POETRY.

Widowology Philosophised.

Oh, none of your boarding school misses,
Your "sweet, timid creatures," for me
Who rave about Cupid and blisses,
Yet know not what either may be;
I don't feel at all sentimental,
Nor care I for Byron a rap—
But give me a jolly and gentle
Young widow in weeds and a cap!

To her I would offer my duty,
For in truth all belief it exceeds,
To see how the blossom of beauty
Is brightened by peeping from "weeds."
She is armed cap-a-pie for the struggle—
To her cap I a captive belong,
And the wink of her magical ogle
Is a challenge to laughter and song.

The tremors of girlhood are over,
Love's blossom has ripened to fruit;
And her "first love," under cover,
Is the soil where my passion takes root;
'Tis pleasant to know "the departed"
Was tenderly cared to the last—
And that she will not die broken hearted,
If I should pop off just as fast.

Her temper is never so restive,
Her duty she knows—and a shape
Is never so sweetly suggestive,
As when it is muffled in crape.
The maid wears one ring when she marries.
In proof she all others discards—
But the widow-wife wiselier carries
A pair of these marital gards!

So none of your boarding-schools misses,
Your sweet, timid creatures for me,
Who rave about Cupid and blisses,
Yet know not what either may be!
I don't feel at all sentimental,
Nor care I for Byron a rap—
Give me a plump, jolly and gentle,
Young widow in weeds and a cap!

AGRICULTURAL.

POULTRY MANURE.

This is the most valuable of the farm manures, says the Working Farmer, and is entitled to great care in its collection and use.—Beyond the amount of water it contains, it is as valuable as guano, and therefore should never be sold by practical farmers to morocco dressers at 25 cents per bushel. The poultry house should be underlaid with charcoal dust, when it can be procured, so as to receive the hen manure as fast as made. The surface of this charcoal dust should occassionally be raked or removed off to one corner, with a portion of the dung. This may be continued till the manure is required for use, when it should be thoroughly mixed with ten times its bulk of soil before being applied to crops. Where charcoal dust cannot be procured, well decomposed swamp muck, plaster of Paris, or even aluminous clay may be frequently dusted over the floor of the poultry house to be mixed with this manure. The object of all this is to receive and retain the ammonia, so as to prevent its liberation from injuring the health of the poultry. All animals, man included, suffer from breathing the effluvia arising from their excretia, and this is particularly true of the feathered tribes. Their natural habit in the wild state causes them to pass through the upper strata of the atmosphere, and with such velocity as to readily rid themselves of the noxious gases, given off by the surface of their bodies, and to be beyond any deleterious influence from the fumes of their excretia. We should, therefore, in the poultry houses, make such arrangements as will prevent the poultry from inhaling these deleterious gases.

New Way to Make Butter.

"Miss Emily," a rustic lass of the Hoosier State, who has had for several years past the entire control of the milk department in her father's family, confesses in the Western Cultivator, that she was indebted to it for the following process of making butter surely and speedily, said to be a Russian method, and a most excellent one, too, as her experience proves. She says: "Before I go to milk, I put a kettle, say one-third full of water, and large enough to let the milk-pail into it, on the stove, where it will get boiling hot by the time I come in with the milk. I then strain the milk in another vessel, and wash the pail, (which should always be tin,) then pour the milk back into the pail, and set it into the kettle of boiling water, till the milk becomes scalding hot, taking care not to let it boil; then pour it into crocks or pans, and set it away in the cellar for the cream to rise in the usual way. Cream produced in this way will seldom require twenty minutes to churn, while by the common practice, the poor dairy maid may often churn for hours, and then perhaps have to throw all away, as I did on two occasions, before I became acquainted with the Russian plan, the essential features of which I have adopted in my present mode, as given above, and for which valuable information I am indebted to your agricultural paper. This method is applicable to all seasons, and will answer in summer as well as in winter..

RUTA BAGAS.

In a statement published by Mr. L. H. Parsons, of Michigan, of his success in raising ruta bagas, we find the same encouragement as to the value of that crop there as in other parts of the northern, middle and eastern States, where the cultivation has been properly tried. He says that at an expense of $6 for labor and seed, he obtained from three-quarters of an acre of land 375 bushels of turnips, which, for feeding to his cattle, were worth to him as much as six and a quarter tons of hay. A similar trial on a larger scale, resulted in the same way; and he recommends the cultivation of this turnip there, as it has long been recommended here, to all farmers who keep stock.

We take note of this matter at this time, simply with a view to urge again upon our farmers the value of this crop as a winter food for cows, which is not only very healthful to them with their dry provender, but as a question of economy. It is some time yet—some months—before the time of putting in this crop will come round, but we mention it now in order that a suitable spot of ground may be reserved for it, and put in proper condition.—An acre, when cultivated in the best manner, will yield from 500 to 700 bushels, and the the crop is by no means a troublesome one.—Editor Telegraph.

