THE FREEMAN'S BANNER.

With the next year I propose to publish a WEEKLY JOURNAL, having the foregoing title; devoted generally to the arts and sciences—but particularly to the topicks of political economy.

I shall endeavor to acquire for the encouragement of this Journal the favour of every good citizen; accommodating its varied contents to the varied tastes and occupations of the American population; and extending to every meritorious correspondent, the most liberal facilities of communication for his literary and professional speculations.

In this preliminary truce, I protest against the imputation to my motives of servility, duplicity or sycophancy. I will conduct an independent and liberal Journal, in which genius, art, and science, without respect of persons, shall be regarded and cherished; and to which merit, intrinsic merit alone, shall have access.

I have heard, and I believe, that such a Journal is wanting in the City of Baltimore; but such a Journal shall not be wanting in the City of Baltimore after the first of January next.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

THE FREEMAN'S BANNER will be published, weekly, in the City of Baltimore, on a fine super-royal sheet, at three dollars per annum; delivered on the day of publication to subscribers in Baltimore, and forwarded to distant patrons, by mail, on its first departure from the Post Office in this city.
