DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and Scrofulous affections—the King of Blood Purifiers.

DR. JOHN BULL'S VEGETABLE WORM DESTROYER is prepared in the form of candy drops, attractive to the sight and pleasant to the taste.

THE ARCTIC SURVIVORS.

The Meeting Between Greely, his Wife and His Mother.

The Arctic survivors met with a hearty reception at Portsmouth. When the Secretary's barge was seen to leave the Tennessee with Mrs. Greely and her two brothers, G. O. and C. A. Nesmuth, sitting in the stern sheets, Commander Schley said to Lieut. Greely:

"Lieutenant, I would like to see you in my cabin for a few moments." Commander Schley entertained Lieut. Greely in conversation about Arctic matters until a peculiar signal was given, or a boatswain's whistle to indicate that Mrs. Greely was on board and ready to meet her husband. Now the lady trembled in every limb, her breath came in gasps, and her whole frame shook with emotion. With trembling steps she went to the cabin door, and just at the instant she entered. Commander Schley left the room, leaving the long separated couple alone. Lieutenant Greely was sitting with his back to the door, but when Commander Schley so abruptly left him, he turned and at the same instant saw his wife enter. With a loud cry that was more like a gigantic sob half smothered, Lieutenant Greely bounded from his chair with eyes gleaming in joy at the sight that gladdened them. Mrs. Greely, tall, dark, and stately, sprang forward to meet her husband, crying, "Arthur! Arthur home!" After Mr. and Mrs. Greely had been alone for twenty minutes, her brothers were called in and cordially and tearfully greeted their brother-in-law. It was noticeable on board the Thetis that everybody shed tears when Mrs. Greely entered the cabin where her husband was.

Late in the afternoon the mother of Lieut. Greely came from Newburyport, and was taken at once on board the Tennessee. Shortly after she was put in the Secretary's barge and taken on board the Thetis. When she arrived there Mr. and Mrs. Greely and the latter's brothers were seated in Commander Schley's cabin, alternately crying and laughing, and embracing. An instant before the Lieutenant's mother entered the cabin, Commander Schley stepped to the door and said: "Lieutenant, your mother is here." Mrs. Greely then entered and threw her arms around her son's neck, saying only: "My son! My son!" Lieutenant Greely spoke no word, save "Mother!" but in his tone and expression there was a world of tenderness. Clasping his mother in his arms the Lieutenant did nothing else but sob, while the mother cried like a child. Fearing the excitement would be too much for Lieut. Greely's shattered constitution, Commander Schley entered the cabin and wisely directed the conversation into less emotional channels.

A FEAST OF POISON.

Five Persons Eat Strychnine in Jest—One Dead—The Others in Great Danger.

Mrs. Boyle, wife of a milkman, keeps a boarding house at No. 417 North Nineteenth street, Philadelphia, Pa. Just before supper on Friday, Thomas Moran, one of her boarders, said he was hungry. Mrs. Kelley, the housekeeper, was getting supper ready. She heard the young man's remark, stepped to the mantel, picked up a box of pills, and tossing it to him, said jokingly, "If you are hungry eat these." He laughed and answered, "I decled I can eat them all." He had chewed up fourteen before he asked any further questions. He dared Mrs. Kelley to assist him at the feast of pills. She took the box and swallowed ten. Then Annie Kelley, aged seventeen, not to be outdone by the rest of the party, swallowed twenty. Then Bridget Boyle, aged forty-five, contributed to the general hilarity by masticating thirteen, and then Daniel Gallagher, aged nineteen, wound up the pharmaceutical feast by taking the rest. Originally there had been one hundred pills in that box, but some had been taken prior to this evening. About this time it occurred to somebody to ask what they had been eating, but before any answer was made every member of the family fell in convulsions. Mrs. Kelley and Gallagher dashed into the yard. Their distemper showed symptoms quite similar to hydrophobia. Mrs. Boyle, Miss Kelley and Moran rolled about the dining room floor in great agony.

