Delights of Gardening

Bentztown Bard of the Baltimore Sun must have been reading The News, but his article which follows is about thirty days ahead of our stuff.

One thing about amateur gardening is the consistency with which the gardener swears at the end of every season that he will never make a garden again; that it is cheaper to buy his vegetables; just as the amateur chicken raiser swear he'll buy his eggs and chickens hereafter. But as the seasons return the yearning to be out in the soil with tools to work with, seeds to sow and beds to form and create in the rich earth, is too many for us, and we plunge into it again. Early planting of peas is the first temptation so'swe can have our own young peas in early June. Early corn, too, and the first new potatoes. Then there is the asparagus bed to bring into shape, and the strawberry bed, with the indescribile joy of going out to pick your own strawberries on a June morning, ripe and red and of delicious flavor. Well, back again to the old rake, and the hoe and shovel Nothing like it in the long run!

Fire Destroys Stevensville Opera House

In the most disastrous fire Stevensville has had in many years, the Stevensville Opera House was completely dstroyed, last Saturday afternoon.

The fire was discovered shortly after 12 o'clock noon. Fire companies from Queenstown and Centreville battled the blaze, and succeeded in confining it to the theatre.

The building which formerly was the Methodist Church, was purchased and remodeled some years ago by Senator Kirwan, but for some time had been the proprty of Lemuel Kirwan, who also owned the movie equipment, which was also destroyed by fire.

The theatre had been operatd for several years as the Stevensville Opera House, the compltely equipped building being rented from Mr. Kirwan by F. P. Klein. According to Mr. Klein, there was also in the building at the time of the fire some $2,500 worth of equipment which was his property. Everything but this latter equipment is said to have been covered by insurance.

FIRST BLACKOUT

Ex-Sheriff William S. Delahay, whose parents were residents of Talbot county ofttimes listen to them relating how the natives of St. Michaels fooled the British on their trip up the Miles river in 1813 with the first blackout ever known.

When the British attacking force was noticed coming St. Michaels way the farmers hung out lanterns in tall trees while the citizens of the town put out all lights. As a result the British gunners overshot their mark and the town escaped damage