Entrance into London.

The following exceedingly graphical description of the entrance into London, by an American traveler, was written sixteen years ago, by a gentleman who is now in the public service in California:

"I never shall forget my entrance in London. It was an epoch in my life. About two o'clock in the afternoon, while we were yet thirty or forty miles from the metropolis, a friend pointed out to me an indication of its 'whereabout.' A little above the horizon, and as far in the distance as I could strain my vision, lay a long line of watery-looking cloud, like the first faint distant view of the Blue Ridge, Pennsylvania, seen when the early morning light touches it in October. This was the smoke cloud that always overhangs London, be the day never so fine or clear—a cloud, the extent and 'volume" of which may be gathered from the fact, that vegetation is earlier by a fortnight on the west and southwest sides of the metropolis, than at the northern and eastern sides—a circumstance alone attributable to the severity of the north and north-east winds being mitigated in their passage over London by the smoke belched from a million of coal fires into the hazy air. About ten miles from London the carriages, wagons, carts, indeed vehicles of every description, began to thicken--and every eminence of the highway that overlooked a long onward reach of the road, showed the mass denser and more dense, as it neared the metropolis.

"And this is London, is it not?" said I, as we entered upon a broad, continuous street, and saw others commencing on either side.

"Not yet—wait a bit," said the bluff, aldermanlike coachman.

We rose a slight ascent: "That is London!" said the driver, with conscious pride, as he pointed with his whip—"there's the village!"

I turned my head—for with boyish eagerness I had been looking right and left—before me lay the British metropolis, spread all round to the horizon in every direction—a thousand domes, towers, steeples, and turets piercing the dim atmosphere, St. Paul's, Westminister Abbey, the Tower, among them—a wilderness of architecture, thirty miles in circumference!"

Monsieur Kaintuck and the Fiddler.

On board the steamer Indiana, in one of her trips down the Mississippi, were a large number of good-natured passengers. They were seeking to while away the hours, according to their several notions of pleasure, and would have got on very well but for one annoyance. There happened to be on board a Hoosier from the Wabash, who was going 'down to Orleans,' and he had provided himself with an old violin, fancying that he could fiddle as well as the best man, and planting himself where he would attract notice, scraped away. The fellow couldn't fiddle any more than a setting hen, and the horrible noise disturbed his fellow passengers excessively. A Frenchman, of very delicate nerves, and a very fine musical ear, was especially annoyed. He fluttered, fidgetted, and swore at the "sacre" fiddle. The passengers tried various expedients to rid themselves of the Hoosier and his fiddle; it was no go—"he would music just as long as he d——d please." At last, a big Kentuckian sprang from his seat, saying, "I reckon I'll fix him," placed himself near the amateur fiddler, and commenced braying with all his might. The effect of the move was beyond description. "Old Kentuck" brayed so loud that he drowned the screeching of the fiddle, and amid the shouts of the passengers, the discomfitted Hoosier, retreated below, leaving the victory of the unequal contest with the Kentuckian and his singular and impromptu imitation of Balaam's friend. The delight of the Frenchman knew no bounds; quiet was restored for the day. During the night the Kentuckian left the boat. The next morning, after breakfast, the passengers were startled by the discordant sound of their old tormentor; Hoosier had discovered that the coast was clear, and was bound to revenge himself on the passengers. Louder and worse than ever screamed the fiddle. The Frenchman, just seated to read his paper, on the first sound rose, looked anxiously around, shrugged his sholders and then shouted, "Vare is he? vare is he? Queeck, queeck! Mon Dieu! Vare is Monsieur Kaintuck, de man vat played on de jackass!"

Egyptain Ideas of Beauty.

Verily it takes all sorts of people to make a world. An Egyptian sees no beauty except in mountains of fat, and as a consequence, the ladies of Pharaoh-land resort to all sorts of practices to secure the kind of beauty in demand. We are told that "the women of Egypt in order to acquire a degree of fatness, bathe themselves several days in lukewarm water. They stay so long in their baths that they eat and drink therein. During the time they are in the bath, they take every half hour some broth made of a fat pullet, and stuffed with sweet almonds, hazel nuts, dates, and pistachio nuts. After taking this kind of broth four times, they eat a pullet all but the head. When they come out of the bath, they are rubbed over with perfumes and sweet-scented pomatum, and after that some of them take myrobalms before going to bed; others take a draught prepared with gum tragacanth and sugar candy."

