Wesley's Death Bed.—We visited yesterday Mr. Coleman's picture gallery in Broadway, principally for the purpose of seeing an engraving of the "Death of the Rev. John Wesley," and wish we could transfer to paper the emotions we experienced as we gazed upon the scene pencilled faithfully before us. The moment selected by the artist for representation is that in which the holy and apostolic man, after some minutes of silent prayer or thought, with clasped hands, uttered those memorable words which thrilled through the hearts of his weeping friends—"THE BEST OF ALL IS GOD IS WITH US."

Standing at the foot of the bed and leaning forward to catch any further words that might fall from the lips of the dying saint, is the Rev. Peard Dickenson, for nine years reader of the prayers at the City-road chapel, London. Behind him, enveloped in a cloak, stands Dr. Whitehead the friend and biographer of Wesley. Sitting near Mr. Dickenson is the venerable Mather, with his ear trumpet raised to his ear, and near him is a youth—the son of the Rev. James Rogers—who is the lone survivor of the group. On the right of the bed, Mr. Charles Wesley is kneeling in an agony of grief. At the head, somewhat behind, stands Mr. Wesley's most tried and intimate friend the Rev. Joseph Bradford. At a little distance from the circle is seated a medical student, a pupil of Dr. Whitehead's. His head is resting on his hand as though musing and overpowered by the sanctity of the scene.

On the left is Mrs. Esther Ann Rogers, looking sorrowfully but calmly on the countenance of Mr. Wesley. Behind her stands the taller figure of Miss Ritchie, afterward Mrs. Mortimer. On the right of Mrs. Rogers stands the Rev. Thomas Rankin, a supernumerary preacher, and on her left her husband, the Rev. James Rogers. Rev. James Creighton, John Horton, Esq. Mr. Wesley's executer, his countenance indicating strong emotion. Rev. George Whitfield, Mr. Wesley's book steward, Rev. Jonathan Edmondson, Robert Carr Brakeenbury, and others.

The engraving is by W. O. Geller, from a painting by M Claxton, and when framed is 32 inches by 25. As a work of art it is admirable. The grouping of the figures, the characteristic expression which the artist has depicated, the grief of each, and above all, the calm, illuminated though emaciated countenance of the dying man himself stamp the production as at once a faithful portraiture and a finished specimen of art. To the more opulent members of that growing section of the Christian church to whom the name and memory of WESLEY must ever be dear, such a picture must be above price.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

Confession of Error.—The Milerite preacher called 'Brother Storrs," makes an open confession of his errors, in the last "Midnight Cry," in the following terms:

"I confess that I have been led into error and thereby have led others astray, in advising advent believers to leave business entirely and attend meetings only; though I have usually qualified that advice by excepting business 'absolutely necessary for present necessity.'"

He and others have been the means of deluding hundreds (probably thousands') into the sacrifice of their business and property, by which they and their families are now left poor and destitute. To such this confession will be no compensation.—During the excitement it was in vain to urge converts to Millerism to hold on to their property; for their preachers insisted that goods, houses and lands should be sold or given away; and it is strongly suspected that some of these same preachers benefitied by the advice which they gave. It is certain that most, if not all, of those who were located in Baltimore, took flight a few days before the "second advent" day arrived, and left their converts to meet the great event in the best way they could. We hope that the "Midnight Cry" will now be discontinued, and that its editor will adopt a more honorable calling than that of deluding the week minded and ignnorant. There should be an end of such ridiculous folly at once, that those who have been deceived may return to their usual avocations.

At the St. Louis races Geneto won the two mile sweepstakes, and Victress the two mile purse.

A SMALL TEA PARTY.

Showing the connection between Scandal and Souchong.

