Help Your Town.

A town is very much like an individual. To be flourishing, it must have energy and enterprise. The people in a town should remember that the individual prosperity depends to a large extent upon the character of the place in which their business is located. Every public measure should be liberally supported by all, especially the business men. At the present day there is as much competition between towns as there is among persons and business enterprises. A man seeking a location will invariably select a town that is up to times, and is eagerly in favor of every modern improvemont. A town in these modern times can't afford to be peopled with old fogies or antediluvian fossils who are continually kicking at every enterprise. To make a flourishing town you must believe in its future and work for it, encouraging every improvement. Make a special effort to exhibit some evidence of improvement in your work and character. Help every enterprise, and encourage every good man to locate in your town.

WON'T NEED A CRUTCH.

When editor J. P. Sossman, of Cornelius N. C., bruised his leg badly, it started an ugly sore. Many salves and ointments proved worth less. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve healed it thoroughly. Nothing is so prompt and sure for ulcers, Boils, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Corns, Sores, Pimples, Eczema or Piles. 25c at C. H. Redden's, Denton, A. L. Duffy, Hillsboro, Md.

What Have You Done?

A young man applied for a place as draftsman in a great establishment. The first question asked him was, "What have you done? Bring me some of your work."

A lad who had been taking a course in an industrial school is very proud of bringing out the different pieces of wood and iron he has wrought out. Some of them are very fine indeed. There are gates and pieces of wood morticed to gether; there are boxes and wide slabs of wood so nicely joined that one can scarcely see where they come together; and to cap the climax he shows the visitor a beautiful gavel and a neat cup turned by his own hands out of mahogany. In iron there are also many excellent pieces fashioned by the lad in school.

Everywhere the world wants men who have done something, or who show that they can do something. There is no place for the man who in answer to the question, "What have you done?" must say, "I have done nothing!" Very quickly the door swings shut in his face and he must either go to work and learn to do something or be set down as a failure in life.

Ask yourself this morning, "What can I do?" And if you can give only the answer "Nothing," set about it to-day, this very hour, to fit yourself for something.

Come now a step higher. Some day the question, "What have you done?" will be asked by One who has the widest field of labor of any in all the universe, and if the word, "Nothing!" slams a door in the face of men in this world, be sure that there will be far less hope of entrance into that wider realm for him who has nothing to show for the time he has spent here. Have you ever helped anybody? The world is full of men and women who need help. You meet them at every turn. What have you done to make anyone's burden lighter? Is there a friend who has been lifted over a tight place by you? Have you ever spoken a kindly word to one in trouble? When the storm was black everywhere and the night was chill have you taken a lost wayfarer by the hand and led him out where the sun was shining? Have you kept your own heart clean and done the best you could to show somebody else how he may keep his so, too?

What have you done?—Onward.

Coldest Day of the Winter.

NEW YORK.—In 40 years New York city has not experienced so cold a February 7, and it was the coldest day of the present season. Three men lost their lives as the result of the cold wave, and a girl collapsed in the street and was taken to a hospital in a dying condition. At daybreak the thermometer registered but two above zero, with a searching wind from the northwest. The cold wave held up incoming trains and steamships. The Twentieth Century Limited was an hour late. Suffering among the East Side poor was intense. More persons sought shelter at the municipal lodging house and various missions than during the big blizzard of 1888. James Maxwell, 60 years old, died of exposure in a stable in Brooklyn. Ryer Schermerhorn, a retired school teacher, was found dead of the cold at the Market Street car barns, Paterson. Tessie Mussla, 21 years old, on her way to work was overcome by cold and exhaustion. She died in St. Vincent's Hospital.

BUFFALO.—Six degrees below zero was recorded in this city, the coldest weather of the winter. In addition to the death of Herman Snider, a Lake fisherman, who was frozen on the lake Sunday afternoon, will score another victim.

