Farmers Look Ahead For the New Year—1952

Already farmers of Maryland are looking ahead and planning their farming operations to make the best possible use of assistance provided under the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Pragram says Joseph Blandford, chairman of the Maryland Production and Marketing Administration State Committee.

Benefiting from past experience and the continuous improvement of the ACP itself, farmers can be expected to get more and better consrvation fo reach dollar of public funds spent.

Through the Agricultural Conservation Program, the individual farmer and the Nation are cooperating in a program of protecting and building the soil and water resources so that current defense needs can be met without reducing the land's productivity. In most instances, says Mr. Blandford, the program results in improving and increasing the productivity of the land.

Mr. Blandford points out that farmers can make better use of the materials and services provided under ACP by looking ahead and making plans well in advance of actual operations. Where scarce materials are needed, order should be placed arly enough to assure delivery.Arangements should also be made early for needed services such as those requiring dirt-moving equipment.

Beginning now to plan for the coming year's conservation activities gives time for a more complete better balanced, and more effective use of ACP says Mr. Blanifford.

Home Brew Cheap, Revenue Bureau Says No

Home brew, popular concoction of Prohibition days, may look like a cheap way to beat the rising cost of beer.

But the Internal Revenue Bureau says no.

Home brew enthusiasts claim a very potable beverage can be made in the cellar for a couple of cents a bottle. Best of all, they say, revenue agents can't lift a finger if you don't sell the beer, or take it out of the house.

But Claud B. Cooper, chief enforcement of the Bureau's alcoholic tax unit, insists that brewing "spirits of any kind" is against the law without a bond or permit.

You can get a permit to make up to 200 gallons of wine, but you'd have to qualify as a brewer to make home brew.

Deputy Commissioner E. G. Grigsby said premises would have to be used exclusively for beer-making. That would mean moving the wife and kids out.

You also would have to file a plan of your layout, conform with tough sanitary regulations and let the commissioner specify exactly what kind of pipes, tubes and barrels you use.

There is no limit on the size of operations, but the commissioner must tack a sealed meter on your cellar-brewery to know how much beer you're turning out. You have to file a bond, too, to guarantee payment of taxes in case you sell any oof the stuff.

You don't have to pay taxes on the beer if you or your guests drink it on the premises. That's why breweries are so generous with visitors.
