Uncle Johns Poem

THE NATIONAL TARGET

If the president is silent, he's a sneak. . . If he does a lot of talkin', he's a fool. . . If he happens to be honest, he's a freak, or hasn't got the jedgment of a mule. .. .If he irritates the bosses, he's a crook. . . .If he does a thing he never gets it right. Whichever way he turns he sees a spook, and dreams about the devil every night. . . .If he should get to feelin' justly proud of any noble plan that he has sprung, it brings the maledictions from the crowd, that figgers every day to get him hung. . . . And, when he sends a message to the whelps that practice all the deviltry they can, the peanut press pulls off its coat an' helps to crucify the poor tormented man.

. . .I reckon that there never was a soul, that gets so little comforts out of life, when every moral polecat leaves his hole, to hurl a batch of venom at his wife. . ..I'd hate to be the President-elect; I wouldn't be the President—that was. . . I'd be so hard to deal with I expect—I'd make 'em go an' wash their dirty paws. . I wouldn't be maltreated by the mob, that every brand of hellishness creates. . . . I'd sooner tackle any other job than President of these United States..

Yor. owny Uncle John.

Government Will Offer Unparalleled Opportunities To Home Builders

AT THE BIG ARMY CANTONMENT AUCTION

Authorization by the Secretary of War to sell at auction the big army cantonment, Camp Lee, at Petersburg, Va., is an announcement of greatest interest to the home builder who has been desirous of erecting a new structure or adding to his present abode because of the fact that great quantities of building material will be sold at prices that suit his purse.

This point has not been overlooked by the Government in arranging for the disposal of various army camps throughout the country and it is planned in each instance to afford the people whose money built the camps an opportunity to reap the benefits of the extreme sacrifices resulting from their being sold at auction. With this purpose in view the War Department has authorized the Louisville Real Estate and Development Co., of Louisville, Ky., of which D. C. Clarke is president, to sell at auction on February 6 and every day thereafter until the entire camp is dismantled, the equipment of Camp Lee.

Every article of equipment, the many buildings with their millions of feet of valuable lumber, their radiation and plumbing, window sashes, doors, kitchen funishings and many other articles of equipment of innumerable uses will be sold. No reservations will be made and all will be sold to the highest bidder which means that the individual who wishes to purchase a small amount of material to reconstruct his home or to build a new one will have the opportunity to buy, at the price he wishes, to pay, what he needs.

This plan was followed with great success at the recent sale of Camp Zachary Taylor at Louisville, Ky., which was sold by the Louisville Real Estate and Development Company last April. Men living in the city which the camp adjoined came to the auction sale and bought in at their own figure equipment they had use for while the greater part of the buildings were sold to farmers from Kentucky and neighboing states, who attended the sale in large number to pick up bargains that were to be found. Innumerable articles handy to the farmer were listed in the inventory of the Camp Zachary Taylor sale and the inventory for the sale at Camp Lee will also include these articles, such as drinking troughs, hot water tanks, heating stoves, and ranges, fencing and fence posts and many other things.

Those desiring to attend this sale can obtain advance copies of the Camp Lee inventory by writing D. C. Clarke, president of the Louisville Real Estate and Development Company, at Louisville, Kentucky, or at Camp Lee, Va. Through Mr. Clarke's efforts the great camp at Louisville was subdivided and sold to home seekers and investors who chose their own sections of land and bought them at their own price. The equipment of the Louisville camp was also sold at auction and the entire cantonment, comprising two thousand acres of nd and more than two thousand buildings went to the individual purchasers who bought it in at the prices they wished to pay.

Recognizing the ability of Mr. Clarke and his associates the Government has authorized the Louisville Real Estate and Development Company to act as its sales agent in the sale of Camp Lee, assuring the buying public a fair opportunity to participate in the benefits necessitated by the selling of this great property.