SARANAC LAKE.—Thermometers registered 45 below this morning, and at no time in the past two days has the mercury risen to 10 degrees below

PHILADELPHIA.—The bodies of two men were found on the streets of this city during the night, both having been frozen to death. In the anthracite coal regions the temperature is below zero. In the mountain sections of Pennsylvania mercury fell 10 below zero. In this city mercury was 5 degrees above.

BALTIMORE.—The coldest day of the winter was experienced Sunday, when mercury got down to a point just a little above 7 above zero. December 30 held the record so far for the coldest day this winter, the temperature having been 9 degrees.

What Her Plumes Cost.

There is testimony that one commercial plume-hunter in Florida boasted of having one season made a kill of 125,000 birds. All the collections in this country and Europe, caged or stuffed, do not embrace as many skins as are sold for millinery in one London auction in a year. Do you know that imports of millinery feathers to this country are valued at about $11,000,000, while the valuation of diamond imports at the last census was only about $12,000,000? Of course, hawks, cranes, owls, and black buzzards kill other birds or eat their eggs, or young. The dog, the cat, the alligator, the mongoose, and the fox must be found guilty, too, along with the pot-hunters; and woodsmen, sparing few trees and neglecting to provide for new growths, have been unwilling accomplices. Storms catching birds over great waters in migrating season, destroy great numbers by exhaustion.

But plume-hunters are at work all over the world. Not long ago a band of Japanese raiders were captured by an American war vessel on one of the Hawaiian Islands with a billion skins in their camp, accumulated for the Paris trade. When W. Alanson Bryan went to an outlying Hawaiian Island, he discovered that the little speck on the sea was yielding 50,000 skins every six months to traders.

In one recent instance, a physician and his two sons had been busy trying to "make a record." They had not killed because they could thus earn more in ten hours than otherwise in a month. They had not killed to keep breath and life in their best beloved. They had killed just to relieve a tedium. The tedium must have been entirely relieved; everywhere lay the dead bodies of the victims of the holiday.—Everybody's Magazine.

Clams are up to the high water mark in prices on Chincoteague, the hightest ever known there. The size which was sold some time ago for $3.00 is now worth $8.50 to $9.00 per thousand and the $5.00 size has gone up to $10.00 and $11.00.

The annual meeting of the Peninsula Produce Exchange of Maryland was held a few days ago in Berlin. The meeting was full of interest and was largely attended, representative farmers from all parts of the Peninsula being present. The association has made rapid strides since it was chartered in 1904. A dividend of 30 per cent. was made by the directors. It was decided to build a number of warehouses on the Eastern Shore for the storage of goods. It was also decided to have the charter so amended that in the future they can handle eggs. poultry and oysters.

When David Hickman, near Cambridge, went after the furniture left him by his uncle, the late William K. Scarborough, he came across something he did not expect to find. He was looking through a handsome walnut wardrobe which Mr. Scarborough had built himself, when he found, carefully packed away in a secret drawer, over one thousand dollars in $20 gold pieces, two hundred dollars in other gold and silver, and several hundred dollars in paper. Mr. Hickman immediately carried the money to the bank and reported his find to the Orphans' Court. The total amount was over $1500.

New York egg speculators, who boosted the price of hen fruit last year and materially increased their bank accounts, were caught napping this year, and it is estimated that they have lost between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 by storing eggs. Last summer they paid what were regarded as fancy prices, 23 and 24 cents a dozen, and took all that was offered. The highest price stored eggs ever reached was 28 cents early in January. The cost of keeping the eggs is between four and five cents a dozen, which, added to the original cost is a dead loss. The dealers say there is a loss of from 50 cents to $1 on every case in storage, and each case contains 30 dozen.

Sare Lungs and Raw Lungs.

