The Lecture.

A large and intelligent audience assembled at the Court House in Denton on Saturday evening last, for the purpose of listening to the initial of a course of Lectures to be given under the auspices of the Denton Literary association. The Lecturer was Geo. T. Melvin, Esq. Mr. Melvin had chosen as the subject of his lecture a comparison of the influences exerted upon society by spoken and written language; and proceeded to read a well written address, leaning to the opinion that spoken language exerted the greater influence. From the first it was plainly visible that the lecturer was laboring under great physical distress, and he was finally obliged to dicontinue his address, his eyesight so failing that the writing became illegible to to him. Upon the conclusion of the lecturers explanations of his inability to proceed, Robert J. Jump, Esq., offered a vote of thanks to the speaker, and he certainly expressed the feelings of the audience, when he sincerely regreted that from the rather poor light and his impaired vision the lecturer was unable to finish his well chosen subject and interesting lecture. The motion was unanimously voted, and the meeting adjourned to meet at the Court House on Saturday the 21st inst., M. S. Mutchler Esq., being the lecturer for that evening.

Merited Compliment

A correspondent in last Thursday's American Union, dating from Greensborough, and signing himself "Anti-Ring Democrat," pays a very just meed of praise to our excellent and universally popular clerk, in the following words:" The present Clerk, Mr. Temple, has been a faithful and efficient officer, and I have never, during his official conduct, heard a single word of complaint as an officer or a getleman. His private character is above reproach. He is kind, courteous to all. His urbanity of manner and his amiability and gentlemanly bearing to men of all parties has won him not only esteem and confidence of his own political party, but the good will and confidence of the best and and most influential Republicans of the county. He went into office unacquainted with is duties, and by close application, mastered and overcame difficulties. He has made himself familiar with the county records and is in every respect competent to perform the duties of Clerk. Having made so faithful an officer why should our own party or the other people of the county exchange him for an untried man? A good officer is so rare in these times it is better to make assurances doubly sure by continuing Mr. Temple another term if he will accept the place. Of this I cannot speak as I have never exchanged a word with that gentleman or his friends upon the subject. I do not believe that good and honest men of both parties would object to his renomination. That he could be re-elected I think there can be no doubt."

From Burrsville

MR. EDITOR:

As you solicited, I drop you a few lines from our "Ville," which lies in Caroline county, near the Delaware line, and in the absence of all liquor dealing, is a quiet country place, nearly midway between Denton and Harrington, with mail routes to each place tri-weekly. We have a population of about 70 persons, with three stores, school-house, blacksmith & weelwright shop, 1 Doctor, a parsonage, belonging to the M. P. Church, 2 churches, the M. P. M. E., at which there is preaching every two weeks, the preachers alternating, so that the people have an opportunity to hear both. And it may be in place to state that the churches manifest a very becoming Christian feeling towards each other, and co-operate in the effort made for the salvation of souls.

The Rev. A. D. Dick, pastor of Caroline circuit, and his associate, the Rev. J. L. Leilack, have been much encouraged in there extra efforts during the year, having added nearly 50 members to their churches.

Our Burrsvillians are not only a quiet, good-natured people, but show a commendable effort in securing that which satisfies the physical nature, as may be implied, at least so far as pork is concerned, when I give the amount of pork in the aggregate butcherd by our several citizens.

H. Porter one, 460lbs.; A. T. Porter, two 500; James Stafford, ono 385; F. Porter, three 860; Capt. W. B. Stephens, five 1,467; John Warren, one 304; Isaac Moore, two 400; Mrs. Garrett two 350; James Garrett, five 1146; John Cowan, three 490; Mrs. Ames, two 388, the Parson, two 540, making 8,513lbs. Bee.

For the Journal.

Philo to Tax Payer.

MR. EDITOR: "Tax Payer" seems to have been severely struck by the pointed javelin of our criticisms of his apology for poorly managed almshouses. For two weeks he has squirmed, and, being in travail, has brought forth,—like the mountain that labored a mouse—but we perceive that throughout his agony he still clutches his pocket-book. Not all the hideous conjurations of our brains,—vermin, manufactured animals, hobgoblins, etc., could move him to loose the purse strings as he stands looking on at this sad picture of squalor, rags and misery, which true humanity would seek to relieve, but with vacant eye and stolid heart, the lamentations should be his,

"Of feeling, all things show some sign
But this unfeeling purse of mine."