'Twas eve. The sun tinged the west with a golden glow; a light, gossamer veil, which undulated in the breeze, carpeted the earth; the sapless tree leaves rustled as some feathered gallant flew from branch to branch in quest of his mate, and echoes mellowed down by distance breathed on the air softly and sweetly as a lover's wooings. This may be called a very poetical prelude to a very anti-poetical sketch. Be that as it may, it was at the time described above that Miss Jones, on Sunday evening last, paid her usual weekly visit to the Misses Jenkins. The Misses Jenkins, to use their own favorite phrase, are "very peculiar—remarkable peculiar" people, and Miss Jones, by some secret sympathy of nature, is just as peculiar as they are. The Misses Jenkins don't keep a house, but they rent apartments and follow the fancy-dress making business; Miss Jones is in the bonnet line, and boards out. The consequence is, that Miss Jones calls oftener to see the Misses Jenkins than the Misses Jenkins do to see Miss Jones; and the further effect of this state of things is that Miss Jones drinks more of the Misses Jenkins' tea than they do of hers. This leaves the balance of trade in favor of the Misses Jenkins, and as individuals, like nations, feel a jealousy for their interests when they begin to find out that they give more than they receive, they sometimes put a protective tariff on their evening beverage by closing the front doors and window shutters, and reporting themselves, through the colored Abigail, "not at home." Such a report was about to be made on Sunday evening. But as Burns says,

"The best laid schemes of mice and men
Gang aft agley."

So say we, do often the plans and projects of women. Miss Jones was not to be "not at home'd" by the servant; so passing her, and going to the inner room, she found both the Misses Jenkins there asleep, of course. She soon applied to them the reverse passes, as a mesmeriser would say, and woke them up. They were so glad to see Miss Jones, and so angry with the servant for reporting them not at home, when they distinctly told her they were always at home to Miss Jones but never to Miss Fitzfry; and they would have been so lonesome, too, if she had not come, and she was such good company. After a mutual interchange of such compliments they adjourned to the front room, where the buttered toast was on the table, and the tea was undergoing the process of abstraction. But before we place them behind their favorite beverage, let us take a look at Miss Jones, her conjoint hostesses, and their front room. Miss Jones was—but a woman's age is not to be spoken of; she had a cock up nose, something like the lower half of the letter S, a wiry sort of face, and a tall, attenuated form, that was uniform in its want of fullness from the ankles to the ears. The Misses Jenkins were a pair of Siamese twins, so far as mutual resemblance, thoughts and tastes went. They were low of stature, with faces that plainly bespoke an irrassible temper. The room in which they had assembled might be, and we believe was, some fifteen feet by twelve in diametor. The walls were ornamented with colored plates of the fashions cut from the monthly magazines. A sofa, from which the curled hair was protruding, had its place opposite the grater: a ricketty arm chair undulated near the fender; a small table, which contained the tea equipage, stood near the centre, and some half dozen ordinary chairs—very ordinary ones—filled up the intermediate space round the room. Miss Jenkins, the elder, did the honors of the table.—Before pouring out the tea, she indulged in a dissertation on the injurious effects which strong narcotics have on the nervous system, and to prove that she practiced what she preached—that her practice was in consonance with her theory—she proceeded to pour out the beverage, which looked, as it streamed from the pot, and as it proved to be, a most neutral concoction, which, if analyzed, would be found to contain one part of tea and ninety-nine parts of boiling water. The toast was but lightly buttered, but that the fair hostess accounted for by saying there was no Goshen in the market, and who could use any thing else; and if the brown sugar was too soft, it was accounted for by the rain's being too hard in Cuba. They commenced operations, however, and other themes than the strength of the tea or the rancid taste of the butter engrossed their attention. It is strange, but yet a fact, and one for which philosophers have never accounted, that drinking tea begets a desire to talk of one's neighbors.