Medical aid was at once summoned, and the dreadful discovery was made that the family had eaten strychnine pills, one twentieth of a grain each. One-half a grain of this poison will kill. Despite all the efforts of two physicians Miss Kelley died in indescribable agony at half-past nine. Her mother is not expected to live. The others will probably recover. Moran's life was saved by a prompt dose of salt and water administered by a policeman. Altogether it is a remarkable case.

THE DYNAMITERS.

Dramatic Scenes in the English Court at Their Sentence.

The conclusion of the trial of John Daly, James Egan, and William McDonnell in Warwick resulted in a scene of most dramatic interest. McDonnell, who pleaded guilty to the charge of treasonable felony, was released on bail to appear at any time if called upon. James Egan was sentenced to penal servitude for twenty years, and John Daly for life.

After the verdict Daly was asked whether he had anything to urge why sentence should not be passed upon him. Amid the breathless silence Daly burst out into an impassioned speech. He argued that nothing had been proved against him, except that he had borne an assumed name. But the Queen moved about under an assumed name. Why had not he as good a right? He asked for justice, not mercy. He was gratified that he was on trial before Englishmen. There was no clap-trap, as in Ireland.

He was, he said, guilty of treason and felony only as every Irishman who dearly loved his country, who prays for her peace and would die for her freedom, is guilty of the same crime. Like every member of his race he was prepared to shed the last drop of his blood for Ireland. The remedy for the hostility of the Irish to the British Crown was not, he said, in repression and prosecution. "Give us," he said, "our freedom and our own laws; give us our own Parliament and our own Government! That, and that alone, will satisfy the heart of Ireland."

MAUD S.'S RECORD BEATEN.

The Little Black Wonder, Jay-Eye-See, the King of the Turf.

Jay-Eye-See, the little black wonder of the West, circled the track of Providence, R. I., on Friday, in 2:10 sharp, excelling all previous records by a quarter of a second. To warm him up he went around the track in 2.22½.

When the word was given Jay-Eye-See was off like a shot, and the runner, who was several hundred yards in the rear, had a lively time catching up, but lapped Jay's wheel at the three-eighths, and there he hung, his presence, of course, being a continual incentive to the gamy little black to do his best. The quarter had been passed in 33½ seconds, and at the half the watches showed 1:05, remarkable time. Still the little horse trotted as square as a die, without lifting his nose, and without the whip being raised. The three-quarters was passed in 1:38, and then people began to be anxious. Would he be able to keep up the pace? Would he break at the turn? A thousand watches were held in the palm, and six thousand pairs of eyes were focused down the stretch. Still on and on he sped, rounded the turn without a break, and dashed down the homestretch like a black streak of lightning. Just before he reached the wire the running horse swung out opposite, and its driver yelled. Bithers put the whip lightly to the trotter, and he went under the wire in 2:10—the fastest time in the world. The last quarter was done in the time of 2:04.

Jay-Eye-See's triumph was short-lived, Maud S. doing a mile in 2:09¾ on Saturday.

CHINA REFUSES TO PAY.

War with France Believed to be Inevitable—Natives and Foreigners Leaving Foo Choo.

The London Times has a dispatch from Foo Choo, dated July 31, which says: "China has refused to pay the indemnity demanded by France. The time granted to China by France to decide has been prolonged beyond Aug. 1. A secret edict has been issued ordering the Chinese not to molest foreigners. French civilians and mandarins, however, assert that the lives of foreigners are not safe. The English flagship is landing sailors to act in defence of the foreigners in Foo Choo. The China merchant fleet has been sold to an American firm for nearly 5,250,000 taels—nearly $7,500,000. War to all appearances is imminent."

A later dispatch from Foo Choo to Reuter's Telegram Company asserts that the general impression in that city is that war between France and China is inevitable. Both natives and foreigners are leaving the city. Marines landed from the British corvette Champion, assisted by the gunboat Merlin, are guarding the foreign settlement.

Fatal Explosion of a Rocket.

