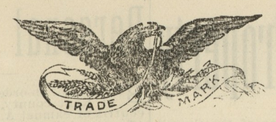
TO THE TRADE.



After an experience of over 28 years and dilligent study in our business, coupled with the best mechanical devices that could be procured, we now offer you our

and have much pleasure in calling the attention of the intelligent farmer to our unprecedented facilities for supplying the trade this Fall. Never did the agriculturist need more for the money than he does now and notwithstanding the fact that materials have advanced, with our Baltimore connection enabling us to obtain materials at rock bottom prices, we have determined to give you the advantage of it. But the greatest of all is the quality, for we have never heard better results from our goods than this year.

One customer from Dorchester claims to have gotten 53 bushels per acre from our Bone Super.

Another gentleman in Queen Anne's, who bought 104 tons last fall says on one farm he got a fraction over 40 bushels.

Another in Kent 34 bushels or 9 bushels more than from a cheaper goods, he used our Bone Super.

Mr. I. R. Leaverton, a gentleman who used to use Rock Goods, says he has found that high grade goods pay him and has placed his order for 45 tons of high grade goods.

Messrs. Wright, McKenney & Lowe, of Centreville, say their men claim for mechanical condition, for action on crops, for a fertilizer that alright in every particular, Hubbard's is the goods and they buy again.

Mr. J. T. Anthony says it has always done well for him and that is why he buys again.

Another party who used 40 tons bulk of it, Hubbard's Bone Super, says that anybody could tell the difference and so we could go on but for want of space. We therefore say that when you are ready to buy we would be glad to quote you prices.

MUST EAT ARSENIC.

Otherwise Makers of the Poison Could Not Stand Its Fumes.

Eating of arsenic is common in Styria. The Styrians say that arsenic makes one plump and comely and gives one strength for great exertion, such as running or mountain climbing.

Styria, in Austria, gives the world vast quantities of arsenic. The manufacture of this drug is indeed the main Styrian industry. They who make arsenic eat it, as a rule, for they say that only the arsenic eater can withstand the arsenic fumes.

These makers and eaters of the drug are comely. They have a blooming and clear color. They look much younger than they are.

"The foreman in a certain arsenic factory told me that in his boyhood, When he first went to that plant, he was advised to begin to eat arsenic lest his health suffer from the fumes," says a toxicologist. "He did begin, and his first two or three small doses gave him a sharp pain, like a burn, in the stomach, and this pain was followed by tremendous hunger and a violent, disagreeable excitement. But as his doses increased in frequency and size their effect became pleasant. There was no longer pain or excitement. On the contrary, there was a ravenous appetite, as well as a mood of joyous activity wherein he could do three men's work.

"This chap, by the time he got to be thirty, was taking four grains of arsenic a day. He looked at thirty, with his clear pink and white color, no more than twenty-three. He was as robust as a blacksmith. But he said he would die at forty-five or so, that being the age at which all the Styrian arsenic eaters die."

The drug is a preservative, and in Styria when graves are opened bodies are found to be as fresh six or seven years after interment as on the day they were lowered into the earth.—Chicago Tribune.

HALF FALSE JEWELS.

How One Diamond Makes Two Each as Big as the Original.

The lapidary was splitting a diamond. He leaned forward with intent brows. His tiny machine buzzed like a bee. A delicate and shining dust arose.

Then suddenly everything was stilled, and the diamond, split in halves, lay in the lapidary's white, thin hand.

"Out of one diamond," he said, "I am going to make two, and each of these two will be as big and brilliant as the original one was."

As he scraped up the glittering dust he explained:

"First I will make in paste an exact duplicate of each of these two halves. Then I will join to the bottom of each genuine half its artificial complement, making the junction so carefully that no one will be able to perceive it. Finally I will mount these two half false and half genuine stones. Each then will appear to be altogether genuine. Their paste foundations will not detract in any way from their brilliance. The owner of the big diamond will have two big diamonds.

"The making of fake jewels," the lapidary said, "is an interesting study. Do you know what the best fake pearls are made of? They are made of fish scales—silvery and iridescent fish scales pasted on the inside of balls of glass. The fish these scales come from is called in France the ablette and in England the bleak. It is smaller than a minnow. Its scales must be picked off by hand, and only a small portion of them can be used. It takes 18,000 ablettes, or bleaks, to yield a pound of scales."—New York Telegram.

Separating Them.

"In the old days, when the capital of Alabama was located at Tuscaloosa, there was a good deal of open gambling at that seat of legislation," said a southern man. "It was the custom in those times for men of all grades of society to risk their money at games of chance, and the lawmakers who gathered at Tuscaloosa were among the best patrons of the gaming tables.

"The proprietor of one of those resorts, wisning to keep the state solons separated from the ordinary customers of his place, put up a big sign in the apartment devoted to faro, poker, roulette and the like, which read:

"'Members of the legislature please take the table to the right; gamblers take the table to the left. It's hard to tell you apart.'"—Washington Post.

Germany's First Windmill.

The first windmill in Germany was built at Windsheim. The Augustine monks at that place desired to build one such as they had seen in Italy, but the lord of the manor forbade them, declaring that the winds belonged to him. The monks applied to the bishop of Utrecht, who promptly laid down the fundamental principle that no one had any power over the winds of his diocese but himself. He gave permission to build the mill and it was erected in the closing years of the fourteenth century.

Time and Money.

The counterfeiter was in prison for ten years.

"What are you doing here?" asked a visitor.

"Passing time."

"Ah, what for?"

"Passing money." And the visitor passed on.
