Our Governor.

It was earnestly desired by the Democracy of Maryland that our State should in some capacity be represented in the new Cabinet. When, however, it was ascertained that Senator Bayard would accept the portfolio of State, all further expectations of a Cabinet position for Maryland were dismissed as impracticable.

Still as a "true blue" Marylander had been a leading standard-bearer in the late national campaign,—one whose remarkably able and efficient service could neither be ignored nor suffered to pass unrecognized; and as Mr. Gorman for himself desired no other nor higher position than the one he already occupied as representing his State in the Senate of the United States, it at once brought Senator Gorman to the front in the matter of Maryland appointments.

Having no personal claim to present his recommendations would naturally be such as to subserve the general interests of his party and commend themselves to the support of the people of the State.

The nomination of Mr. Higgins, of Baltimore city, to a position in the Treasury department and the recent appointment of Governor McLane as minister to France, both favorites of Senator Gorman for their respective positions, are taken that the eminent services of our campaign manager have not been overlooked.

While Kentucky and Indiana members of Congress have been looking somewhat blue over the fate of their respective rolls for office, our own little State has so far had nothing to complain of. Cheer up, brothers, your time will come; and so, honor to whom honor is due!

While we regret to notice that the appointment of Mr. Higgins has given offense (unreasonably, we think) to the civil service reform organization (whose leading influences, by the by, are Republican), there can certainly be but one solid and unanimous voice of approval from every section of the State upon the subject of Gov. McLane's appointment as minister to France.

This will accomplish at one stroke three most happy results.

It will give to the United States a most able and accomplished representative and minister to Paris.

It also confers a high honor upon the State of Maryland in the elevation of one of her most brilliant sons to a position in the foreign diplomatic service second only to the court of St. James.

And, lastly, while it withdraws a faithful incumbent from the gubernatorial chair, it places in office by virtue of constitutional provision (being president of the Maryland Senate) Hon. Henry Lloyd, of Cambridge, an Eastern Shoreman; one whom we shall all be proud to hear announced as Governor de facto of the State of Maryland.

Senator Lloyd is in the prime and vigor of life, about thirty-three years of age, a grand-son of the late Edward Lloyd, of Talbot county, who was Governor of the State in 1809-11.

In 1881 Henry Lloyd was elected State's Senator from Dorchester county. At the last session of the legislature he was made president of the Senate, and exhibited in that capacity marked evidence of ability as an executive officer.

By virtue of his position as president of the Senate he will succeed to the Governorship of the State, when vacated by Governor McLane, and hold the same until his successor is elected at the next session of the legislature, and in all probability he will be chosen by that body; at least such is the present feeling in Caroline.

We predict for the youthful Governor a successful administration and a good title earned to be his own successor when the important occasion shall arrive to ballot for Governor to fill the unexpired term.

The Press on Senator Lloyd's Promotion.

From the Chertertown Transcript.

The Legislature, when it meets, will elect his successor, but there is little doubt that he will be elected his own successor. Mr. Lloyd appears to be the Grover Cleveland of Maryland.

From the Cambridge Chronicle.

There have been occasions when such a succession would have filled the Governor's chair at Annapolis with an unfit and unworthy occupant. We have need for no such fear in Mr. Lloyd. He is a gentleman of solid ability and sterling integrity. In him we shall have a safe and reliable and capable chief executive.

Aid the Indigent!

Many prominent philanthropic ladies and gentlemen of this State will hold a bazar at the Armory of the Fifth Maryland Regiment, Baltimore, beginning April 7th and continuing four days. The object of the bazar is to raise funds for the relief of the halt and destitute who fought on the Southern side in the civil struggle. The charity appeals strongly to every one, and especially to Marylanders, who have always borne strong affection for their brothers of the South. Let the people of Caroline show their magnanimity by liberal donations to the bazar. Saleable articles of all kinds or sums of money will be received by Mrs. Brune, 429 St. Paul street, Baltimore, and applied to the good cause.

Our Foreign Ministers.

President Cleveland has made these appointments of foreign ministers:

To England—Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont.

To France—Robert M. McLane, of Maryland.

To Germany—George H. Pendleton, of Ohio.

To Mexico—Henry R. Jackson, of Georgia.

Applicants for Office.

The Centreville Observer says: The Hon. Chas. H. Gibson, member of Congress from the first Maryland district, says that the eight counties in the first district have a good many applicants for official positions, and on Tuesdays and Saturdays he has numerous callers on that business at his office in Easton. He does not consider that sort of pressure any trouble, it being his duty to serve his constituents. He only regrets the misunderstanding of the situation by many of the applicants, who think things move rather slowly. The first district has three internal revenue collectors, a collector of customs, 18 lighthouse positions, and a multitude of postoffices, and other places which belong to the district. Then there are possibilities for federal offices in the departments and in the Baltimore custom-house, etc.

The Muse in Queen Anne.

In urging the taxpayers to pay their dues promptly the collector of the 3d district of Queen Anne county drops into poetry—

The farmers make a great mistake,
Not to pay their Taxes until late;
While they are waiting for grain to rise,
They seldom ever realize—
More than a cent or two.