The trio of ladies in question, not being of course exempt from the general influences that operate on our nature, were suddenly inoculated with the cacoethes loquendi. Miss Jones had seen the Misses Riptons return from church, and such frights of bonnets as they wore. She noticed for the first time that Maria squints most ruefully, and that Martha turns in her toes when she walks, like a shoemaker. Miss Jenkins, the elder never liked to speak of people behind their backs; she had an utter aversion to the practice, and believed that was the reason she hated Miss Smith, who had such an awful habit of speaking of people in their abscence. She could not avoid saying to Miss Jones in confidence, however, that there were some most scandalous stories afloat about Maria Ripton; and one of them was that she was seen going down to the lake late one evening with Dick Fitwell, the tailor—and another that she takes gin in her lemonade. She herself did not believe a word of these slanders, and would enjoin Miss Jones not to repeat them, except in a confidental manner and to a paaticular friend.

Miss Jones pledged herself never to open her lips on the subject—unless it was a secret. It seemed almost incredible, and still she was inclined to believe it, some young woman do such strange things nowadays. There was Miss Hartwell, didn't she borrow Miss Heldon's dress to go to the ball last week, and actually had the assurance to send it home without washing it!

"Did you ever!" said the two Miss Jenkins in concert, and Miss Jones echoed "never!" and so on, commencing with Miss Ripton, and going through the whole circle of their acquaintance, whose peculiarities and peccadilloes they dessected and bisected—canvassed and criticised—till after the miniature alembic on the tabic refused to disgorge any more of its liquid beverage.

When they had got through with their tea and tired with their talk, Miss Jones rose to leave.—The Misses Jenkins bid her an affectionate good night, and asked her if she would not soon come again. yet the door had not been well closed on her when they mutually wished never to see her face again. She had such a nasty habit of speaking of people behind their backs, a practice of which, they thanked goodness, they were never guilty.

It is queer how we thus consure others for conduct which very often forms the ruling passion of our own character, but as that astute philosopher Sam Slick says, we suppose "it's human natur."

Five copies of the Saturday Courier, and 1 copy of Frost's new Pictorial History of America, a $5 book,	10

In fact, whatever offer is made, by any other Family Journal, at all approaching in worth, beauty, or pretensions, to the Saturday Courier, will be furnished by us.

The Courier has become so well and favorably known through a triumphantly popular course of fourteen years, that it would be superfluous to say much on that subject here. We may remark, however, that to the industry, talent, and enterprise, which have for years kept this paper a bright exemplar for all its imitators, will constantly be added the productions of every available writer, and continued judicious and liberal expenditures will continually be made, as well in the Literary as the Typographical departments. Our means will always enable us to be in advance of all others, and we shall be so.

HISTORIES OF MODERN REPUBLICS.—a new and important announcement for the coming year, in addition to our already numerous popular features, will be a series of CONDENSED HISTORIES OF MODERN REPUBLICS, by a fresh and vigerous writer, who will impart a world of important instruction to the rising generation, in this new and entertaining Romance of History.

BIOGRAPHIES AND NOTICES OF DISTINGUISHED LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC MEN.—Among the interesting essays and sketches of value, which we shall continue to present in the Courier, will be a full and interesting account of the rise, progress, and present elevated standing of ALL DISTINGUISHED MEN, of the Past and Present, (at home or abroad,) in all departments of Art, Science, Literature, Statesmanship, Poetry, Mechanics, Painting, Agriculture, Printing, Merchandize, etc.

This will be a very interesting feature for the Young. It will be a department of the Courier, which it has ever been our aim, to render of inestimable value to those for whom we feel so deep an interest as we do for the Young Men of our great and growing Country. The Lives of Distinguished Men are of much value to those who are yet forming their own characters, for the purpose of enacting their parts, CORRECTLY, on the Great Stage of Human Life.

Indeed, we hope that this Department of the Courier will be worth more (each year) to every family, who have sons and daughters to be reared, than five times the amount we ask for a year's subscription to the Saturday Courier.

