Thompson, Kersey & Company have something attractive to announce to the readers of the Journal very soon. Look out for it!

DENTON JOURNAL.

DENTON, MARYLAND,
Saturday Morning, February 23, 1884.

FROM present indications it looks very much as if the question of a new constitution had died a natural death, to rise no more during the present session of the Legislature.

TREASURER MEEKINS of Dorchester is said to hold the political reins over the affairs of that county. He is a very shrewd fellow and other ambitious politicians have need to look to the laying of their plans.

THE two great Republicans organs organs of New York—the Times and the Tribune—cannot agree upon the tariff question. In fact, it appears as though the leading Republicans are not a unit on this subject.

WE are gratified to see by the Baltimore papers that our Delegates, Messrs. Douglass and Culbreth, voted against the "eight-hour bill," which was indirectly voted upon last Thursday. In so doing they represented the wishes of nearly all their constituents.

Bishop Simpson on Col. Ingersoll.

Colonel Ingersoll is reported to have recently said that he would be willing to enter into a debate with such a man as Monsignor Capel, but with no less representative person. Were he to discuss with a Methodist he would choose Bishop Simpson.

"I do not care to enter into a discussion of this kind," said Bishop Simpson; "not that I am afraid to meet Mr. Ingersoll in argument, but I think such controversies are productive of no good. I would refuse to meet any other man on the same grounds. I have passed all my life without entering into such matters and now," he said, as he ran his hand through his snowy hair, and smiled, "I hardly think I will do so. My duties are active, the demands upon my time are imperative, so even if I felt the inclination it would be next to impossible for me to enter controversy. Such things can be answered on paper better than with speech."

Proposed Tax Law.

Senator Allen has introduced a bill in the Senate which is intended to make the laws of the State conform to the principle declared in Article 15 of the Bill of Rights, which is that all persons in this State should pay taxes in proportion to their "actual worth in real and personal property." It exempts agricultural implements from taxation, which is justified by the fact that the tools and handworked machines of mechanics and artizans in the State have been long exempted from taxation. It deducts all debts due from individuals from their assessments, including mortgage debts, and it capitalizes at 6 per cent. all annuities, and deducts the capitalized annuity from the assessment of the ground and improvements that secure annuities. It levies a stamp tax, equal in amount to what it would be if the mortgage debt itself or the capitalized annuity was taxed as property, derived from the laws of the State to enforce enforce the payment of the mortgage debt, or the payment of the ground rent, and this stamp tax is called the "enforcement tax." Clerks of courts having the care and custody of land record are to be provided with seals and they are to stamp a certificate that the enforcement tax is paid at the top and on the record of every mortgage and every lease upon the power to collect which the enforcement tax is levied in each year for which the tax is paid, and he is to give the payer a receipt therefor. The clerks are to receive 4 per per cent. for receiving the tax over and above all allowances which they now have, and they are to give a special bond for the faithful performance of their duties in receiving and paying over the tax.

Blanks are to be advertised for as provided in chapter 261 of the acts of 1882 by the clerk of the Court of Appeals sufficient in number to have one blank delivered to every owner of personal property in the State, and the blanks are to be furnished to the county commissioners and the Appeal Tax Court. By them to be delivered through collectors, where collectors are employed, and by the sheriffs where treasurers receive the taxes, and the officers who deliver blanks are to be paid by, and such sum for doing it as the commissioners or the Appeal Tax Court shall deem proper. Blanks are to be filled, sworn to by an officer empowered to administer an oath, and return to the commissioners or Appeal Tax Court within ten days of the delivery of the blank to the property owner. Penalties are to be incurred for failure to return test within ten days, and for false testing of property.

It is provided that in case any court of competent authority shall declare the "enforcement tax" void for any reason that from and after such decision mortgages shall be taxed as property, and the capitalized sum that was, in pursuance of this lew, deducted from the assessments of the lesses of land (persons owning property upon which ground rents are secured,) shall be restored to the assessments of such lessees, and they shall be taxed as before this decision was made, in order that the taxable basis of the State shall not be so unstable as to endanger the safety or the credit of the State.

The ground taken by the author of the bill with regard to the taxation of mortgages is that the mortgage or the debt which it secures are taxed, the person who owes the money will at once be compelled to pay the tax, because nearly all the mortgages have in them a provision that the mortgagor shall pay all taxes that may be served on them; but by taxing the power which the law gives the owner to collect them, neither the mortgage nor the debt is taxed, so the mortgagor will not have to pay the "enforcement tax" in consequence of any obligation now existing in a mortgage. As to the payment of this "enforcement tax" by the borrower in future mortgages, this is left, as the author thinks it ought to be, entirely at the discretion of the mortgagor, believing as he does that all men ought to be free to bargain to suit the exigencies of their own cases.