I accept any of the theories he has surmised as the cause of my amazement. My early piety was sadly deficient. The training was good, but I was irreverent; but I rejoice now that I have both piety and sense enough to commiserate the poor, and, according to my means, to contribute to the relief, and that, too, not merely as it is dunned out of me by commissioned officers.

I am glad also that my nervous sensibilities are not so blunted as not to be shocked at the presentation of such scenes as an authorized committee report to be the condition of our poor. The fact, however, that the present trustees are taking steps to make better provision for these unfortunate people is indeed gratifying.

I would like for Tax Payer to explain to us the use of language, or to show the intent of his first article, if he is not an apologist for the ill-treatment of the poor; for we are at an utter loss to know his meaning in the use of words, and his interpretation of his own epistle. He tacitly admits that the poor have not proper care, and then apologizes that it is the best the circumstances will allow. Now, until this latter statement be proven he is undoubtedly an apologist for the ill-treatment of the poor, and that, too, with his hand on his pocket-book, and to every argument of community, honor or conscience, he answers, "I am A Tax Payer."

I would like, also, that this astute logician would show me the syllogistic steps by which he concludes that I am no tax payer. It isn't fair to say, because I am on the expansion theory, that I am no tax payer. It is a slander upon some tax payers who are liberal. All tax payers, we are glad to note, are not on the contraction idea; some are noble, generous, sympathetic; some would even get "nervous" at the thought that the poor are uncared for. Then the above assumption is untrue to fact, your servant, Philo, is a citizen of your county and a tax payer.

It betrays a weak cause or a weak head for one conducting a newspaper controversy to descend from the sublime altitude of reason and engage in low and insidious surmises and imputations of dubious character, leaving the direct line of argument, and indulging in a series of visionary perhapses, conjured by an enfeebled brain, out of infinite blankness, for want of something better, supplying what is implied. I do not feel disposed to follow you through these speculations as to what my character is; I leave it to those who know me to judge, and those who don't to find out.

It has not been our purpose to make persoual charges against any; neither will we say at whose door these abuses of public trust are to be laid, but we bear to the line, letting the ships strike whom they will. We know whereof we speak, that the children of the county have been deprived of part of the time they should have had for schooling, and it seems to be generally understood that our schools are to close early in the coming year; and we know that this is not in consonance with the popular wish. Then somebody has been manipulating the finances, and engineering the political craft of this county for other than the public good.

Education has been discounted; half paid teachers have had their salaries curtailed without a proportionate deduction from the salaries of other officials. Did the schools need to have $2,000 less than formerly, or did something else need more? Have not brains been fearfully discounted? And must not the ignorance of the rising generation pay for our new bridge? Now, Tax Payer, for once, take your hand off your pocket book, and put it on your head; does it not make you dizzy to think of it. Nay, does it not make your heart sick to see these poor boys and girls, whose means will admit of education outside the public schools, left to struggle against ignorance with all its attendant evils? We needed the bridge, but we need brains more.

Now, do you say to these gentlemen, abdicate the language of the administration? You may abdicate your school-houses. Your teachers may abdicate their desks. Intelligence may abdicate her throne and yield from her jeweled scepter which she sways over the realm of mind. Ignorance, black and horrid ignorance, may reign in her stead, but we abdicate? No, never! Yes, sir, Tax Payer, there is gold in every sand heap in Caroline county, but let this regime be followed and it will remain undug. Our alms-house should be changed into a "palace with stuccoed walls, tapestried flooring," etc., compared with what it has been.

The "Alladan lamp," which is to transform the scenes according to your own description, is truth; but its hallowed fire is only fed by the open-handed liberality of a generous public. A dollar held too close to the eye will hide the sun from our sight. Philo will come to the front when called for.

By the way, Tax Payer, how long since you moved to Tuckahoe Neck? And how you have improved in composition since you got over there! Verily, I know you only by name. Hope you will move again, if moving helps you so. Yours, etc.,

PHILO.
