Let us thank God our nation is at peace and our boys are at home. Let us be thankful, too, that behind our frank American smile, behind our whimsical wit, behind our seeming carefree indifference, there stands, rekindled in the American character, that power, that courage, that love of country marked in the lives of the Nation's founders, and upon which rest the safety of American ideals.

Thanksgiving is perhaps the most beautiful of American holidays. It opens the floodgates of memory, it draws from the heart our human love and links anew our kinship with the Christ.

Yet, what say we of those among us who are lonely at this hour, those who try, bewildered, to fathom the mystery of Almighty reasoning, those who in their suffering look with pleading eyes to learn what, in their time of sorrow, they have at hand for which to offer thanks.

In the suffering heart to-day let there be thanks for Jesus and His ability to run the gamut of divine emotion to the last resonant tone. God has ruled that only from out the melting pot of the agonies may come the gold refined and pure.

All is well. The nation lives; angels kiss the cheeks of sleeping childhood, while those who have gone to rest repose in the arms of God—at peace. Let us give thanks.

AUTOCASTER

WE ARE ON OUR WAY

Our calamity howlers may now retire while the forward looking business men of the nation go into executive session. The day of better trade is not coming; it is already with us. There has been an increase in our cotton ginnings for the year of 2,100,000 bales. There has been an advance of $47,000,000 in building in the month of October. The production of steel ingots has taken almost a sensational jump, while steel bookings are more than a million tons ahead of last year. The manufacture and distribution of Portland Cement, which tells the story of good road construction and of building, are marching far ahead of schedule. In brief, the basic industries have taken on new life and now lead the way to the wave of prosperity. Perhaps local merchants may be slow to take advantage of the change, but those of keen vision, who boldly take advantage on the times, are destined to profits unknown in many a year. The laggards will wait, of course, until they must buy at higher prices bound to come in response to greater demand and increased consumption.

The report of the Department of Commerce shows the sales of the two leading mail order houses aggregated $41,036,000 in October as against $31,448,000 in September and $37,743,000 in 1923. This shows the improved condition of the pocketbook of the farmer, who, unfortunately, has not yet learned that he can buy at home the same quality of goods and at as low prices as he gets by mail and have back of his purchase the knowledge of what he is going to get and the reputation and service of his local merchant.

Anyhow, the best thing Charles M. Schwab ever said was "The man who is a bear on America is a fool." We are on our way.

A LESSON FROM THE ELECTION

The election of President Coolidge is the greatest evidence yet offered to prove that the American people think straight on basic questions. The vote for Coolidge was not a vote for the man so much as a vote for sound principles of government.

The present vote shows that the American people cannot be stampeded by professional political practices which seek to cloud the main issue.

The election year has also shown that questions like the tariff and discussion of changes in the Constitution no longer seriously disturb business and industries as they have done in the past. From the day of the national conventions our country has enjoyed confidence and the stimulation of rising markets.

Candidates Davis, Coolidge and La Follette wer highly respected by the people for their ability and sincerity as political leaders, but all departures from fundamental political traditions were bitterly opposed and all inclination to try experiments at public expense lost the proponents public confidence.

All political parties would do well to learn a lesson from this election, namely, the voters are able to differentiate between men and measures and can no longer be so easily fooled by some persons think.

We will continue to advance along the pathway to success under one flag, governed by a constitution the equal of which has not yet been written, if we forget not the words of the great Emancipator, "With Malice Toward None, With Charity For All." Let the public officials in power remember that they are only the servants of the people and that no political party can survive except as it gives a better government to citizens who are daily becoming more enlightened on public questions.

WHO PROFITS FROM FIRE PREVENTION

In answering the above question, Thomas R. Baird, Chief Engineer of the Fresno, California, fire department says that 90 per cent of fire alarms originate in homes, it is apparent that fire prevention should be taught in the homes as they are responsible for not only a majority of the alarms but also home fires are responsible for a majority of the lives lost each year.

Fresno adopted an organized citizens' fire prevention committee which has been one of the most valuable assets the city has had in preventing fires. Every building in Fresno has been visited by members of the uniformed fire department, fire prevention bureau and by the boy scouts. Fire hazards were pointed out and the cooperation of property owners and tenants was asked.

Cooperation by the citizens was necessary to wipe out the black fire record which Fresno had earned. For five years prior to the reorganization of the Fresno fire department and its campaign for fire prevention, the annual average fire loss in Fresno was $850,289. During 1923, the first year following the reorganization, the loss was $187,435. The preceding five year average of fire alarms was 458. In 1923, it was only 279. The previous five year per capita fire loss was $16.13. In 1923, it was $2.21.

Since the reorganization of Fresno on a fire prevention basis, three reductions have been made in insurance rates netting the citizens of the city yearly savings of approximately $350,000. Add this to the reduction in fire losses and it is easy to determine who profits by fire prevention, says Mr. Baird.

The good work will continue in Fresno and other cities should follow suit.

RIDGELY

The blessed season of Thanksgiving is with us again. Is is home coming time, when the old home is sought by all those who can possibly journey back to it, if God grant there be any left to welcome. It has been for the American nation a good year. Not ours have been the worries of internal dissentions or outward disagreements. Isn't that cause for thankogiving? Then let us be thankful

Dense smoke was discovered issuing from the back part of the roof of the building where Mr. Applebaum keeps store about 9 o'clock last Saturday night. The alarm was sounded and some of th fire fighting apparatus was speedily on the scene. A phone call was also sent to Denton, but the fire was about extinguished when this company arrived. The origin of the trouble seems to be a mystery.

Slender and smart as the modern girl herself—whose insistence on a double compact, thin enough to slip in purse or pocket—handsome enough to be at home in any company—brought into being the Watch-Case Compact. Black enameled, with a dainty gold colored border—built like the case of a fine watch—containing two mirrors, two puffs, rouge and powder.

Quite rightly called "the smartest vanity"—and at the modest cost of one dollar and a half. To be seen at our Perfumery Counter.

NOVEMBER

November days are here at last,
The north wind blows his icy blast.
The little leaves from off the trees
Flutter and fly to their earthy eaves.
The birds already have flown away,
For they could not stand winter's stay
And all around is black and drear,
For—will not winter soon be here?
By this time pupils are settled once more
And are working as hard as ever before.
The turkeys are fat and in every way
We're getting ready for Thanksgiving Day.
Also, the pumpkins grinning appear,
For this month especially is their time of year,
And everyone hustles and bustles about,
No lazy people are now seen out.
Thus we see November is here,
Bringing windy weather and much good cheer;
And we see that winter is not far away
He'll soon be here to have his day.
