How About A Fire Engine?

But for the prompt arrival of the Denton Fire Company at Saturday's fire, it seems that most of the property at Greensboro station might have been swept out. While many men with buckets were striving hard to save the surrounding buildings, the flames were mounting higher all the time until two streams of water from the well by the station were turned on the fire. Within a minute the roaring flames began to yield to the overpowering water driven with tremendous force by the fire engine. It is said that in fighting flames the force of the water is really more effective than the stream itself.

While our town is fairly well supplied with water, the use of an engine is very necesseary in order to choke out the flames before they reach such great headways as to be almost impossible to check.

Greensboro is indeed fortunate in having so nearby the most powerful fire engine on the Peninsula, as well as a well organized fire company of about thirty members who are bent on rendering quick and effective service anywhere within reach. Inasmuch as this engine can reach Greensboro easily within eight minutes, would it not be a practicable and timely as well as a neighborly thing for our town to lend substantial financial support to this organization, the Denton Fire Company, which can readily control fires in our town?

It is said that the Denton equipment complete was purchased at a cost of about $15,000, one-half of which the town of Denton has assumed and the other half is being paid for by the firemen who receive absolutely no compensation for their services whatever.

If these people without any pay are willing to give their fire services free and at the same time make themselves responsible for the raising of over $7,000 in order to protect the property of our citizens, does it not seem that this community should donate a substantial amount toward this worthy enterprise? —Enterprise, Greensboro.

Miss Thomas (to persistent beggar) —If I give you a piece of pudding, you'll never return will you?

Beggar—Well, lady, you know your pudding better than I do.

She's so contrary even her food disagrees with her.

Mrs. Evelyn S. Kelly, of near Elkton, was awarded a verdict of $1500 by a jury in the Queen Anne's county Circuit Court Wednesday evening, in a civil suit again the Huber Baking Company of Wilmington, in which she asked $75,000 damages for injuries alledged to have been sustained in an automobile accident four years ago, when the car in which she was riding and a truck of the Huber Company collided near Elkton.

The suit grew out of an accident which occured on November 11th, 1920, and was entered at Elkton lasta year. In the spring of this year it came to trial at Denton in Caroline county, and the jury awarded a verdict for the defendant. An appeal to the Court of Appeals was taken and the higher Court remanded the case for new trial.

larized some time between midnight and dawn last Friday morning, and unsuccessful efforts were made to break into a third establishment, presumably by inexperienced crackmen, who manifested no particular judgment in the selection of merchandise and who apparently, were not adepts in the fine art of thievery.

Windows were smashed, desk drawers were hacked and broken, and a quantity of guns, gun-shells, watches, clocks and flashlights were taken from the store of Wright and Lowe Company; the back-door was smashed at the store of H. Linwood Philips, jeweler and an unsuccessful effort was made to open two doors at the store of Alfred Green and Son.

Deserted by her husband in 1898, after 24 years of married life, Mrs. Tillie Lloyd, of Wilmington, on Monday was granted a decree nisi in divorce from Joseph Lloyd by Judge Harrington in New Castle County Superior Court. Mrs. Lloyd testified she was married in 1874, fifty years ago, and her husband deserted her in 1898. She said in the latter year she went to Townsend, Del., on a visit and when she returned to her home in Wilmington she found her husband had sold most of their belongings and had left, leaving a note saying he was sorry for the trouble he had caused her and "she could have the rest of the belongings." She said she has never seen her husband since.

Easton, Md., Nov. 14—Some one opened the window of Claude Lee's resi dence here last night and stole his radio set. This set created considerable interest in New York and Baltimore on account or its ability to tune in on London, England, and California cities. Last week a stranger gave Lee $100 for the privilege of photographing the instrument, and Wednesday a Mr. Jackson called up from Baltimore and made arrangements to buy the instrument for $500. A New Yorker became interested and wanted to buy the house where Mr. Lee resides. Finally the machine was sold over the phone and Lee was awaiting the arrival of the buyer.