"Our children of six and eight years have been since infancy subject to colds and croup. About three years ago I started to use Foley's Honey and Tar, and it has never failed to prevent and cure these troubles. It is the only medicine I can get the children to take without a row." The above from W. C. Ornstein, Green Bay, Wis, duplicates the experience of thousands of other users of Foley's Honey and Tar. C. H Redden, Denton

Although he is nearly 82 years old, Henry C. Maull, president of the Old Men's Club of Lewis, jumped out on the floor after the club had been delightfully dined at the home of Wm. T. Atkins, and danced a jig as if he was a youngster of 18. A splendid menu was presented, with a fine disregard of terrors of dyspepsia. Captain Tracey and David Coverdale racing to see which could eat the most in a way that set the younger members staring. Although every member is an old man all past 70 and many past 80, they still enjoy their frequent meetings.

After a two years' campaign of advertising in papers in different sections of the country, James H. Furbush, a wealthy Delaware farmer, is now the happy husband of an Oakland, Cal., woman. Furbush makes his home near Delmar, and has just returned to his home near that place with his wife. After careful consideration Furbush came to the conclusion that he wanted a Western wife, as he said Eastern women think too much of society and dress. He found a women that suited him exactly in the person of Mrs. Flapnagan, a wealthy widow with four children. The four children will make their home with the newly married couple.

Mr. John H. Quail, an old resident of Winchester, was killed Thursday night last on the track of the M. D. & V. Railroad, on the marsh on the mainland between the driveway and the Narrows, by a special engine. Captain Quail was walking on the tracks carrying a lantern and did not hear the engine as it approached as he was very deaf. He was struck before he could get off the track and before the engine could be stopped he was hurled some distance, being killed instantly. The captain was about 75 years of age. There is no blame to be attached to the railroad, as it was understood that they exercised every precaution necessary, the accident being due simply to the captain's deafness.

A Harford county, Md., farmer is again this year furnishing a New York merchant a few of his noted hot-house lambs, which are being eagerly bought at turkey prices before Christmas. The farmer has already made two shipments and will have more in the near future. A supply for this early market is possible only under the most favorable circumstances, it is reported. Selecting Dorsets and Shropshires as the most approved blood, by a careful selection of food, in which alfalfa plays a conspicuous part, these lambs are ready for the market in about nine weeks, weighing on an average fifty pounds, and commanding a price of $10. While such results can only be obtained by the closest personal attention, the very large profit in them makes it worthy of the highest ambition of leading feeders to get into the swim in this trade.

Governor Makes Appointments.

Governor Crothers sent in Monday night his first batch of appointments and, with few exceptions, he named officials who are now serving. The most important nomination is that of J. T. C. Williams, newspaper man and lawyer, for judge of the Juvenile Court for Baltimore City, to succeed Judge Jacob M. Moses, resigned.

Other appointments were the following:

Chief of the Bureau of Statistic and Information—Charles J. Fox, Baltimore county.

State Fire Marshal-Thos. J. Ewell, Baltimore.

Fish Commissioners—John H. Wade, of Washington county, for the Western Shore; Samuel J. Twilley, of Worchester, for the Eastern Shore.

The Governor intends to send in appointments from day to day as they are made up and decided upon. The time limit expires on February 24.

The Morgan Salutation.

Two men amused a crowd of railroad passengers in Long Island City Wednesday by kissing each other on the cheek. They looked like father and son—the old man, tall, hale and hearty, with a snow-white beard, the young man lean and muscular and straight as a pine. They care nothing for the scoffers around them, and there was no reason why they should. We have grown to ridicule the kiss as a form of salutation between men of all ties of blood or friendship. It was not always so, for kissing the cheek was a custom honored by the Jews, the Greeks and the Romans, and it survives. in an explosive sort of way, among the French. Here and there, however, in our rigidly undemonstrative American world, striking exceptions to the rule may be found. Thus J. Pierpont Morgan and his son show not the slighest hesitation in kissing the cheek in public. Always before a separation they salute each other in this way, and it hardly will be denied that they are men of vigorous stamp, both physically and mentally. There is a powerful bond of affection between the financial czar and his son and heir, and scores of times they have kissed heartily before a whole shipload of passengers, proceeding with a supreme and admirable indifference of what the world might think or say.