We have heretofore noted with keen admiration the natural gifts for poesy with which the average Queen Anne countian is endowed; we once re-printed for the benefit of our readers a beautiful ditty of a Centreville barber, wherein was pathetically told the cost of a shave; but the foregoing is something more pre-eminently representative of the inspiration of the Queen Anne muse. Under the tutelage of the Observer our neighboring county to the west is growing a race of poets that will one day, we doubt not, "wake to ecstacy the living lyre."

THE COURT HOUSE AGAIN.

"Yerag's" Figuring and Impracticable Financiering Criticised.

To the Editor of THE JOURNAL.

Your correspondent, Yerag, I assume, is of German nationality, since he signs his name by writing from right to left. It is possible that the gentleman may be left-handed, and is in the habit of giving his signature back-handed. That may do in some cases, but in financial questions back-hand signatures will not be received at par, any more than his system of raising funds to build a new court house.

I agree with your correspondent that the taxpayers of Caroline county are not prepared to build a new court house at this time; neither will they be for many years to come, and to pay for the same in one year's tax levy would be almost if not entirely an unheard of transaction in this or any other State in the Union. The taxpayers have the right to assume that the gentlemen who profess to be anxious to build a new court house and collect the whole cost of the same in one year's assessment are in reality opposed to building at all; and that they take this way to block the wheels of progress, knowing that such a proposition carried out would cause great distress among the poor, who are now having all they can do to meet the present high and oppressive rate of taxation.

Your correspondent Yerag's first showing of figures is as trifling and weak as figures can make it. Should the commissioners levy and collect the sum of $20,000 in one year and erect a new building with the same that is the end of the cost of said building. There is no interest to be added to that which is paid. He may as well continue his figures for 100 or 1,000 years as for 20. Suppose your correspondent should be so extravagant as to purchase a new, clean shirt at the cost of one dollar. Why, at the end of twenty years that shirt, according to his views, would cost him over $3.00; and how much more economical it would be for him to invest twenty cents at compound interest for forty years, and then buy the new shirt, wearing the old shirt during the forty years of waiting. His figures and calculations are like those of the miser who refused to lath and plaster his house on the theory that if the building burned down he would lose just so much more.

Yerag's second proposition is little better than the first. His figuring assumes the money to be loaned from the day it is paid into the hands of the collectors, no allowance being made for lost time, while every man knows that the collector has months—yes, years—in which to collect the tax. Again, assume that there are men standing ready to accept the loan of $1,000 annually and give bonds and indemnity for double the amount; the thirteen years loans with compound interest, according to his showing, would amount to the gross sum of over $20,000, to be paid promptly in one payment at the end of thirteen years. Show me the man who would loan money at this rate and I will show you a full-fledged dude or a bankrupt. I know of but one man who would be likely to accept such a proposition, and that is Ward, of the late firm of Grant & Ward, New York. As the result of that kind of financiering I would refer your correspondent to the Marine Bank of New York city.

The gentleman's third proposition is built on a sandy foundation of guesswork and is weaker, if possible, than the second. To whom are the commissioners to loan this annual collection of two hundred dollars for the short time of forty years at compound interest? Who would have that sum in hand at the end of forty years to build a new court house for the second and third generation after we of the present day are gone to our rest? Friend Yerag, I fear you will not live to see that $200 annual collection in a new court house this side of the river. Time is too short. It will be much better to build a new court house at the proper time and let succeeding generations assist in paying for their own security and comfort.

MORE OF BRIBERY.

The Drones, the Workers, and the Witnesses—The Only Remedy, the Press and the People.

To the Editor of THE JOURNAL.

The bribery of voters has been so long in usage in Caroline county that it is supposed by some to be a hereditary right. It has been in families for years to sell, and others to buy, so that any one who raises a voice to question the propriety of this usage is looked upon as a sort of crank who is intermeddling with things that do not concern him.

So the writer of this article thought about the Abolition cranks; but instead of seeing the black man in slavery as he once saw him he now sees Sambo with a ballot in his hand, determining, measurably, the legislation of the county and state.

The writer once saw whiskey sold at all the groceries in the county, and it was about as plentiful as water; and the temperance crank came along and the people wisely said that rum in such liberal quantities wasn't wholesome to the community, and now only the privileged classes enjoy the luxury of too much rum.

And why should our progressive age allow bribery — that other relic of barbarism—to remain when slavery and whiskey have gone to their last account? Why should six hundred white men sell their suffrage in Caroline from year to year—a county shown to the country to be of such magnificent progressiveness that it will not tolerate slavery and whiskey?

Come now, you bribe-takers and and bribe-givers, let us reason together. At the late presidential election there were cast, in all, in this county, 2,832 votes. It is estimated that of this number 832 were cast by colored men, leaving the total white vote at 2,000; and no man in the inner circles at the usual caucus the night before the election can truthfully deny or question that the number of white voters—Democratic and and Republican—who sell, is less than six hundred. So we have about one out of every three white voters selling, for money, his suffrage.