The bill does not in any way affect the assessment or the taxation of the real estate or the property of corporations, except that it deducts debts of of record from the assessment of real estate in fixing the sum upon which the owner or possessor shall pay taxes. The lists of personal property are to be given in every year, as is now done in over thirty States in the Union.

Commissioners in counties and the Appeal Tax Court in Baltimore have power to change the value put on property by owners if it is deemed too low.

DESTRUCTIVE STORMS.

Cyclones in the South and West—Great Loss of Life and Property.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 20.—This city was visited yesterday by tremendous storms. A special from Atlanta reports fifty persons killed north of that city. The storm was terrible in this section. Many houses at Indian Springs were unroofed and many persons were injured. The house of W. A. Miller, at Blountsville, Jones county, twenty miles from Macon, was blown to atoms. His wife and three children were killed. The bodies of the dead were found at 200 to 800 yards distant from the site of the house. Six negroes were killed on the same plantation.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Feb. 20.—A terribly destructive cyclone swept through the Cahawba valley, in the eastern part of this State, yesterday. Eight persons were killed and thirteen injured, three fatally, near Newtown, Leeds, twelve miles from here. The cyclone struck Leeds and swept away the section house of the railroad, killing three negroes and seriously injuring an aged white couple named Bass. The house of John Poole was blown away, and a son of 17, a daughter of six and a negro child were killed. Poole, his wife, and four other children were badly injured. Dr. W. F. Wright's house was demolished, his mother killed and his five children seriously injured. Marcus McLaughlin, Junius P. Landrue, wife and daughter were also injured

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 20.—A destructive cyclone visited this portion of the county on Monday night. The settlement of Philadelphia, near Rockingham, of 25 houses, was razed to the ground. Three white and eight colored persons are known to have been killed, and fourteen more dead bodies are said to be under the ruins, while as many more are badly injured. At Winnsboro' three colored persons and an aged white lady, named Mrs. Sterling, were killed.

PETERSBURG, Va., Feb. 20.—A tremendous thunder-storm burst over this city and vicinity about midnight last night and continued until an early hour this morning. The storm was followed by an immense rainfall and a heavy gale of wind. All the streams are greatly swollen. A number of county bridges were washed away. The Roanoke river, near Weldon, North Carolina, is 22 feet above low-water mark, and is still rising.

The 250th Anniversary of the Founding of Maryland.

On the 25th of March next occurs the 250th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims of Maryland on St. Clement's Island, in the Potomac river, and two days later, on the 27th, the anniversary of the founding of St. Mary's City, the early capital of the colony. Both occasions will be celebrated in Baltimore—the first under the auspices of St. Vincent's Literary Institute, and the second by the Maryland Historical Society. An open-air commemoration will also be held at St. Mary's City sometime in May. There is now pending before the Legislature a bill, introduced by Senator Allston, appropriating ten thousand dollars for the erection of a monament to mark the spot where the pilgrims landed, and the vestry of the Episcopal Church at St. Mary's which was built in part of bricks from the old State House, have accepted plans prepared by a Baltimore architect for a Gothic structure to replace the present edifice, which is also intended to be a memorial of that event. An article has been published in the Baltimore Sun this week recounting the history of the first settlement in Maryland and describing the character of the wise and able men to whom its early fortunes were entrusted. The efforts of the first Lord Baltimore to establish a colony on the bleak and inhospitable shores of Newfoundland, his application to the King for a new grant of territory in a more congenial climate; the assumption by his son of the task which he left unfulfilled at his death and the happy realization on the banks of the Potomac of his liberal and comprehensive scheme of colonization, based on the then novel idea of religious toleration, are narrated as fully as the limits of a newspaper article permit. Considerable space is also devoted to a description of the colonists, their treatment of the Indians, the conditions under which they came to Maryland, their clothing, food, etc. The motives which actuated the Calverts in founding the settlement are fully set forth, and due prominence is given to the fact that Maryland first of all the colonies adopted and enforced the doctrine of religious liberty, and protected men of every creed in the enjoyment of the right to worship God after their own conscience.—Baltimore Sun.

William King, upon being converted in a Methodist revival meeting in Caldwell, Ky., arose and confessed that he had robbed a store in 1863 of $300 worth of goods. He went to the proprietor the next day and paid the amount, with twenty years' interest, but was immediately arrested for the theft, and now languishes in jail.

