YOUNG LADIES SHOULD ORGANIZE

Some twenty or twenty-five young women of Denton are either employed in the business places or in the offices of Denton, or in other words would come under the heading of professional young women.

What a force for good these young women could be if they were organized and all working for some common end. What a splendid civic organization they could be if all were under the leadership of some good leader.

Many towns no larger than Denton have their professional women's club and we see no reason why the young ladies of Denton could not get together and organize one. In most places they are run on the plan of the Rotary or Kiwanis Club, that is, they meet once a week at luncheon some place where topics of interest and common good are frankly discussed and then acted on. In many of these towns they have become the most active organization in all civic and economic affairs. We would like to see some one take the lead in this.

SHOULD STUDY THE BIBLE

In a town in Virginia the other day, the students of a school were given 20 questions on the Bible. All the questions were on incidents that every one in this Christian country should be able to answer, if they are able to read. From some of the ridiculous answers that were given, some not being able to answer any of the questions, it looks as though the reading of the Bible, or a little closer study of it, should be made in the schools. Most schools during some time of the day have ten or fifteen minutes devoted to singing or some other exercise. It would appear to us, that if all schools can be judged by this one, this time could very profitably be devoted to the study of the Bible. If there should be those of some denomination that do not study the Protestant Bible they could be excused from taking part.

It is really amazing sometimes just how little some of us know about those things that every one should know. There is no book that is in as many homes as is the Bible, and yet it is perhaps the least read. The home could do much to broaden the knowledge of the Bible as well as the schools.

Some states have passed a law making it compulsory for the teacher to read from the Bible each and every day and we hope the time will come when it is general throughout the country.

After being invited to the dining room where the guests were fooled with a table set with a display of tooth picks and water, they were served refreshments of cocoa and doughnuts.

COOPERATIVE CANNING FACTORY PLANNED

Will Probably Work With Local Caner This Season

At a meeting of the Greensboro Farm Bureau last Monday evening the proposition of having a co-operative canning factory was taken up.

A previously appointed committee reported that a local canner was willing to co-operate with the growers for the coming season. It was decided that if a reasonable agreement could be reached the growers would arrange to work with the local canner, if not that a factory of their own would be built. It is understood that a free site near the railroad has been offered should the latter arrangement be decided on.

A committee was appointed with authority to make all necessary arrangements and to be ready for a report at the next meeting.
