WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

The dramatic death, no less than the eventful life of William Jennings Bryan, seen now in a little clearer perspective, will provide an inspiration to many an American boy and girl, possibly leading them to greater heights of achievement. In the passing of the great commoner one outstanding fact is indelibly stamped on the public conscience, namely, universal appreciation of the two characteristics that go to make men great— sincerity and courage.

Those who were unalterably opposed to the causes and theories advocated by Mr. Bryan, joined equally with those who believed in him in paying tribute to his honesty of purpose and his bravery under fire. Defeated time and again in possibly a dozen political and economic crusades, the man from Nebraska, arose time and again, Phoenixlike from the ashes of discomfiture. One can almost hear in clarion tones, again expressed the thought of Bryan, put so pointedly by the great Richelieu: "In the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as fail."

Since Knighthood was in flower the world has paid homage to courage in mankind. It always will, and so long as it does there need be no fear for states or nations that produce leadership of such sterling quality. It was courage that made Napoleon of unperishable fame. It was courage that caused the grand Old Man of Britain, Gladstone, publicly to state his pride in having become convinced his first political advocacy was wrong. It was courage that gave us the traits of Roosevelt's useful life. Indeed to courage and sincerity we owe our happiness in an independent nation.

Courage presupposes conviction, indomitable will, tenacity of purpose, sincerity of purpose, and above all the open mind, shining ever, unafraid.

FARMERS' DAY

Extensive plans are under way to make the annual Farmers' Day Picnic as profitable and enjoyable as possible. Several women's clubs are planning exhibits of interest to the housewife and mother. The girls' clubs will have an exhibit of the sewing and canning that has been done this year. To encourage the girls, several money prizes for clothing and individual jars of canning will be awarded and several dozen glass jars are to be given out for good displays of canned goods done.

The American Corner Girls' Club will give a demonstration of cold pack canning in the morning. Other demonstrations are under way.

Plans are also being made by womens' clubs to sell candy, ice cream, coffee, iced tea, lemonade, sof drinks and cake. The money earned will be used by the individual clubs.

Mrs. Sipple, president of the State Federation of Womens' Clubs will speak in the afternoon. She has a message of interest to all Caroline county women.

Games for the girls are in charge of Misses Rita Hollawell and Irma Nichols, of Federalsburg and a story hour for the young children will be in charge of Miss Lillian Cheezman, of Preston.

GOVERNMENT INSPECTION A GREAT SUCCESS

Six hundred and forty-eight cars of Eastern Shore produce have been inspected at shipping points during the past two and a half mon supervision of the State Department of Markts and the United States Department of Agriculture, according to Dr. F. B. Bomberger, Chief of the State Department of Markets.

Shipping point inspection began in Maryland last summer with the movement of peaches and apples from the Hancock, Easton and New Windsor sections of the State. It was resumed this spring with the first shipments of strawberries from the Eastern Shore. Since then the inspectors have been kept almost constantly busy in the Eastern Shore territory as early potatoes, cucumbers, tomatoes, apples and peaches have become ready for the markets.

If a grower discovers that his produce is grading low, he may be able to improve his methods of grading and thus secure the benefit of a higher grade. If the quality of his commodity is poor, he can avoid the responsible conditions another season.

For the shipper the inspection supplies a guarantee of condition and quality that simplifies the task of selling; while for the buyer, the grade and description of the carlot are satisfactory indications of its market value.

In most cases, where shipping point inspection has been in operation for a while, a steady improvement in the quality of shipments has been noted, it is said. The result has been an increased percentage of carlot shipments grading up to what is known as U. S. No. 1.

From the middle of May, when strawberry shipments began moving, until July 25, inspections have been made on the Eastern Shore points on 122 carloads of strawberries, 449 carloads of potatoes, 25 carloads of cucumbers, 8 carloads of tomatoes, 32 carloads of early apples and 6 carloads of peaches.

Potato and cucumber shipments have not been completed and the movement of tomatoes and peaches is just beginning. Inspection for the potato crop is provided at Pocomoke, Snow Hill, Stockton, Beaven Dam, Costen and Girdletree in Worcester county, and at Princess Anne, Westover and Kingston in Somerset county. Inspections on cucumbers have been made at Pocomoke and on early apples and peaches moving from Berlin. Thus far Cambridge has been the only shipping point where inspection has been made on tomatoes, but other shipping centers for this crop probably will receive service later in the season.
