Weather and Crop Report

Thunder-showers on July 31st were moderate in north-central Maryland and greatly benefited corn and other crops in that division; they were only light in other divisions. Light to moderate rain fell on August 3rd and was beneficial locally. In many localities, however, droughty conditions continue and rain is needed.

The week was favorable for the harvesting and threshing of grains, harvesting of early potatoes, early tomatoes, early tree fruit, etc.

Corn continues fair to good generally. It is good to excellent in localities where moderate to heavy rains have fallen during the past week; elsewhere it is being unfavorably affected by the long period of dry weather. The early-planted is tasseling and silking. Range in growth is great.

Thrashing of wheat and rye has been completed on the Eastern Shore and in southern Maryland, but continues in north-central Maryland and in Washington and Allegany counties; in the Allegany Mountain region harvesting of these grains is still in progress. Harvesting of oats has ended and thrashing is under way on the Eastern Shore and in southern Maryland; in north-central Maryland and in Washington and Allegany counties oats are nearly all cut; while in the Allegany Mountain region they are still heading.

Pastures and grasses are now poor on the Eastern Shore and poor to fair west of Chesapeake Bay, except still good in the Allegany Mountain region. In general a fine hay crop was secured.

Digging of early potatoes is now general, except in the Allegany Mountain region, where this crop is maturing. Late potatoes are making a fairly good stand; planting of this crop is still unfinished in some localities of the extreme southern counties.

Truck crops and gardens are now only fair. The tomato crop is poor. Early tomatoes are fruiting in the northern-border counties and are ripening and being picked to the southward.

Tobacco has been affected unfavorably by the dry weather, and is now but fair. It is coming into bloom.

Picking of early apples continues. Early peaches are ripening, and picking has begun in some localities.