Some men are said to be self-made men. The meaning of this is that they began life without means and with meager advantages, and by dint of their own energy and industry have risen to distinction. Many take all the credit to themselves for their attainments and achievements. A great king once said, "Is not this great Babylon which I have builded?" There are modern men with like passions. They have never learned the lesson taught in the Bible that they have nothing which they have not received. They have not made all, nor earned all, nor won all, but received all.

Saint James says: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights." It is written in the Psalms, "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad." And the psalmist sings this to his soul: "Return, my soul, unto thy rest, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee." No man is self-made. God has made all that is good in us, and has freely given unto us all that is worth having. These mercies have come down to us through various channels, but all have come from God.—Christian Advocate.

Alaska's Coal Fields Richer than Her Gold Deposits.

While Alaska's gold reserves are large, they are in no way unique, for refined gold is the same, whatever the source. In the matter of coal resources, Alaska has no competitor. Its store of high-grade fuel cannot be equalled west of the Rockies. In fact to find anthracite and bituminous coal which compares in fuel value to that of Alaska, one must come east to Pennsylvania. These coals are, therefore, the key to the commercial situation on the west coast. For a high-grade steaming coal used for manufacturing industries or a merchant marine, or a coke for smelters in the Western States one must turn to Alaska. Hence the growing population of the west has a vital interest in the development of these coal-fields. These coals are of even national importance, for of all our Pacific possessions Alaska alone can supply our battleships with smokeless fuel.

The quantity of this anthracite and bituminous coal is not as yet determined, but certainly it is not unlimited, and hence should not be wasted. To use it, however will not be to waste it, unless it be improperly mined. A surveyed area of about 100 square miles is known to be underlain by these coals, and it is probable that further investigation may show an extension of the field. A rough estimate of quantity within this surveyed area gave some six billion tons, or more than one and one half times the entire production of Pennsylvania since coal mining began. It is fair to assume that this coal is worth a dollar a ton, which would make its total value about forty times as great as the entire gold output of Alaska to the present time. It is probable, therefore, that the value of the coal-fields exceeds that of the gold reserves. These coals are, however, practically un-touched, for the only coal mining in Alaska is that of some lignites for local use. A few years ago statistics showed that Alaska's entire export of coal for a year was four tons, while it produced fifteen tons of gold.—From "The Alaska of To-Day" by Alfred H. Brooks in American Reviews.

Conservation of Human Life.

The average length of human life is steadily increasing in this country. The latest Census bulletin shows that the death-rate in the "registration era," which includes fifty-five per cent. of the population, is 15.4 in 1,000 each year. This is the lowest record ever known in the United States. Of the seventeen states in which registration has been made, California has the highest death rate—18.4. Colorado comes next, with 17.01. One reason why the rate is high in these states is that many invalids migrate to them in search of health, and die there. Massachusetts stands third in the size of its death-rate—and South Dakota, with 10.1 seems to be the healthiest place in the country. This prolongation of life means also the decrease of invalidism, and the increase of happiness and productive power all over the land.

Much of this gain to humanity is due to the discovery of new remedies for prevalent diseases, such as antitoxin for diphtheria. Much also is due to the lifting of nursing into a profession, and to the increase of hospitals and schools for training nurses. More is due to systematic study and research for the prevention of disease. In this great work private generosity and government appropriations are enabling devoted men and women to be benefactors of the nation and of the human race. The campaign against tuberculosis has already reduced the death-rate from that plague in all the states except three Careful measures have been adopted to prevent the spread of typhoid and other infectious diseases. The public are protected by law against enemies to the health of the people which used to lie in wait for them on every hand. Tainted and poisoned foods used to be sold freely, but now penalties are imposed on those who sell such things. while systematic inspection prevents a vast amount of deleterious substances from getting into the markets. To guard the health of the people their taxes have been considerably increased in recent years. The price they pay for such care is the best investment they could make.—Congregationalist.