INCIDENTS, HISTORIES, SCENES, BATTLE GROUNDS, &c., OF THE AMERICAN ALL OTHER REVOLUTIONS.—Under this head, (which is, by the way, not at all new in the Courier,) we shall hereafter give graphic and interesting accounts (occasionally beautifully illustrated) of the thrilling incidents, so profusely studded through the deeply important history of the American Revolution, and of all other revolutions that we may regard of the least interest of value to the readers of THE PHILADELPHIA SATURDAY COURIER. This will be of deep consequence, also, to every member of you family of the American republic, who may choose to do themselves and us the favor of securing, regularly the visits of the Courier at their Family Fireside.

POPULAR TOPOGRAPHY.—to gratify the growing appetite for a better knowledge of the important features of our great and glorious country, our past exertions shall be redoubled in future to present vivid pictures of American cities, towns, mountains, lakes, rivers, caves, scenery, ect. ect.

OUR ORIGINAL DOMESTIC TALES, ESSAYS, POEMS &c. will continue regularly to be furnished by the best minds and pens in the country.—These chaste productions are acknowledged to be the best, for useful instruction at the family fireside, that appear in any periodical.

OUR ENGRAVINGS comprise subjects in all branches of Art and Nature, suitable for the family circle, and appear in rapid succession.

OUR TRAVELLER is constantly traversing the world, in search of the wonderful and instructive.

OUR AGRICULTURIST occupies weekly an important space, with all matters of interest for the Noble Tillers of the Soil.

OUR EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENTS, in Liverpool, London, Ireland, the East, &c., keep us regularly advised of all subjects oi special interest.

OUR MARKET, AND PRICES CURRENT, embrace all the earliest advices in reference to the prices of all kinds of Grain, Produce, &c., the state of Stocks, Banks, Money, and Lands: and our extensive arrangements will hereafter render our Prices Current of inestimable value to the traveller, Farmer, and all Business Classes whatever.

George Earnest & Wesley Cowles, vs. James Dixon & others. } IN CHANCERY, 10th October, 1844.

The object of the bill filed in this cause is to obtain a decree for the sale of the Real Estate of Noah Dixon due for the payment of his debts.

The Bill states that the said Noah Dixon was in his life time indebted to the complainants and divers other persons in large sums of money, and having real and personal estate of great value, departed this life in the year 1844 intestate; leaving Charles T. Dixon, E. Caroline Dixon, Nissi Dixon, Sally Dixon, Henry Dixon, Margaret Dixon, James Dixon and Benjamin H. Dixon his children and heirs at law and upon whom the said real estate has devolved, and that the said James Dixon and Benjamin H. Dixon reside out of the jurisdiction of this Court, that administration of all and singular the personal estate of the said Noah Dixon has been lately granted by the Orphans' Court of Dorchester county unto Amos Bowdle of said county, and that in virtue thereof he has possessed himself of said personal estate, but that the said personal estate is insufficient to pay the just and lawful debts of the said Noah Dixon, due and owing by him at the time of his death. The Bill also states that the said James Dixon and Benjamin H. Dixon reside out of the State of Maryland.

It is therefore ordered that the complainants by causing a copy of this order to be published in some newspaper once in each of three successive weeks before the 16th day of November next give notice to the said non-resident defendants of the substance and object of this bill that they may be warned to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 10th day of March next, to shew cause if any they have why a decree should not pass as prayed.

CHANCERY SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

PURSUANT to authority derived from the Honorable Theodorick Bland, Chancellor of the State of Maryland, I will expose to public sale at the Store of Jones and Wright, in Church Creek, on Wednesday the 13th of November next, between the hours of 10 and 2 o'clock, P. M that valuable House and Lot, situated in the village of Church Creek, formerly the residence of William Colston deceased, and now in the occupancy of the Rev. Mr. Harris. The improvements consist of a dwelling house, kitchen, stables, carriage house, granary and all the usual out-buildings. Attached to this property are also two fertile lots, and a landing which could be rendered profitable by a small expense. The location is retired and healthy, and peculiarly desirable as a residence.

The Trustee having a discretionary controle over the terms of sale, they will be made agreeable to the purchaser.