A fatal explosion occurred at the house of Henry Upmeir, Cincinnati, O., Wednesday morning. A young son of Mr. Upmeier brought home an unexploded rocket that had fallen from the Highland House, where there had been an exhibition of fireworks. The lad tried to open the rocket, but failing to do so his mother seized a hatchet and dealt it a severe blow. The explosion followed. Mrs. Upmeier and her daughter Ida, aged twelve years, were fatally injured; Charles Upmeier, aged six years, and Philip Hill, aged ten, were badly hurt and the room in which the explosion occurred was badly wrecked. The rocket thus exploded weighed six pounds.

NEWS FROM EGYPT.

Five Hundred People Killed—Gen. Gordon Safe.

A despatch from Suakim says: "The friendly tribes on the mainland, near Agig, have been massacred. Five hundred persons were killed. Seventeen thousand rebels are around Suakim and make nightly attacks upon the town, coming within short range of the garrison. The sailors and marines landed, but the rebels fearlessly danced and waved their spears in broad daylight within two miles of the fort."

A letter from General Gordon, dated June 11, emphasizes the necessity of his remaining to protect Kassala. He says that his soldiers are in good spirits and are only waiting the rising of the Nile to destroy the rebels.

A merchant who left Kassala on June 21 says before starting he read a letter from Gen. Gordon to the Mudir of Kassala, dated June 11. According to this Gen. Gordon was safe and had abundant supplies of provisions and ammunition. He was short of money, however, and was raising funds by issuing bonds. He was hemmed in on all sides by rebels. As soon as the Nile rose his intention was to equip steamers. At Kassala, the merchant says, there were supplies of provisions sufficient to last five months. The population at Kaddarif have joined the Mahdi.

The inhabitants of Dongola, through the Mudir, have sent a dispatch to the General commanding at Assouan, declaring their loyalty and expressing regret for their wavering in the past. The telegram is regarded as a proof that the Mahdi's influence is waning.

An Arab trader who has arrived at Assouan from Amarar says it was reported there that Osman Digma was killed on July 18 by a member of the Bishareen tribe, whose nephew Osman stabbed because he refused to join the rebels.

The London Times has received from Alexandria the following translation of an Arabic telegram dated Dongola, July 25: The Mudir, with two battalions of bashi-bazouks, a detachment of mounted infantry, some guns and 4,000 armed volunteers, attacked and defeated a rebel sheik named Ahmet-el-Hoda, who was intrenched in the Ambukel district, among the ruins in the mountains. The rebels were driven completely out of the province, and Dongola is now safe and tranquil. A messenger from General Gordon has arrived with a letter for the Mudir and is awaiting a reply.

UNITED IN SUICIDE.

Two Beautiful Young Sisters Take Their Lives on the Same Day.

A sad double suicide of two beautiful young girls took place near Gadsecn, Ala., Tuesday night. Lucy and Texana Jones were two lovely sisters, living in Etowah county, Ala. Their ages were seventeen and nineteen years. Their parents are well to do and they stood high in the community and were dashing ladies in the country society. On Saturday last a young man who had been paying the elder sister devoted attentions unexpectedly fled the country, and the girl seemed very despondent and suffering great mental agony. She was with her younger sister constantly, and the latter offered her consolation and endeavored to buoy her up.

Tuesday the elder disclosed her purpose of committing suicide, and repairing to the orchard hung herself to a large tree. No sooner had she gone when the younger girl secluded herself in an upper room and hung herself with a chest suspended from a ceiling joist. The distracted parents soon returned and found their two daughters cold in death. It is feared they will lose their minds.

MURDER AND CREMATION.

A Crime Well Concealed and its Perpetrator Beyond Pursuit.

The entire community of Bellaire, Ohio, are greatly exercised over the supposed murder and cremation of a farmer named John Williams by his stepson, John A. Webb. A few days after the disappearance of Williams a strong smell of burning clothing was observed by a farmer and his wife, and going to the spot from whence the smell originated, they saw the remains of a pile of sawbark.

When this was burned to the ground, as the story is told, there was a bulge in the centre about six feet long. The farmer's suspicion was aroused, and next morning he and a neighbor visited the spot again. They found the elevation had disappeared and the ground where the fire had been raked over and smoothed down. They found parts of bones or ivory buttons in the ashes, and other evidences of a body having been burned. Before steps could be taken looking to Webb's arrest, that worthy left for Mexico and is now beyond pursuit.