The price paid is from $3 to $20. Now where does the money come from? A small portion furnished on the Democratic side from Baltimore, and I presume another small portion from the Republican office holders of Baltimore, and the principal portion from that board of conspirators that get around the caucus tables the night before election, and bid for offices from collector to county clerk.

Does this wound the sensibilities of the county? Is it uncomplimentary? If so make the most of it, for it is true nevertheless. Now this accursed business that has shamed our county for years ought to go down, but it will not without a struggle. Let us stand at the windows on election day and observe the mighty sovereigns of Caroline at work in this magnificent business of perpetuating republican liberty!

First, who are the drones? Your quiet, peaceable, law-abiding citizen, whose aim in life is to refrain from giving offense by word, thought or deed; who would like his party to win because it is right pleasant to be in the majority. He knows that the principles of his party are right. He is a drone because he is never a candidate for office; he doesn't like to commingle with what the politician has to do to hold office. He casts his little one ballot as though he had something to do with the election, when in fact the $3 men decide the contest.

Second, who are the workers? They are the men who attend conventions, who hold the offices, who are in the line of promotion or hope to be, or who are the paid henchmen of other men.

Third, who are the witnesses? Alas! too often youth and young men who are just coming into possession of that royalty of manhood, American suffrage, so hardly won by their frozen-footed soldierly ancestors of Valley Forge. Half-grown youths are at the polls on election day to behold without blush their fathers and brothers engaged in the noble contest of of who can outstrip the other in this shameless traffic of buying and selling manhood suffrage.

Finally, what is the remedy? Let the press and the people speak, or let us in future hold our peace.

REFLEX.

PENINSULAR.

—The thieves who picked the pocket of Shadrach Raughley, Esq., of Harrington, while he was in Philadelphia last winter, have been sentenced to four years and a half in the Eastern Penitentiary.

—Mrs. Smithers, wife of Dr. T. J. Smithers, a prominent dentist of Easton, had her arm broken by a fall at the Easton skating-rink Tuesday. This is the third accident of the kind that has occurred at the rink during the past three weeks.

—Wheat throughout Talbot county is in a terrible condition, and the farmers say that from present prospects not more than one fourth of a crop will be harvested.

—The Easton, Md., Gazette is offered for sale by its proprietors.

GUIZOT'S HISTORY OF FRANCE. WITH 426 Fine Illustrations. Eight beautiful volumes, small octavo, cloth, gilt tops. Price reduced from $49.50 to $8.00, postage $1.20.

THE BEST. "This is the only complete American edition of this work, which is known as the best popular history of France."—Journal, Indianapolis, Ind.

MACAULAY'S Peer "Guizot is the Macaulay of the history of France. His narrative is full of vigor. Like a quick sketch, his characters rise before us as in the flesh; they are men and women, not historic lay figures. It is as charming as any romance. There is only one drawback . . . it seems more like getting a present than making a purchase."—Dominion Churchman, Toronto.

CIPHERED OVER. "From the pen of a master. How Mr. Alden can give the eight volumes, and this on good paper, and clear type, including the multitude of illustrations, is a thing we have ciphered over, but we fail to understand it."—Christian Leader, Boston.

PHILADELPHIA, March 23, 1885.

Cloths are not less worn than usual. There is reason for wearing them more than usual, a double reason: they never were better; they never were nearly so low. We mean a single sort of cloths: dollar ladies'-cloths for 75 cents. But in this single sort there are more than twenty colors, and more than twenty mixtures.

The predominance of mixtures is notable. The mixtures are notable themselves. Formerly a mixture meant as even color as one could get by mixing different-colored wools. Now they are stronger; mottles rather than mixtures.

Altogether out of accord with the market, these dollar ladies'-cloths at 75 cents are there for a purpose. That purpose is to concentrate at the trade in ladies'-cloth on them. There are plenty of them. There isn't a better in any respect.

More than 1½ yards wide; nearly fifty colors; best dollar ladies'-cloth; 75 cents.

Lupin's Fatima, a dress stuff, 50 cents; two-thirds of its value. Twenty colors.

French black-and-white little checks, 40 cents; about half its value.

Southeast from the center.

Of all the big bargains the biggest is a German plaid dress-stuff, three-quarters long fibre wool, forty inches wide, twenty-five cents a yard!

The stuff belonged at 75 cents; but in the general fall of the market it got down to 60; properly speaking it is now worth 60 cents. We shall sell it for 25.

How does it look? It's a twill of cashmere weight, not hard-twisted, not too closely woven. Two pairs of plaids. Black, clear-white and gray 1¾-inch-square checks, and ditto a little larger. The other two are six-inch complex plaids of black and white and gray and pigeon-blue.

The checks are bright and gay. The plaids are rather sombre. The white of the plaids is not a clear white.

Sixty cents for twenty-five.

Jerseys more than ever; perhaps a hundred different styles of black jerseys, including crochet and beaded, $1.25 to $50.

Barnsley table-linen is one of the most substantial stuffs in trade. Not over-fine; heavy, thick, enduring, good linen, grows better with wear. Not new; the patterns do not change much; variety; large figures, small and middling; from wandering vines and scrolls down to little ferns and ivy leaves.
