VITAL ISSUES.

Lessons for the People to Remember this Year

The following extracts from recent issues of the New York Herald are pertinent and forcible presentations of a few points which will come up this year:

"How singularly pertinent and applicable to this, our Presidential year, are the doctrines and principles uttered by Thomas Jefferson four score years ago," said Mr. Erastus Brooks in an address before the Jefferson Club of New Brighton, Staten Island. "We are now deep in a discussion concerning the tariff," continued Mr. Brooks, "and the first inaugural address of President Jefferson contained thoughts on that theme as valuable to-day as they were then. He believed in the doctrine of free trade, with the possible contingencies of such protection as belonged to reciprocal commerce and navigation, and counteracting restrictions on the trade of those nations that will not respect reciprocity. He believed in internal reciprocity, opposing tariff to tariff, duty to duty, but at all times giving preference to free and unrestricted trade, and this to be maintained free from all shackles by commercial treaties and arrangements.

"On civil service," said Mr. Brooks, "President Jefferson could not be misunderstood. 'The patronage of the government should not conflict with the freedom of electtons,' he distinctly declared and refused to remove from office those who held places of honor under his predecessor. We read to-day of U. S. Senators voting themselves clerks and secretaries at liberal salaries, and then appointing their sons, daughters and wives to perform those duties. What a contrast to this was the reply of Jefferson, when importuned to appoint one of his own flesh and blood, 'I can find better men for every place than my own connections.' Jefferson's standard for candidates for office was different from the civil service catechising of to-day. His requirements were three in number:—First—Is he honest? Second—Is he capable? Third—Will he be faithful to the constitution?" Mr. Brooks commended Thomas Jefferson's career to the Jefferson Club as one worthy of study, example, imitation and admiration.

IMPORTING PAUPER LABOR.

There is no protection for labor. It is governed by the inexorable laws of supply and demand. The tariff never put a dollar in a workingman's pocket, and it never will. Employers buy their labor where they can get it cheapest. If the mechanics of Pennsylvania will not work for the wages which are offered, their places are supplied by foreign importations. The wages offered them are never in excess of the amount at which it is profitable for employers to import labor.

While the workingman must submit to this world-wide competition his employer is not similarly troubled. By the terms of the tariff laws the consumer who may wish his wares cannot buy abroad at a cheaper rate, for the duties are an effectual barrier to transactions of that kind. The home producer makes his prices a shade lower than those of foreign wares plus the freight and duty, and, by taking advantage of an unrestricted labor market, reaps profits which in a few years enrich him. This is only one of the beauties of protection, but it is interesting. It shows that while trade in every thing else is restricted labor may be had anywhere and everywhere as free as air. There are no laws to protect it.

The recent importation of Hungarians into Pennsylvania is a case in point. They take the places of American laborers who refused to work for the wages offered. These Hungarians are not settlers. They come under contract to work a certain number of years, at the expiration of which time they are to be returned to their homes. If protection protected the workingman would these wholesale importations of pauper labor be possible or profitable?

THE CARPENTERS.

A carpenter is certainly as useful a member of the community as an iron or a cotton worker, and so long as he obeys the law he is entitted to as much protection. If laws are to be passed specially favoring the iron industry, then it is but just that a like favor should be extended to the carpenter. And while it is claimed that the tariff does give equal protection to all, a very slight examination of its practical workings will convince one that inequality and consequent injustice are among its most marked features. Thus the average protection given to the cotton industry is about fifty per cent.; to the metal industry thirty per cent., and to the woollen industry sixty per cent. And yet in all of these three large industries taken together there are not many more persons employed than there are carpenters in the country. If these workers have received a protection which ranges from thirty to sixty per cent., why are not carpenters entitled to at least thirty per cent. or perhaps more? Yet they have none under the present tariff law, and they never did have any. They have built up their trade without demanding anything from the government, and they have consequently nothing to fear from tariff agitation. On the contrary, they would benefit through a removal of the many petty taxes now imposed upon them in behalf of those who, unlike themselves, have never realized that they could get along without being coddled with government bounty. This is not just; it is very unjust.

NOT PROTECTED.

It is said that there are 3,837,112 persons engaged in manufacturing, mechanical and mining occupations in the United States. So say the census returns. Moreover, it is claimed that this number of persons receive employment only by reason of the high tariff; that if duties are reduced mills and shops will be closed, manufacturing and mining operations will cease, and there will exist no demand or market for labor.

