Exhibits of Charming Gowns

THIS is the season of openings, and the openings mean a display of the choicest of imported garments. We have seemingly returned to our fondness for Parisian designed gowns, and the importers are offering them to us in unlimited quantities and unlimited varieties.

The imported models are a drain upon any vocabulary this season. One says "exquisite, lovely, beautiful, dainty, chic, smart." Then one begins again and repeats the list. Even the buyers themselves lapse into enthusiasm and declare that there was never before in Paris such an embarrassment of riches to puzzle the soul of a conscientious buyer; that the Parisian dressmakers have never before achieved such uniform success.

In one exhibit of imported gowns was a frock of heavy, coarse ecru crash with applique of deep red silk and trimming of heavy ecru lace, and its originality justified faith in its sponsor. The mingling of materials never before supposed to consort amicably is a marked feature of the new models. This heavy crash frock with its silk applique is but one of a long line of cotton and silk combinations, and cloth is used for trimmings of everything from sheerest batiste to lace and satin.

A NEW SHORT SKIRT FROM PARIS.

In the same exhibit which included the gown already described was an exquisite white lingerie frock with tucks, hems and various ornamentations of sheerest white silk set in the filmy batiste with elaborate open work. Another model in cream lace over chiffon was trimmed in white cloth. Linen gowns, too, bore cloth trimmings, and, on the other hand, linen appeared as trimming for cloth, lace and even for mousseline.

Daintiest of all the models were the lingerie, silk mousseline, chiffon and net frocks. The new modes lend themselves particularly well to development in these thin stuffs, and the materials themselves are beautiful beyond description.

AN AFTERNOON STREET MODEL FROM PARIS.

Handwork in all its forms is lavished upon these frocks, yet they retain a most misleading air of sweet simplicity, and do not jump at the eyes as did many of the modes of past seasons. The general impression produced is one of picturesque grace and harmony, of soft flowing lines and delicate tints.

It is not until one examines the delectable whole that one realizes how much art and time have gone into the making. Multitudes of fine hand tucks, open work, inset lace, shirrings, are on the fine lingerie frocks.

One has its blouse and skirt yoke barred off into inch squares by the tiniest of tucks. Another has for its striking feature a sunflower center being formed of closely bunched French knots, the petal effect given by radiating lines of infinitesimal hand tucks in the material.

Clothes for a City Vacation

It is always well to be just a trifle ahead of the fashions rather than behind them if that is possible. There is always so much more satisfaction in wearing a gown, or sacque, or hat that is new and novel than there is in one that has become common. Believe me, there is no greater extravagance on earth than to be behind the modes, since possessions are cast aside half worn-out, simply because they have ceased to please. There is no more strange and unaccountable influence on earth than that of dress, and only the few, perhaps, take into true consideration the large factor it is in the manners, temper and general conduct of the community.

While the city woman is planning for her vacation in the country the country woman is planning for her annual spring or summer trip to the city. Some wait until they arrive in the city to buy clothes, but this I consider unwise, as the home merchant carries the same stock as is found in the city, and at much the same prices, while the woman who buys at home has the advantage of more time for pleasure when she reaches the city. It is for these women who will visit the city that I offer the illustrations given here. One is of a charming little satin sacque which a certain clever importer has brought over from Paris, and, while the original is an expensive garment, it can easily offer a suggestion for one of much less cost. This acquaintance of mine is possessed of a particularly nice feeling for chiffons, which accounts in a measure for this importation. The satin employed is of soft souple quality, and the lace very effective medallion patterned guipure in a delicate ecru tint. The elegance of the stole ends is self evident, but my word must be taken for the clever cut of the collar at the back, which has the appearance of just holding the sacque into the figure. I do not know when anything has more pleasantly satisfied my eye than this chic little coatee, and I am given to understand it may be exploited in a variety of fabrics and decorations. The chapeau hails direct from Paris, and is of black chip, the brim resting on an underbrim of tussore chip, its sole ornamentation comprising an immensely long ostrich feather, shading from white to tussore at the tips. The companion toque is an ephemeral thing of white tulle, the brim outlined by rose leaves, and upheld at the left side by a wreath of roses and handful of soft cream lace.

