EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Postal Appropriation bill as passed by the House provides for the beginning of a parcels post experiment. An important feature of the amendment adopted extends the limit of the size of packages sent by mail from four to eleven pounds and makes the rate twelve cents a pound. This does not repeal the cent an ounce rate. Any one sending merchandise of not more than four pounds will have choice of two rates. The twelve cents a pound rate charges the full twelve cents for a fraction of a pound and may mean higher postage for a small package than the old rate.

On rural free delivery routes a genuine parcels post is established at the rate of five cents a pound and one cent for each additional pound up to eleven pounds. A joint committee is to investigate the subject to determine whether it is wise to establish the parcels post on all mail routes. If the provision adopted reaches the President without further change it will give us a start towards the parcels post and will broaden the narrow limitation now placed on mailable merchandise.

The presidential primary contests among the Democrats are proceeding with spirit, but not bitterness, the leading candidates still being Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, and Speaker Clark, of Missouri, and they are pretty evenly matched in the matter of delegates so far chosen. Among the Republicans it may be better described as a fierce fight between Roosevelt and Taft. The Taft wing claims that it has enough votes already to nominate their favorite, while the Colonel himself says he has won the fight and that Ohio, the latest big battle ground, is his. Both claims of the Republican leaders are discounted. The "postmaster delegations" of the South, about all claimed by Taft, are switching, and California has repudiated the administration at Washington.

Mother's Day was observed in thousands of churches last Sunday, and the white flower, an expression of love for the mother departed, the red for the mother still in the land to bless and add grace to it, were worn by countless thousands, in many countries. Mothers' Day celebrations are inter-denominational. How many are the proofs that of all earthly ties that which binds together the hearts of mother and child is the strongest. Her influence is the most powerful, and truly has it been said that the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world.

The Eastern Shore still retains its title of a land of bounty. Well-cultivated fields along the fine country roads, the farms on many inlets and rivers and the busy hum of prosperous towns make such a good impression upon strangers that many have come from the far West and Europe to make their homes in this section. Farming on the Eastern Shore is a business, and so successfully carried on that the surplus had to be invested in new enterprises, which can be seen in every section.—Ex.

In the noontide of his great public usefulness Governor Austin L. Crothers is stricken with an apparently hopeless illness, and the whole State grieves. No man in the generation has made a greater or more favorable impress upon the solid citizens of Maryland, and history will accord high praise for his ability, and the courageous performance fully of every public duty while he occupied the high position of the State's Chief Magistrate.

With the direct primary bitter attacks on candidates ought to be set at rest, especially when the people have spoken through the ballot-box. When they have spoken as to a candidate's availability the question is settled for party men, for the primary voters are the judges and their mandates must not be disregarded.

A commission appointed at the recent session of the legislature, composed of Senator Goslin, Governor Goldsborough, Comptroller Harrington, Senator Harper, Senator Beck and Dr. H. M. Young, of Baltimore, has decided to locate the Eastern Shore hospital for the insane in Dorchester county.

President Taft and Ex-President Roosevelt have spent the week stumping the State of Ohio this week, and the burden of their speeches has been that neither should ever again be President of the United States. They proved it.

Former President Roosevelt has been making some big gains over President Taft in the past few weeks. Some folks think it is not the Colonel's popularity, merely that he has borrowed a Democratic suit of clothes.

President Taft on Saturday night signed the great pension bill, which increases greatly allowances and calls for an additional outlay of about seventy-five million dollars a year.

There has been much talk of an alleged effort to bring about the nomination of Mr. Bryan, at the Baltimore convention; but Mr. Bryan has given orders to drop it.

According to government reports there are nearly 600,000 acres in wheat in Maryland, and nearly all of it is in good condition.

Help nature in her efforts to beautify the town, by making your premises neat and attractive.

Speaker Clark carried California, thus strengthening his chances in that quarter.

The Meaning of the Hound Dog Song.