☞To see a wasp-waisted young lady in ringlets and an abundance of flounces, gracefully sail to the head of a table, and with a voice as angelic as a tenor flute, call to a waiter for a plate of cold pork and beans, is the most trying thing that romance can encounter.

☞An elderly lady being asked how it happened that she remained single, replied by saying that she never saw the man yet that she would consent to cook three meals a day for during life.

Truth Stranger than Fiction.

MOUTH TO MOUTH TESTIMONY BY SOME OF THE THOUSANDS CURED BY HAMPTON'S VEGETABLE TINCTURE.

PALPITATION OF THE HEART.

PORT ROYAL, VA., July 27th 1852.

MESSRS. MORTIMER & MOWBRAY: Gents—We have again to send an order for more of your truly wonderful "Hampton's Vegetable Tincture." Since it was first tried it has sold without an effort, and we have not seen the first person who has not been greatly benefitted by its use. A gentleman of our neighborhood was induced to try the Tincture for a violent palpitation of the heart. He had suffered so much from it that he said he had prayed for death. He had taken but three doses when he assured us he would not take five hundred dollars for the benefit he had derived, and that he should never cease to remember us with gratitude for calling his attention to so valuable a medicine. Yours truly,
GRAY & PENDLETON.

Are you Sick.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS,

Ask for "Hampton's Vegetable Tincture." The many cures made by this pleasant and safe remedy may introduce counterfeiting.

A Medicine must have merit, and great merit too, to stand the test of public opinion. No art of puffing can galvanize a worthless article so as too keep it up as a good medicine if it be not really so.

A GOOD MEDICINE will live, become popular, and extend its sales year after year, in spite of opposition. The people readily find out its virtues, and the fame of them passes from mouth to mouth with more rapidity than newspapers can spread it. A living witness testifying to the cure a medicine has made for him is of far more service than any newspaper advertising.

In proof of what we say above, we refer you to HAMPTON'S VEGETABLE TINCTURE, and its effects.

The Wife of T. W. Yeahle, Grocer, 76 Pearl street, cured of Rheumatism of 8 years' standing; all other remedies failed.

W. A. Schaeffer, Esq., one of the oldest Magistrates and most highly respectable citizens, cured of great weakness, and restored to robust health.

Jarrett Plummer, 153 E. Baltimore street, suffered intensely for six years with hip disease and mercurial rheumatism; cured after all other remedies failed.

Space will not permit to name hundreds of others as Geo W. Goodrich, Capt. Thomas Canot, Robert Gault, James Smyth, cured of Rheumatism.

John Pervail, S. A. Griffin, John Lukes Rev. V. Eskridge, U. S. N., and thousand, others cured of Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Cough, Liver Complaints, Bronchits, St. Vitu's Dance, &c. We refer you to your own citizens. Call on them.

COUGH, CONSUMPTION, &c.

Mr. Henry C. Winn had a cough for 5 years; great weakness, &c., had in all 5 or 6 physicians; tried all their remedies, but was cured only by HAMPTON'S VEGETABLE TINCTURE.

DR. HAMPTON, the author of this great "Hampton's Vegetable Tincture," is in his 80th year, in good health, so that it will be seen it is not an article got up to impose on the public.

Call and get pamphlets gratis, with history of discovery of this wonderful Blood Purifier, and see certificates of our own citizens, of Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Scrofula, Liver Complaint, General Weakness, Nervousness, &c., &c.

GLENN SPRINGS, Jan. 9th, 1853.

Messrs. BEACH & BROWNSON—SIRS: I send for another bottle of your "Marchisi's Uterine Catholicon." My wife has been afflicted for eleven years, and a variety of means has been restored for relief, but none was obtained until I received this medicine from you. Its influence seems almost magical: there was a manifest improvement from the day it was taken.

As there are a great many females in our country laboring under the affliction for which your medicine proposes a remedy, I feel it a duty to recommend it to all such.

MEDICAL HOUSE,

NO. 16, SOUTH FREDERICK STREET,

BALTIMORE, MD.,

ESTABLISHED IN ORDER TO AFFORD THE AFFLICTED SOUND AND SCIENTIFIC MEDICAL AID, AND FOR THE SUPPRESION OF QUACKERY.

