MARYLANDER'S WIFE KILLED.

Mrs. John G. Aldridge A Victim of The Iroquois Disaster.

Among those who lost their lives in the Iroquois Theatre catastrophe was Mrs. John G. Aldridge, wife of a former resident of Cecil county, Maryland, who moved to Chicago about twenty years ago.

Mrs. Aldridge was an Illinois woman, and besides her husband is survived by a daughter, Miss Mabel Aldridge now 15 years old. Mrs. Wm. B. Hammond, of 1516 East Biddle street, is a sister of Mr. Aldridge, and received a letter from Miss Aldridge apprising her of the bereavement.

Mrs. Aldridge, Mr. Hammond states, was afflicted with Rheumatism and went out little. On the fateful afternoon, feeling better than usual, she concluded to have a little diversion and went to the Iroquois, presumably with a friend. The daughter did not accompany her, being away from home. Miss Aldridge in her letter gave no details about the circumstances under which her mother's body was found or the extent to which it was disfigured, announcing merely that her mother had been suffocated.

Mr. Aldridge has a number of friends in this city and is a member of the Chicago Corn and Flour Exchange. M. Kennard Aldridge, of Chestertown, Md. is his cousin.