Mr. W. H. Wallace, writing for the National Mouthly, explains the meaning of the picturesque "houn' dawg" song, a campaign song often sung by the friends of Speaker Clark, in various parts of the country:

The "setting" of the "song" is, therefore, most lifelike and true to human nature. One can see in his "mind's eye" the gawky, shuffling countryman from the backwoods, with his brogan shoes and slouch hat and blue overalls upheld by one gallus, as he trudges leisurely along the highway accompanied by his faithful hound "Rover," both as happy as the day is long and caring for nothing else half so much as for each other. The hound is most probably "yaller;" all over his underside is of that favorite color. Now and then "Rover" finds rabbit tracks ten days old in the sand by the roadside and "strikes a trail" and "opens up;" his master urges him on with a "whoopee." But the chase is soon abandoned for this sort of hound was never known or expected to catch anything; and they resume their way "to town." As they reach the public square the miserable, uppish town dogs, curs of low degree, go yelping and snarling and snapping at the country dog, as if they would rend him in pieces. He tucks his tail between his legs and hangs his head and seeks protection close to the heels of his master—a picture of abject humility and fear.

When he enters a store the proprietor and the the porter and the clerk give the strange dog a kick; the bad town boy heaves a stone at him, and the town loafer "sicks" the town dogs on him in hope of getting up a dog-fight.

After enduring this sort of thing for a time, the dog's master gets tired of it; then he gets mad, and proclaims that it has got to "stop." And he means it, too, and the next feller that kicks the dog is liable to get into serious trouble. The master of the dog thinks enough of a thing is enough.

Poor dog! Fitting symbol of the great mass of the people, who have been kicked around for all these many years by "vested interests," the tariff barons and the high protection of the Republican party. And now they are tired of it; their spirit is aroused, and they say with earnestness and loud acclaim that it has got to "stop."

The picture changes though the lesson is the same:

The big pumpkin of a schoolboy, dull of comprehension and slow to learn, gets many a whack from the teacher, who makes no allowance for his natural dullness. After much patience and long suffering he gets tired of being "lammed" around and rises in rebellion, as Tom Calhoun, did at the old Wadsworth school after being beaten day after day by "old Man Coleman," the teacher.

So, the great gawky public, slow to perceive, slower to act, are at last seeing how they have been the butt for the G. O. P.'s high tariff and trust magnates for so long; and now their dander is up and they declare it must cease.

Women in the Campaign.

Among the Democrats in Washington there is such a buzz of preparation as has never been heard before. This time it is the women who are making the commotion. Wives of Democratic Presidential candidates, Senators and Representatives are busy at committee meetings and over their tea cups planning for an event which promises to overshadow for the time being the forthcoming Democratic convention at Baltimore.

This event is the rally to be held at the capital on May 20th by the wives of Democrats of national and State reputation in celebration of the present unity which exists in the Democratic party. More than one thousand women are expected to participate in the celebration, hundreds of whom will travel from various States of the Union. The rally of Democratic women will take the form of a harmony breakfast, and May 20th was selected as the date because that is the birthday of the famous Dolly Madison. If the tales handed down be true, the sprightly and charming Mrs. Madison was enough of a harmonizer in the troublous times of her husband's administration as President of the United States to deserve to be made the patron saint of all peace loving women married to Democrats.

Twelve hundred invitations to the harmony breakfast have been issued to wives and daughters of Governors, Senators, Representatives in Congress and of other prominent Democrats throughout the United States. A committee named especially for the purpose has conveyed an invitation to Mrs. Grover Cleveland and the Misses Cleveland at Princeton, and it is expected that they will be among the honor guests of the day.

Protect the Partridge.

Do you remember how, from the fence corner, on a summer's morning in haying time, there used to come a clear, sweet call, "O Bob-White! Bob-White!" with always the same pause between the words and the accent on the "White?" The Youth's Companion wants an answer, adding: "And you also remember the cold, rainy day when you were coming home with the cows and saw something stir by the old stone wall, and when you looked, discovered under some burdocks a dozen little shivering, bedraggled balls of feathers, which you took home and warmed and dried by the fire? How lively they were, and how much quicker on their feet than chickens of the same age?" Every farmer should be a friend of the partridge, for the farmer has no better friend than this always harmless and beautiful bird, which gathers up millions of destructive insect pests of the crops.

In his charge to the recent grand jury of Queen Anne's county Judge Hopper referred to the policy of the court of granting parole to youthful offenders convicted for the first time, and noted that the results have been most satisfactory. In nearly all cases reformation has been accomplished. But in the cases of local option violations the court seldom allows parole. On this subject the Judge said: "This offense is always committed with premeditation and for profit. There is no sudden temptation to the seller; he must prepare himself for his unlawful act. His offense is, therefore, deliberate, defiant and dangerous to public quiet and no leniency can be safely granted to persons convicted of violating the local option laws."
