FEDERALSBURG

Dwelling Destroyed By Fire

The residence of Mr. W. S. Williams was destroyed by fire on Tuesaay arternoon when a smoke house adjacent to the dwelling caught fire during the process of smoking meat there. Mr. Williams had left the smoke house but a few minutes, but the fire gained such rapid headway that when discovered by Mr. Williams' daughter, Mrs. J. D. Jefferson, who resides at their home, the whole rear part of the house was in flames. So speedily did the fire spread that though the fire company's response was prompt, the dwelling could not be saved. It required almost super-human effort to save the adjoining and very-near house, the home of Mr. Donald E. Jefferson, and the fact that it did escape was due largely to the timely arrival of the Hurlock Fire Company, whose excellent work saved the situation.

Practically all the household goods of Mr. and Mrs. Williams and of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Jefferson were saved and the burned property was covered by insurance.

St. Patrick's Club Party

The Woman's Club, following the custom of having an annual festivity, at which time their fun is shared by the men—husbands or friends—held a St. Patrick's party on Tuesay evening at The Temple.

The hall was fittingly and attractively decorated with the Irish color, manmoth shamrock leaves forming a fringe around the wall with green gardens and green plants to soften the effect. At six long tables were set places for the guests, green and white carnations and green cases for nuts and mirts adding further to the color effect. Supper was served as soon as the guests were seated, the program progressing during the evening from the stage.

The menu embraced sliced ham, an attractive green garnished salad of the Irish potatoe, green pickles, Maryland biscuit, coffee and a second course, served later, of brick ice cream and home made cake, both reflecting the tint of the Emerald Isle. Green and white mints and salted almonds completed the supper.

The program included: Violin music, Mr. Robert Arthur; reading, Mrs. Herman Holt; piano music, Mr. Leslie Eadington; dialogue comedy, Alfred Charles and Henry Long; Irish songs by all, led by Mr. H. W. Davis; reading, Miss Maud Ford; vocal solo, Miss Frances Hackett.

The Committee who arranged the affairs were Mrs. E. G. Poole, chairman, Mrs. J. Roe MacSorley, Mrs. O. W. Spicer, Mrs. J. H. Spiser and Mrs. Leon Dill.

SOCIALIZED TEACHING GIVEN TRIAL

Makes Hit With the County Educators at Recent Meeting

PROF. LEARY CONDUCTS CLASS

The following article taken from a Baltimore paper will give the patrons of our schools an idea of the high regard with which our teachers and their methods are held by the educators of other counties.

"Socialized teaching" has received the approval of the office of the State Superintendent of Education and the principals of the high schools of Kent, Queen Anne's, Talbot and Caroline counties.

Demonstration of this method of self-instruction by the students was made at the Denton High School by the sophomore class in algebra under the direction of Prof. A. Leonard Leary, principal of Denton high school.

Maryland high schools are divided into six groups, and it is the custom to call the principals of the several groups to meetings held at stated intervals.

Usually some one connected with the high school at which the meeting is held puts on a demonstration lesson, which is freely discussed at its conclusion.

When Professor Leary brought his class into the room in which the principals were gathered he quietly remarked to one of his students: "Please conduct the class today." He then sat down among the other principals. The temporary teacher reviewed the work done the previous day and requested some one of the class to demonstrate a problem that had been made up by another member of the class.

The work was done orally or upon the blackboard, and when the demonstrator faltered or hesitated another student stepped to the board and gave assistance over the rough place.

The lesson lasted for a little more than an hour, and the only part taken by Prof. Leary was in assisting in hesitating explanations.

Prof. Leary was asked if there had been any special preparation or rehearsal for the demonstration. He replied that there had been none, except that he had asked each student to make up a problem, and from that number he had selected, he said, the ones used. He selected, he said, the student teacher because it was her turn to lead the class, and that she had had no special preparation.

There was but one criticism made, and that was disputed. The plan of presenting the different aspects of the lesson was criticized, but the decision was in favor of the plan in vogue.

Supervision of high schools in Maryland is said to have gone far ahead of the other states. In most of the states supervision of the high schools means the checking up of supplies and equipment.

In Maryland the supervision is given to the methods of teaching, and socialized teaching is the result of a close contact between the teachers and their supervisors.

The visitors present all expressed themselves as well pleased with the socialized teaching and are in favor of its extensive use.
