TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Total wreck of the Steamboat Swallow.—A Number of lives Lost.—The steamer Swallow left Albany at 6 o'clock on Monday evening, with two or three other boats, to come directly through to New York. She had on board a large number of passengers probably three hundred and fifty in all. When passing through the narrow channel at Athens, she ran upon a large rock, called "the brig." The bow ran up so high that it was impossible to stand upon the deck. The keel broke, and the stern bent upwards, and still went down so much that in three minutes the two cabins were full of water. The scene among the passengers may be imagined. It was 9 o'clock in the evening, and very few of them were in their births. The upper part of the boat soon took fire, which increased the alarm.

The evening was very dark and the wind blowing fresh at the time the boat struck. Fortunately the Rochester, Capt. Cruttenden, was but a few boat's length behind, but by the time she succeeded in rounding to and reaching the Swallow, the water was up to the top of the ladies' cabin.

The passengers were taken off by Capt. Cruttenden, but so short was the interval from the time the Swallow struck till she went down, that it is impossible to say how many lives were lost.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE LOSS OF THE SWALLOW.--Several bodies found. The New York papers are filled with details of the unfortunate accident on board the steamboat Swallow. The New York Tribune says:—

"Tuesday was devoted to the sad duty of probing the sunken wreck for the bodies of the dead, and with too fatal result. When our reporter left, seven bodies had been recovered—six being females. Among the latter had been already recognized Mrs. Briggs, Miss or Mrs. Wood, and Mrs. Colton, of Troy, whose husband came down on hearing the news of the disaster, and was present when the body of his wife was discovered.

A gentleman from Albany, whose name we could not learn, had just arrived in search of his two sisters, who were discovered in the wreck.

Mr. Gilson, who was on board with his wife, escaped, but can find nothing of her so far. It is possible, however, that she was taken up by the Rochester or Express.

P. H Firman, Esq., of New York, was with his sister on board the Swallow. He came down on the Buffalo this morning, as did also Mr. Gilson.

J. C. Carl, Esq., of New York, was on board the Swallow, and came down this morning on the Buffalo. He had a truly narrow escape, the particulars of which he narrated to us.

As he was in the act of leaping into the water he heard a woman's voice, in tones of agony, shrieking, "for God's sake save me, save me!" and while swimming, so long as he can recollect, the noise of the life-struggle, mingled with cries and groans, was around him on every side. The boat that picked him up saved also five others. One man, on being seized by the hair and his head lifted out of water, "exclaimed, save her! save her! let me go and save her! On looking farther, they found and succeeded in rescuing the lady, who was, as it appeared, only an acquaintance, who had been placed in his charge.

A gentleman of Detroit, named Huest, having a bag containing $1.500 in gold, jumped overboard with the bag upon his arm, but soon was obliged to let it go. He was only saved by having fortunately grasped a narrow strip of board, as he jumped. Close after him came another man, claiming the board, with curses and imprecations. As he struck out from the boat he almost immediately went down, grasping the possessor of the board by the foot.—He, however, released himself with great difficulty, and was saved.

From the best estimate at which we have been enabled to arrive, there were on board the Swallow, at the time of the accident not far from three hundred souls. Ninety-four were rescued by the Rochester, about 40 by the Express, and a numbers, (how many we could not learn) went up to Utica and Robert L. Stevens.

The boat is a total wreck, and it is doubtful whether her engines will be saved She lies on a high rock close to the Athens side of the channel, and between which and the Western shore no boat has ever gone. The pilot, Mr. Burnett, is accounted one of the best on the river, although a fatality seems to have attended his connection with the Swallow—having, as we learn, run her on shore on one or two previous occasions.

A Mrs. Starbuck and her daughter were rescued in the last agonies of death. The daughter was, with a child's strength and affections, clinging to her almost dying mother and bearing her up. Both were rescued, but the old lady died in a few hours.

There are a great many lives lost, there is no doubt. It is known that a Mrs. French and an old lady named Mrs. Lambert were drowned.

It was rumored that a young lady, a niece of Jos. C. Heart, Esq., of Troy, died from fright, after having reached the shore in safety.

The loss of life, says the N. Y. Commercial, is awful, but as yet no correct estimate can be formed as to how many have perished. We are informed by the capt. that there were about 300 passengers on board. The scene that took place on her striking is indescribable; the gentlemen who had ladies in charge rushed for the ladies' saloon, and the ladies rushed to the door to escape—the confusion and consternation were so great that a large number threw themselves headlong into the river and many must have been drowned.

The correspondent of the Tribune says that it is of course at present impossible to determine the number of persons lost; but it is the general opinion that it will not fall short of thirty—and may be as high as fifty.