Let us see. Bakers, carpenters, blacksmiths, butchers, clerks and bookkeepers, contractors, painters, brickmakers, tailors and milliners are among those who will be found in almost any town, and to say that they would be deprived of labor is to say that man will not feed and clothe and shelter himself. These persons derive no advantage from protection. On the contrary, they are injured because everything they use is taxed and this tax comes out of their earnings. Fully one-half of the three million eight hundred thousand persons in this class called manufacturing receive no benefit directly or indirectly from protection. On the contrary they are injured.

Mr. Tilden and the Democracy.

Nothing was ever plainer in our politics than that the hope of Democratic success in the coming campaign rests mainly with Samuel J. Tilden.

We do not know that Mr. Tilden will accept the nomination. We believe he will. The pressure from all sections of the country and all classes of the party has become so strong that Mr. Dana of the New York Sun, Mr. Tilden's best friend, who has stubbornly opposed any discussion of Mr. Tilden's name, has yielded and now advocates his nomination. We believe Mr. Tilden will also yield. If he does he will be the next President as sure as he lives.

By common consent it is agreed that the solid South, with 153 votes, is confronted by an equally solid section of the North with 153 votes, leaving as the six debatable States New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Nevada, and California. The vote of these States will elect the next President. The proposition of certain foolish leaders to abandon New York and New Jersey in the hope of winning the Northwest is absurd as the proposion of the Republicans to divide the South.

In our opinion the debatableground is even narrower than the above limits. We should put Ohio in the Republican column, and leave the fight centred on the remaining five States. Of these Tilden can carry New York, Indiana and New Jersey beyond the shadow of a doubt. He would need to carry only New York and Indiana, as they with the solid South will give 203 votes, or two more than is necessary to elect. We believe Tilden can recapture Connecticut from the Republicans, and carry Nevada and California. This would give the Democracy an overwhelming victory.

No amount of shuffling and pettifogging can change the formula of the next campaign. The Democrats to win must carry New York and Indiana, and take fighting chances in New Jersey, Connecticut, Nevada and California. If they want to win it is their plain duty to nominate the man that is strongest in these States. That man, beyond all question and dispute, is Tilden. He carried New York, New Jersey, Indiana and Connecticut eight years ago. New York, Indiana and Connecticut were lost to the Democracy in the campaign of 1880, and Tilden's majority in New Jersey was cut down 10,000 votes. Tilden can recapture these States. He is stronger now than he was in 1876, and could make a more aggressive and brilliant camcampaign.

The situation may be summed up. Mr. Tilden will give the party confidence and enthusiasm. He will weld its factions into an army standing shoulder to shoulder. He will subordinate the tariff issue, on which the party is divided, to the issue of reform on which it is united. He is invincible in those particular States in which the fighting must be done. In address, sagacity, prestige and resources he stands head and shoulders above any man in the party. In his person only can the crime of that year confessed and condoned, be expiated. Victory is assured with him. It is exceedingly doubtful without him. For these reasons we favor his nomination.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE Blaine men in Maryland were sat upon by the Republican State Central Committee at the meeting in Baltimore last Wednesday. It is the intention of the party managers to send a delegation to Chicago prepared to vote for the man who wins. They do not hesitate to announce this purpose and by way of justification point to the experience of Maryland at the last nominating convention when the delegates voted solely for Grant, first and last, thereby cutting off the State from any claim to national patronage. It was decided to hold separate district conventions for the election of delegates to the National Convention. The Republican State Convention to elect the delegates at large will be held in Hagerstown on the 1st day of May. District conventions will be held a week earlier. In the first district the convention will assemble at Chestertown.

The State Central Committee decided to assume full control of all the primaries and thus prevent the interference of the county committees, who are nearly all Blaine followers.

Acts of Assembly.

The General Assembly has passed about one hundred acts, the bulk of which are local in their character, and for the payment of individual claims. The general laws are as follows: Protecting the oysters in the Potomac river, (for which a concurrent act was passed by the Virginia legislature;) allowing testimony to be taken out of the State by commissioners on the order of court; appropriating three thousand dollars for repairs to the executive mansion; providing addional employes for the General Assembly; amending the law in reference to passing of orders and taking bail in criminal law, so that judges may make orders in recess of court, and allowing clerks of courts, on order of the judges, to take bail in criminal cases during recess of court; punishing desecration and the profaning of cemeteries; requiring trustees to make reports to the court, within six months of giving bond, of the amount and disposition of trust estates; making the standard measure of charcoal 20 pounds to the bushel; providing for the delivery by executors and administrators of deeds of leasehold interest in real estate to legatees, for the distribution of estates which are divided into less parts than the number of heirs; amending the laws of limited partnership; requiring acknowledgements to be sworn to filed with clerks of court; regulating the custody of the great seal of Maryland.

