The Home Merchant vs. Foreign Business Houses—A Pertinent Letter From Bill Simpson—How About That Chicago Order?

To The Editor:—The article on "Cities Against Home," I read in your paper a short time ago set me to thinking.

It was only lately, I saw one of the leading farmers in this community carrying a large, bunglesome catalogue from a catalogue house, home with him. It happened that I was drawn into a discussion of this question with him and I was actually surprised to hear him express himself as he did. In the first place I feel proud of the fact that I have never patronized one of these concerns in preference to dealing with our home merchants. Probably one reason why I have not felt inclined to send my trade away from home is because it has only been a few years since I found my financial condition such that it became necessary for me to arrange with some one to carry my account over a crop season. In fact, it has not been more than a year since I found it necessary to run an account for a short time and I am not one so forgetful of accomodations as to order from a catalogue house and send them the money with the order when our home merchants have been good enough to extend credit to me when I needed it. But I can not say this influence has been the only one to cause me to trade entirely at home. I know if I, or any of my neighbors, want to buy something, if they would only go to one of our home merchants and tell what they wanted, he will furnish it to us just as cheap as we can get it from a catalogue house. Now I don't mean he will let us have first class goods at a price we would pay them for second class goods, but I mean that for the same class of goods they will sell us just as cheap as those other fellows. In figuring the cost of goods from catalogue houses, we don't want to forget to figure in the cost of sending the money and paying the freight or express. If it is anything liable to need repairs, our home merchants can get them for us, but it is almost impossible to get them from a catalogue house. Of course the merchants in our town cannot afford to sell us goods just as cheap as these catalogue houses and wait six months or a year for their pay when these other concerns require us to send the cash with the order, or as soon as the goods are received. They could not afford to do that. I remember one of our neighbors met with a loss of nearly everything he had on earth and when we started out to take up a collection for him, every merchant in our town, and, in three towns around us, contributed something. No one thought of asking a catologue house to help out on this fund. Of course I can imagine how much good it would have done to have asked them.

I am not a philanthropist and I am frank to say if anything could be saved in the long run from buying from the catalogue houses, I might then think about it, but I do not believe you save one cent. I know it is a mighty hard matter for a merchant on sugar. When he sells me or any of my neighbors a dollars' worth, it must weigh up to dollar's worth, but when any of us buy a hundred or so pounds from a catalogue house it can be just a little short and we think, of course, it has sifted through the bag or something is the cause of it and we let it go at that.

I know of one of my neighbors buying a cook stove from a catalogue house. When the stove came it looked just exactly like the picture in the catalogue, in fact, it was like it only it weighed about one-half or two-thirds as much as the same size stove would if it had been bought from one of our hardware men. My neighbor told me it was the last thing he would ever buy away from home, because he knew he was stuck on the stove, for it was just like the picture, and the fact that it was a light-weight stove did not give him any excuse for refusing to take it. Since then I was telling one of our hardware dealers about it and he said he could have got the man the same weight stove and delivered it to him at about $1.50 less than what it cost my neighbor, counting the freight.

I expect the editor can see I am not much of an advocate of buying from mail-order concerns an I don't believe any one else will be if they thoroughly investigate before buying. It won't cost any of us anything to see our home merchants before sending our order away and then if we don't like the price they offer to us we can use our own judgement.

If this does not get into the waste basket you may hear from me again.

Bill Simpson.
