectacular scale.

Director Tourneur took his principals to England and photographed exteriors in London and on the Isle of Man, with the personal assistance of the author. Permission was obtained, for the first time in history, to use Trafalgar Square as the background for a film play. The interiors were made at the Goldwyn studios in California. The story of "The Christian," that of a man who renounces earthly love and tries to live as Christ would were he on earth, is dramatic and compelling and Mr. Tourneur has told it in a series of dramatic pictures, always filled with action and against a background of pictorial beauty.

The cast which Golywyn supplied for the photoplay is replete with noted stage and screen names. Richard Dix and Mae Busch have the leads and are said to give magnificent performances. Other players include Phyllis Haver, Gareth Hughes, Mahlon Hamilton, Claude Gillingwater, Cyril Charwick, Harry Northrup, Beryl Mercer, Aileen Pringle, Joseph Dowling, Milla Davenport, Alice Hesse and Robert Bolder.

Princess D., the fast pacer of Geo. Sutton, Worton, won second place at York, Pa., in the 2.17 pace; purse $600.

RITCHIE'S ACHIEVEMENTS AS BUSINESS GOVERNOR

Reductions In Tax Rate Made Possible By His Management Of State's Affairs.

Since the Democratic convention adopted its platform, the promises for the future, no less than the achievements of the Ritchie administration in the past four years have been the subject of comment among no small number of the voters throughout the State.

Undoubtedly taxation is the problem that creates the most concern. That concern is emphasized by the fact that the growing cost of government finds itself confronted by a taxpayer in the agricultural sections of Maryland, who must dispose of his goods at discouraging prices under the most favorable conditions and in some instances, at prices that show an actual monetary loss. Hence the Democratic pledge to reduce the State tax rate sounds a welcome note to ears all too accustomed to tunes of quite another sort.

Better Government; Less Cost.

Even at present the rate in Maryland is low compared with the tax imposed in many States and the decrease, while acceptable in itself, is doubly so as an example to a Republican administration in Washington, and to the various administrators of local affairs of the possibilities involved in a business-like management of affairs. In connection with the reduction in the rate, it should be recalled, that during the Ritchie regime legislation has been enacted that reduces the cost of Elections alone $350,-000 a year, and the State Institutions are being placed on a basis whereby the cost to the taxpayers will be greatly reduced, while the number of those cared for has increased, and the kind of service rendered has been improved. All this in the face of the fact, the ratings given the schools is such that no friend need feel ashamed of them, which was certainly not the case when Maryland ranked 34th in the list of States. And the improvement cost money—big money.

Pledges Kept Without Quibbles.

It may be asserted that the State situation as far as the promised reduction in the tax rate is concerned is regarded as a fact, whereas it rests simply on a promise. The Democrats can face that possibility with unconcern from the fact that they enter the campaign with a candidate who has kept his party's faith to the letter—no quibbles, no apologies—the record as it stands is the guarantee of the future. The Democrats are fortunate in having as their candidate a man who knows his job, who has proven that he knows his job, and keeps the party promise as he would his individual word.

Linked with the Governor in the platform pledges is every Democratic legislative candidate from Garrett to Worcester, as well as all the State candidates nominated with the Governor in the Democratic Convention, upon whom the Governor will rely for advice and assistance. The people themselves nullify the promises by failing to elect to office men pledged to fulfill them.

Price As Well As Principle.

In his speech before the Democratic Convention, the Governor discussed the States' rights issue, declaring the Federal Government had gone far enough in its encroachments upon the State. This question of States' rights, has, until recently, been interesting only to students of government, but the number showing concern is constantly increasing as the lines that marked the fields of activity as between Federal and State governments are being constanly broken away. Where will Washington stop? Is now the big question in the minds of those who see in a strict interpretation of the Federal Constitution, the best guarantee of the liberties of the people.

Involved in this Federal encroachment is also the question of cost. Not so many years ago the tax problem was scarcely thought of in connection with the Federal Government, so lightly did the burden bear on the public's shoulders. That condition is now past. The people are learning that the Federal Government has a bill to present all out of proportion to the work done, and they resent the bill none the less because the Government encroacher upon the States in many of its various undertakings.

IN MEMORIAM

In fond and loving remembrance of my dear mother, Rachel Jane Davis, who died four years ago, October 5, 1919.

She has gone to the realms of the blest,
Where sorrow can reach her never;
She has passed through the gates of her rest;
She is lost to our dim eyes forever.
The grave may her casket inclose,
And record what from life hath perished,
But her soul hath immortal repose,
And her love in our heart is still cherished.