A point has come before the Michigan School Board. It is the point of a pin. Jocose pupils were accused of making it puncture their teacher. He had a habit of saying, after making an explanation and taking his seat: "Stick a pin there." The temptation to put a pin upright in his chair, under the circumstances, was irresistable. The question is whether the culprits ought to be expelled.

Clara Louise Kellogg is to receive $12,000 for singing twenty nights in Paris—$600 a night! No wonder she is in love with Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the great remedy for coughs and colds, for what would she do without it, if she should be attacked suddenly by hoarseness?

MORE ABOUT THE WOMAN-MAN.

His or Her Old Tutor Gives Some Interesting Reminiscences of School Days.

STAUNTON, Va., Feb. 20.—The recent marriage of two girls at Martinsburg, has attracted such wide attention that I, a friend of the family and a teacher of the groom, am constrained to send you a few reminiscences connected with the days when she bore the name of Rebecca L. Payne, before she became a full-fledged bridegroom. Mrs. Payne, mother, lives on her fine farm in Frederick county, Va., called Locust Level, about six miles from Winchester and quite near Brucetown. It is classic ground—the scene of almost daily skirmishes between the Federal and Confederate forces, when the tough old town of Winchester was battered between the fires of the contending armies. She was a widow with seven daughters, who were reared on the farm with much care for their education and morals, all of them being either members or regular attendants of the Methodist church. A Virginia poet called these girls

"THE PLEIADES OF LOCUST LEVEL."

Four of them were well married to industrious and well-to-do farmers, and now a fifth steps to the front and makes Miss Annie Hinton, her old and true friend, a happy wife! I cannot speak too highly of the character and appearance of Rebecca while she was a school girl at the Wesleyan Female Institute at Staunton some ten years ago. It was here that I first met her in the capacity of a teacher. She made friends everywhere by gentleness of manners and openness of heart. She was a true Christian and circumspect in all her actions—respectful and attentive to her instructors, and always ambitious to excel; and that laudable ambition carried her up to highest round of the ladder of knowledge, leaving her classmates in nearly every branch of education behind her. She never, or scarcely ever, joined in the romping games of the girls. Sometimes, if a ball was to be thrown or a heavy weight to be lifted, she would proudly exhibit

HER POWER OF MUSCLE.

She was brave and fearless and at one time when there was a thief scare among the inmates of the large building, she led a band of searchers thro' every room in the house to find out the hiding place of the intruder. At another time a number of young ladies formed a party for the purpose of ascending a mountain in the neighborhood of Staunton named "Betsy Bell." Miss Payne was the only one of the party to reach the lofty peak, which she did with a shout.

Her tall and queenly form stood erect in bold relief, with cloudless sky and mountain stretching far to the south. There she stood, like a statue, for awhile, and then she waved her handkerchief and kissed her hand to the pigmies in the valley below.

I frequently took the liberty of taunting her on the masculinity of her actions, such as shaking hands with a firm grip or walking with too long a stride; and when I hinted at the probability of her one day marrying, she would remark,

"I WOULDN'T MARRY THE BEST MAN LIVING."

She was rarely known to laugh, and her features were unusually fixed, but not stern, for her melancholy smile always gave assurance of a kindly disposition. The light hearts that beat around her, and the bright eyes of youth and beauty that shone upon her from every quarter failed to drive from her fixed features the shadow of sadness that rested there. All knew that there was some hidden secret that marred the happiness of her youth. The young ladies of the school all loved her, but felt a kind of awe in her presence.

After graduating with many honors, she returned to the farm, had the overseer employed by her mother discharged, and took the management of the estate into her own hands. Everything thrived. She speculated largely in stock, raising the finest horses, cattle and swine in that section, and laying up money in the bank. A prosperous yonng farmer and proposed in this way: "Becky, I have a farm worth $60,000, and I'd like to maary you, but I don't want to marry all of your family. They can't live with us."

She replied: "John, I have as good a farm as yours, and I don't want you nor your $60,000. I am already married to my mother and sisters. We have enough to eat without my marrying."

John went and got married to another girl, and after awhile Becky bought his farm for about half its value and added it to the family estate. Miss Rebecca Payne is now a happy man and benedict John Calhoun Payne. H.

The Quakers of Logan county, O., do not now worship with the quietude usual to their denomition, but are holding revival meetings of an exceedingly demonstrative character. Noah McClain, the evangelist who has brought them into such a state of excitement, is a negro. He is described as a wonderfully magnetic orator. The daily exercises last, with brief intermissions, from 10 o'clock in the morning until past midnight. The wildest of campmeeting scenes are here exaggerated. Peculiar attacks of coma are common among the converts. One young man, an atheist, defiant and shockingly profane, fell suddenly insensible and lay so for two days.
