SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1906.

A Chicago court is wrestling with a unique breach of promise suit brought against a man by his divorced wife. She declares he courted her over, and then married another. If the deserted sweetheart-wife is of a thrifty turn of mind she ought to be able, between alimony and damages, to console herself for the loss of her dubious matrimonial prize.

A woman in California has been granted a divorce from her husband on the ground that he is a consumptive. The promise "for better, for worse," seems to be but a mere perfunctory one in these days, in no way taken seriously by those who make it. Tuberculosis is not the most pleasant of things, but practical desertion on account of bad health does seem a bit too cold-blooded even for the formal atmosphere of courts.

In naming Hon. Wm. Pinkney Whyte as the successor to the late Senator Arthur Pue Gorman, Gov. Warfield not only played good politics but selected a man that would represent this wing of the Democratic party. While it must be admitted, the newly appointed Senator is one of the brightest lights in our State yet, he does not possess the political shrewdness of his predecessor and, not only Baltimore city, but the entire State will feel the loss of our able Senator when it comes to getting appropriations.

The ptomaines are certainly rapidly developing in the public system in the canned scandals. Public confidence in this important industry has been thoroughly poisoned. The cure must be slow, sure, sane and honestly efficient. Like all other poisons, this will be hard to eradicate entirely so that the popular faith in the food supply will be restored to a healthy condition. Much of this restoration will have to come through the undoubtedly healthy state of the supply itself. Like Cæsar's wife, it must be above suspicion. If the reforms promised are not made in good faith, the last state of the public distrust will be worse than the first.

According to a number of exchanges, the Pennsylania railroad, struck a snag when it began operating Sunday trains, and, in the words of our exchanges, "they will have to stop this Sabbath desecration." According to a psalm in the Hagerstown almanac, the Sabbath is the seventh day of the week or, a day observed by the Jews as the day of rest; while Sunday, the first day of the week, is observed by Christians as the day of rest. Thus it will be seen, according to our exchanges, the Jews and Christians both claim a day. Well it will be good for the railroad employee as they can stand two days holiday.

Freak legislation has apparently reached the climax in the Lousiana legislature, where a member introduced a resolution to regulate marriage, one provision being that no man shall begin his courting before the age of twenty-four, or do so without an affidavit that his courtship is in good faith. Another provision forbids widowers over forty courting girls under eighteen out of their own parish. To introduce reason in love affairs would add much to the perfection of the race, but the experience of the ages has been unable to accomplish this desired result, and it is not going to be done by crank legislators. Men have courted from time to time and women have married them—but not to please the legislature.

Of two men lately arranged in New York courts, one who embezzled ten thousand dollars was liberated on the ground that the mental agony he had suffered was punishment enough, while the other, who, driven by privations to crime, stole thirteen dollars' worth of goods, was sentenced to imprisonment with hard labor. The apparent moral of this is that the petty offender deserves punishment tightly for his folly in neglecting the greater opportunities for plunder which lie before him, and that the big thief deserves appreciation for his enterprise and grasp of opportunities. Justice certainly does her work in a blind sort of way, and it is no wonder that it sometimes proves unsatisfactory in its results, or supplies dangerously strengthening arguments for the specious pleas of

A man in Pittsburg, heir to fifty millions, killed himself. No amount of worldly success in any way can keep perfectly satisfied the cravings of human nature or expect perfect happiness under any conditions, but in spite of these well-known facts it will always be a profound mystery to the great majority why a man of millions could find life so hard as to leave it—and the millions.

A young Englishman, arraigned for intoxication in an Indiana court, burst into tears when told by the court to "skid-doo," thinking it a sentence of unknown terrors pronounced upon him. Probably he thought from the sound that he was to be skewered and skinned, for the blunt Britons do not indulge in the graceful dallying with the language in which this land is such a proficient. But when it was explained to him he lost no time in following Shakespeare's advice to suit the action to the word.

The sincerest tribute that can be paid to superiority is imitation. The many imitations of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve that are now before the public prove it the best. Ask for DeWitt's. Good for burns, scalds, chaffed skin, eczema, tetter, bruises, cuts, boils and piles. Highly recommended and reliable. J. S. Denny and Wye Mills drug store.
