LUBRICANT
Carbon Remover
Solves the Carbon Problem

When your motor loses power, when it knocks, bucks, and overheats, don't start monkeying with the carburetor.

It is apparent that there is carbon in the cylinders, as these are typical symptoms of carbon trouble

The first indication of the presence of carbon is loss of power. The motor labors when you climb a hill. If this is not promptly attended to the valves will become pitted and warped. Eventually your motor will be ruined.

REMOVE THE CARBON AND YOU WILL SAVE GASOLINE

Lubricant Carbon Remover Does Not Injure Motor
Endorsed by Dr. Herbert M. Hill, Buffalo's City Chemist

"This is to certify that a can of Lubricant Carbon Remover, taken by me personally from stock ready to ship to customers, analyzed by me, was found to be entirely free of acids or any other ingredients that would injure a motor."—Herbert M. Hill, PH.D.

"Before using Lubricant Carbon Remover in my Ford I was getting sixteen miles to the gallon of gas. After using it I was able to get twenty-two miles per gallon on a 35-mile drive" —George Thompson, Spirit Lake, Iowa.

Each can is backed up with the manufacturer's guarantee.

Don't put this off until tomorrow, or next week. Send One Dollar for a can of Lubricant Carbon Remover, prepaid, Today. Agents wanted.

MARYLAND'S COWS ARE GOOD MILK PRODUCERS

Washington, May 20.—Maryland's milch cows are above the average and continue as good producers for 11 years, instead of 10 years, which is the average for the country as a whole, according to a statement issued today by the Department of Agriculture. This statement says:

"The average age of milch cows when slaughtered for beef is 10 years, and the price realized for such cows is about one-half the price brought by younger cows sold for milking purposes, according to a nation-wide investigation of present conditions made this year by the United States Department of Agriculture.

"State averages of the age at which cows are sold for slaughter were remarkably uniform, there being no state with an average under nine years and no state with an average over 11 years. States showing an average of 11 years were Maryland, West Virginia, Florida, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Utah and Nevada. States with an average of nine years were New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama.

"In the early spring this year, when the survey was made, milch cows showed an average sale price of $32 a head when sold for slaughter, or about 50 per cent. of the average price of $63 for cows sold at the same time for milking purposes."