HEARTRENDING SCENES.

The Sinking of the Dione at Midnight in the Thames.

The following particulars have been learned regarding the collision and sinking of the steamer Dione in the Thames Saturday night: There were a great many pleasure passengers on board the vessel. It was a clear, moonlight night. The collision occurred at about midnight with the large iron steamer Camden, just off Gravesend. The Dione's port side was stove in, and the vessel keeled over and sunk in two minutes. Those who were saved rushed on deck and jumped overboard half dressed and were rescued by tugs. The scenes are described as terrible and heartrending. Ladies implored men to save their children. Many women were carrying infants. One mother placed her infant on a floating crate. The crate drifted away, but was found later off Thameshaven, the infant alive and sound. The captain of the Dione was saved, but was badly hurt.

Texas Fever in Chicago.

The arrival of a number of sick cattle having been reported at the Union Stock Yards, Chicago, an examination was made by a number of veterinarians. They have agreed that the disorder is Texas fever, superinduced by drinking water strongly impregnated with alkali. The cattle have been quarantined and isolated. Those in the lot that are unaffected are to be shipped, subject to the inspection of the Health Department. Those that are unable to recover are being shot, and those that are drooping will be held in quarantine for further developments. Car-loads of cattle are affected, and many are dying on the road. Five hundred have been killed.

Pauper Immigration.

A decision of the Treasury department affirms that the action of the Emigration Commissioners, declaring certain immigrants to be paupers and not allowing them to land, is not subject to revision by the department. The law places the authority with the commission. Commissioner Stephenson, of New York, on Saturday detained over thirty Italians, as paupers, who arrived there on the steamer Trinacria of the Anchor line. Commissioner Stephenson says that the passage of several of the Italians who are detained on the Trinacria was paid by a contractor in this country at the rate of $25 each on condition that the immigrants would pay him $60 within a short time after their landing.

A Sad Incident.

A sad incident in connection with the cholera panic happened recently near Arles, France. A lad at work on a farm was seized with vomiting. The farmer refused to allow him to enter the house, and the poor fellow died in the field without care and alone. When the father of the lad arrived he was not permitted to place his son's body in the stable, but was forced to leave it in the open air while he went to town to procure a coffin. He then conveyed the body on a wheelbarrow to the burial authorities, who refused to give him assistance, and the father was finally compelled to bury the body in the cemetery alone.

The Country's Defenceless Condition.

The Chief of Engineers of the army has received the annual reports of all the engineer officers in charge of coast and harbor defence. They reiterate their assertion of last year that the Atlantic coast and lake fronts are in an almost defenceless condition. The majority of the defences are said to be falling into decay, and the armament in most instances is so far behind the times as to be utterly worthless. General Newton, it is understood, will in his annual report urge immediate provision for the adequate protection of harbors by batteries and fortifications of modern design.

Art in Rome.

Mr. Burne Jones has just completed a design for the decoration of the apse in the American Protestant Church in Rome. The centre picture will represent Christ seated and holding the world in his left hand. Archangels are pictured around the Saviour and an angelic host is represented above, with the rivers of Revelation rolling beneath. The entire design is of Venetian mosaic and covers a circumference of 900 feet of the dome.

Gen. Sheridan in Society.

The Boston Traveler says: No end of amusement has been afloat in Washington during the past winter over the mistakes of Gen. Sheridan. The General, of course, moves in the very highest circles of society, and during the season he has been introduced to hundreds of ladies and gentlemen. He is one of the most polite and agreeable of gentlemen, and has a perfect horror of offending any one through an intentional oversight. After the General had been to a few receptions he found that he was totally unable to recall the names and even the faces of fully two-thirds of the persons who had been introduced to him. Driven to desperation, he adopted the novel plan of bowing to everybody. Now no one thinks of introducing a friend to General Sheridan. The proper thing in society is to introduce yourself. The General won't know the difference, and he will greet you with all the affability of an old friend.