The only local law for Caroline county is that dividing the fourth election district into two voting precincts. A number of bills from this county are before the Legislature.

SOME LARGE HOGS.—The N. Y. Sun publishes an account of a lot of hogs that were exposed for sale in that city which probably exceeds in size any previous record. Their weights ranged from 866 to 1,098 lbs. when dressed. Twenty of the hogs weighed 19,648 lbs. The breed is the Red and White Jersey. They were raised near Burlington, N. J. In giving an account of them the merchant said: "They were raised by Mr. John Carter. He has some more like them, only one is larger. They press down about fifteen per cent. Those hogs had a better house to live in than one third of the people of this city have. Each hog had a separate stall, that was kept clean and sweet by constant attention and unlimited fresh bedding. They were cared for just as fast horses are. They were fed on meal and milk. As a lot they are the heaviest ever brought to New York. or ever raised, for that matter. The largest one of the lot is the heaviest hog, but one, yet slaughtered." "Does it pay?" "Yes and no. The gratification of beating the record is always worth the expense. But lighter hogs yield more money on the investment."

The B. & O. Lateral Branch Bill.—The text of the bill supplementary to the act incorporating the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, which authorizes the construction of of lateral railroads from its Philadelphia Branch Railroad and to regulate the mode of condemning property by said railroad company is as follows:

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad be, and it is hereby authorized and empowered to construct lateral railroads in any direction whatever in connection with its Philadelphia Branch Railroad, which said Philadelphia Branch Railroad said company is now constructing from a connection with its main stem in the city of Baltimore to boundary line between Delaware and Maryland, in the county of Cecil; but said company shall only construct said lateral railroads in connection with said Philadelphia Branch Railroad in that part of the city of Baltimore known as "Canton," and opposite "Locust Point," in said city, and South Tome street, and in the following counties, namely: Baltimore, Harford, Cecil, and upon other counties upon the Eastern Shore of Maryland, and in the location of any part of said lateral railroads said company may, with the assent of the county commissioners, occupy any public highway in said counties, upon such terms as said county commissioners may prescribe, and in the construction, use and operation of said lateral railroads shall have all the rights, powers and privileges given to it by the said act, to which this is a supplement, and the several amendments and supplements thereto in relation to the construction, use and operation of its main line and the branches thereof; together with the right and power of crossing other railroads and condemning an easement therefor, as provided by the act of eighteen hundred and eighty-two, chapter two hundred and twenty-three; but any lateral road so constructed shall be subject to the same State, county and municipal taxation as is imposed upon other railroads whose charters do not exempt the same from taxation.

Section 2. And be it enacted, That in the the exercise of said company of the powers of condemnation of property in the counties for said Philadelphia Branch Railroad, the circuit court shall have the same powers in relation to any inquisition made and returned by the jury of inquest of damages, summoned in the manner provided by the act, to which this a supplement, and the amendments and supplements thereto, which by said acts are conferred upon county courts, but in all proceedings for the condemnation of property for the said lateral railroads and said Philadelphia Branch Railroad, made under the authority of this act, and the act to which this is a supplement and the amendments and supplements thereto, the respective courts to which the inquisitions are returned shall have full power to confirm said inquisitions at any time after the return of the same to the respective clerks of said courts, if no sufficient cause to the contrary be shown, but fifteen days after such return shall be allowed in which to file objections to the confirmations of said inquisitions.

Section 3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect from the date of its passage.

Why They Call Him "Old Man."

"Yes, that's sadly so," said Jenkins, "my hair is turning gray and falling out before its time. Use something? I would but most hair restorers are dangerous." "True," answered his friend, "but Parker's Hair Balsam is as harmless as it is effective. I've tried it, and know. Give the Balsam a show and the boys will soon stop calling you 'Old Man Jenkins.'" It never fails to restore the original color to gray or faded hair. Richly perfumed, an elegant dressing.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

To all Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and capable Agents in every county in the U. S. and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent. profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in exclusive sale by a deed for each and every county he secures from us. With all these advantages to our agents, and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every houseowner, it might not be necessary to make an "extraordinary offer" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its salability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear, and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear $100 in this time, above all expenses can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any Agent or General Agent who would like ten or more counties and work through sub-agents for ninety days, and fail to clear at least $750 above all expenses, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed, and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to every one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer, to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will loose the very best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.