Last night he was at work in a drug store, and his wife and mother-in-law had retired early. A neighbor saw two men try to get in the house at the front door. She later found the bell out of order and phoned Lee. He found that the window had been pried open and the radio set taken away.

There are many more sets like Lee's here, but none is able to tune in on faraway places as his did.

Possible electrification of the Pennsylvania line between Centreville and Townsend, at some time within the next few years, is hinted in an announcement just issued by officials of the company, in which they outline their intention to substitute electric for steam power on the entire Maryland Division.

Reports from the large turkey growing districts throughout the United States lead observers to believe that the price of Thanksgiving turkey will be lower this year than at any time since the price of the birds took record jumps during the war. The city markets at this early date are being swamped with turkeys from South America and from the producing districts in the Middle West. Early reports indicated that the Texas and other western crop of turkeys would and that as a result the prices would be much smaller this year than last, be higher. The fact that the birds are finding their way to the city markets in unusually large quantities, shows that early predictions were wrong. The price being paid for them at the producing centers is much lower and assures the city householder that the fowl will not sell for fancy prices

Horticulturists from all sections of Delaware and the Eastern Shore of Maryland will attend the annual meeting of the Peninsula Horticultural Society to be held at Bridgeville on November 18, 19 and 20. The meeting promises to be one of the most successful in many years, and the exhibits bid fair to eclipse any that have been made within the past five years. Plans have been made for ten thousand feet of floor space for the fruit and vegetable displays, while thirty thousand feet will be given over for display of orchard machinery, nursery stock, fertilizers and spraying outfits and materials.

man, night operator in the Millington Prompt action by Mrs. Ruth Bowtelephone exchange, frustrated the efforts of thieves who were burglarizing the store of Hankin Bro., in that town, shortly after midnight, Friday morning.

The plucky operator heard the burglars when they effected an entrance through a transom over one of the front doors, and gave the alarm.

Eight overcoats were stolen by the burglars who drove to Millington in a car from the direction of Delaware. When the alarm was sounded they escaped without other loot.

Six years ago to a day after he had emerged from the World War, fiercest conflict of recorded history, without a serious wound, although participating in some of the bloodiest major engagements of the war, Webster C. Goswellen, aged 30, was fatally injured on Armistice day, Tuesday last, when the truck which he was driving, and which was owned by W. W. Gavin, hauler, of Salisbury, was struck at the Pennsylvania Railroad crossing near the new Normal school by the northbound express which is due in Salisbury around 3 p. m. Two negroes, in the truck which the ill-fated man, Edward Orr and Fleet Willis, were bruised but not seriously hurt

The three men were rushed to the Peninsula General Hospital, where Dr. H. S. Wailes, railroad surgeon, took them in charge. Goswellen was found to be suffering with concussion of the brain and died at 1:30 a. m. Wednesday.

Pocomoke City, Md., Nov. 14.—The last building to be completed in the program of the building of the "New Pocomoke" is the Pocomoke City National Bank. It is but one of a type of the beautiful edifices that have been built to replace those destroyed by fire two and one-half years ago.

It was around this building the Pocomoke people and their friends carried on the celebration of the opening of their beautiful business street some time ago.

"WE ARE THANKFUL"

THANKSGIVING ON THE FARM

When ma begins to whistle
And size the chickens up,
And feed the biggest turkey,
Why even our new pup

Knows that it's 'most Thanksgiving.
You feel it in the air,
And smell it in the kitchen
And cellar everywhere.

There's bushels—'most—of mincemeat,
There's pumpkins by the pile,
And great big cakes and doughnuts,
And cookies—I should smile!

Then everybody's happy.
An' ma she fairly sings.
A-mixin' up the puddings
And all the other things.

So take your other seasons
And go your joyous way,
But leave me in ma's kitchen
Around Thanksgiving day.

Little Boy—Mother, why is father bald headed?

Mother—Because he thinks so much.

Little Boy—Why do you have so much?

Mother—It's time you ate your breakfast.

He who laughs last is usually the dumbest.

"I'm going to spend the evening out," said the man when the thug hit him over the head.