Tailor gowns are a necessity in either the country or the city, and for this reason the woman who intends spending a vacation time in the latter will make no mistake in providing herself with one. One pretty model in tailor fashion is a little triple cape, dropping into points over either shoulder, that is prepared to stamp its wearer as thoroughly au fait. It is, I am persuaded, due only to these capes and clever sleeves that the banded bolero is still permitted to pursue the even tenor of its way, otherwise should we condemn without hesitation such ubiquity.

ELLEN OSMONDE.

TOLD OF PUBLIC MEN.

Herbert W. Bowen, minister to Venezuela; Judge Taft, governor of the Philipines, and Judge Hunt, governor of Porto Rico, were classmates at Yale and were close friends.

Senator McComas was pressing an amendment to a pending bill when there were about half a score of other members on the floor. It came to a vote at length and only Mr. McComas responded to the call for ayes. No one voted "no" and President Pro Tem. Frye gravely proclaimed: "The aye has it."

Among the many hobbies of Senator George F. Hoar are his fondness for trolley trips and dime novels. The senator's favorite time for reading hair-raising publications is while traveling, and he declares he gets keen enjoyment out of the plots and impossible characters. The senator is as well a student of history. At his home in Worcester he lives in an atmosphere of history. One of his chief means of recreation in Washington is a long trolley trip.

President Roosevelt was telling a friend about his mail, which averages 500 or 600 letters a day: "One of the most remarkable letters I ever received," he said, "arrived on the morning the first full accounts of the Martinique disaster were printed in the newspapers. The writer said he saw that the American consul at Martinique had been burned to death. He applied for the place and wound up with this sentence: 'I make this early application so as to get in ahead of those loathsome creatures, the office-seekers.'"

In connection with the recent visit to Washington of Bill Sewall, the president's Maine guide, a story is told of a moose hunt in which they were companions some years ago. They were camping in the woods and one morning Mr. Roosevelt saw a moose not far from the camp. He grabbed his rifle and fired. Sewall came running up and said: "You've got him. How did it happen?" "Why, I aimed at his breast and hit the vital spot, I suppose," was the answer. "Well, you done fine, anyhow," said Bill. "You shot him in the eye."

INDIVIDUALITIES.

Abraham Lincoln, the oldest male survivor of the family from which descended the president, is living at Lacy Springs, Va.

Five millionaires died in the United Kingdom during the past financial year. Of these the largest fortune was left by Earl Fitzwilliam; it amounted to £2,949,000.

James Kerr, an artist whose paintings have been prominently hung in the Paris salon, was found crippled and nearly frozen to death near Detroit, Minn., recently, and, being out of his mind, was sent to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls. He was once wealthy, and his work was in demand at high prices.

Tata, a Parsee multi-millionaire of Bombay, is reported as entertaining the ambition to rival J. Pierpont Morgan as an organizer of a huge steel trust. His scheme comprehends the development of the iron ore deposits of central India, and he is said to have secured the favor of the Indian government and leading commercial interests of India.

Lloyd-Griscom, en route by way of his native land to his new post as minister to Japan, has reached London from Teheran. He says the shah of Persia has queer ideas about geography. The ruler expressed a desire to visit the United States and asked if he could go all the way by the Siberian railroad or if it took more than one day to cross the Atlantic. He was greatly distressed when Minister Griscom enlightened him.

WHY?

The reason One Minute Cough Cure relieves a cough in one minute, is because it acts first on the mucous membrane right where the cough troubles—in the throat or deep-seated on the lungs, destroying the microbes or cough germs and clearing the phlegm.
One Minute Cough Cure not only destroys the disease germs, and clears out their poison, but it gives strength and elasticity to the delicate membranes which protect the throat and lungs. Opens the air passages and promotes unobstructed breathing. Causes the blood to receive its natural supply of oxygen, thus exhilarating the pulmonary organs with such strength and vigor that the lungs and bronchial tubes become bulwarks against the inception of disease. Asthma, Bronchitis, La Grippe, Cold on the Lungs and all Pulmonary Complaints that are curable are quickly cured by the use of