DR. J. B. SMITH has for many years devoted his whole attention to the treatment of private Complaints, in all their varied and complicated forms. His great success in those long standing and difficult cases, such as were formerly considered incurable, is sufficient to commend him to the public as worthy of the extensive patronage he has received. Within the last eight years Dr. S. has treated more than 29,200 cases of Private Complaints, in their different forms and stages; a practice which no doubt exceeds that of all the other physicians now advertising in Baltimore, and not a single case is known where his directions were strictly followed, and medicines taken a reasonable time, without effecting a radical and permanent cure; therefore persons afflicted with diseases of the above nature, "no matter how difficult or long standing the case may be," would do well to call on DR. SMITH, at his office, No. 16, S. FREDERICK STREET, and if not effectually relieved no remuneration will be required for his services. His medicines are free from Mercury and all mineral poisons, put up in a neat and compact form, and may be taken in a public or private house, or while travelling, without exposure or hindrance from business; and except in cases of violent inflamation, no change of diet is necessary

STRICTURES. Dr. Smith has discovered a new method by which he can cure the worst form of stricture, and that without pain or inconvenience to the patient. Irritation of the uretha, of prostrate gland, or neck of the bladder, is sometimes mistaken for stricture by general practitioners or charlatans.

YOUNG MEN and others afflicted with Seminal Debility, whether originating from a Certain Destructive Habit, or from any other cause, with the train of bodily and mental evils which follow, when neglected, should make an early application, thereby avoiding much trouble and suffering, as well as expense. By his improved method of treatment, Dr. S. can safely guarantee a speedy and perfect cure in all cases of this complaint.

TO FEMALES. All diseases peculiar to Females, (such as Suppression, Irregularities, &c.) speedily and effectually removed. The efficacy of his remedies, for the cure of the above affections, have been well tested in an extensive practice for the last twelve years.

DR. SMITH'S "PREVENTIVES," for Married Ladies, whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their family, may be obtained as above. Price $5.

SUMMER.

BY NORMAS TAYLOR.

How beautiful is Summer,
With her skies so mild and blue,
With her hills and vales of green;
And her flowers of every hue;
With her green and waving forests,
From whose shades is stealing forth,
The wild bird's thrilling music,
(The sweetest sounds of earth;)
With her bright and sparkling streams,
And her mild and balmy air,
Of all, of all the seasons,
Summer is most fair.

How beautiful is Summer,
When her clouds sublimely grand,
Wheel above the western hills,—
Throw their shadows o'er the land;
When across the gathered gloom,
The vivid lightnings fly,
And the thunder's crashing valley,
Rolls fierce along the sky,
And the crystal rain, in torrents,
Falls through the sultry air,
Of all, of all the seasons,
Summer is most fair.

How beautiful is Summer,
How glorious her train,
The cloud, the rolling thunder,
The lightning's fiery chain:
And the bright smile of the sun,
Oft mirrored on the storm,
The beauteous type of mercy,
The rainbow's lovely form:
Sweet birds and gentle flowers,
All, all are gathered there,
Of all, of all the seasons,

Getting Married.

The New Orleans Picayune relates a little incident which transpired in one of the Eastern towns last summer. It occurred in church, on one of those quiet afternoons when all the world seems ready to drop asleep—when the flies buzz lazily on the window panes, and the dog lies on the door-stone. The afternoon service had ended, and the congregation were arranging themselves for the benediction, when to the great astonishment and the manifest interest of the worshippers, the good parson decended from the pulpit to the desk below, and said, in a calm, clear voice—"Those wishing to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony, will now please to come forward."

A deep stillness instantly fell over the congregation, broken only by the rustling of silk, as some pretty girl or excited matron changed her position, to catch the first view of the couple to be married. No one, however, arose or seemed in the least inclined to arise. Whereupon the worthy clergyman, deeming his first notice unheard or misunderstood, repeated the invitation:—

"Let those wishing to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony, now come forward."

Still no one stirred. The silence became almost audible, and a painful sense of the awkwardness of the position was gradually spreading among those present, when a young gentleman who had occupied a vacant seat in the broad aisle during the service, slowly arose, and deliberately walked to the foot of the altar. He was good-looking and well dressed, but no one knew him, and no female accompanied his travels. When he arrived within a respectable distance of the clergyman, he paused, and, with a reverent bow, stepped to one side of the aisle; but neither said anything, nor seemed at all disconcerted at the idea of being married alone. The clergyman looked anxiously around for the bride, who, he supposed, was yet to arrive, and at length remarked to the young gentleman in an under tone:

"The lady, sir, is dilatory."

"Very, sir."

"Had we not better defer the ceremonyz"

"I think not. Do you suppose she will be here soon?"

"Me, sir!" said the astonished shepherd; "how should I know of your lady's movements? That is a matter belonging to yourself?"

A few moments more were suffered to elapse in this unpleasant state of expectancy, when the clergyman renewed his interrogatories.

"Did the lady promise to attend at the present hour, sir?"

"What lady?"

"Why the lady, to be sure, that you are waiting here for."

"I did not hear her say anything about it," was the unsatisfactory response.

"Then, sir, may I ask why you are here, and for what purpose you trifle with me in this manner?" said the somewhat enraged clerical."

"I come, sir, simply because you invited all those wishing to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony to step f
