NEGRO CRIMINALS.

Senator Lee Advises Flogging for any Lack of Industry or Respect in the Negro.

Senator Blair Lee, of Montgomery county, is not only inclined to favor the establishment of a central place for the execution of death sentences in this state, but he would go a step further and see that more severe penalties are imposed on negro criminals. He believes that the black man, has not a wholesome respect for the law as administered by the white man and in order to bring about "strict and severe regulation" would add to the penalties. Senator Lee writes as follows from his home at Silver Spring to a newspaper:

Your inquiry as to my opinion on the place for the execution of death sentences, and, presumably, confinement of prisoners under indictment for charge which might involve this gravest penalty of the law, is just received, as I have been away for ten days.

Economy and efficiency would both seem to point in the direction of the change you propose, and unless some better arguments than those yet published to the contrary are brought forward, I would be inclined to support this timely suggestion.

There is another line of thought in this connection to which I would invite attention. It seems obvious that more severe punishment of vagrant and criminal negroes for petty offenses is greatly needed. Notwithstanding the good character and faithful service which so many colored people give, the majority of the race requires strict and severe regulation. This race was always subject in Africa to arbitrary government. From this heredity and the fact that a remarkable improvement came to them in this country as slaves, and, further, that when the regulation of slavery existed crimes of this sort were not committed, it would seem clear that, in the interest of the negro race itself and of its importance and usefulness to the white race, there must be a more effective and severe regulation of vagrant and criminal blacks. Respectable and thoughtful negroes will understand the situation just as well as our white people, who, like myself, were raised on the farm in daily contact and with most kindly feelings to the slaves.

Criminal negroes do not object to short jail sentences, and, as matters now stand, in many cases the first really corrective influence they come up against is the hangman.

Our duty to the black race is, however, insignificant in comparison with the protection of our own. Lynching by mobs or lawful executions after these great crimes are not calculated to do away with the dreadful menace to which the women of our race are subject in the presence of the untamed passions of these aboriginal people. Corrective punishment of a vigorous and severe nature for their first offense against law and order, as above suggested, will bring to the African mind of the lowest sort a deference for the white man and the white woman which is greatly needed at present.

Some years ago a police court judge who had great experience in dealing with the African criminal element commented to me on the remarkable indifference of that race to the rights and lives of one another, and said that if they mutilate white people with the same indifference that they did one another a race war would be almost immediate. That was some years ago, and, as the influence of slavery wears off violent crimes by negroes against white men, as well as women, are becoming more numerous and will continue to increase with rapidity in all probability unless some deliberate and reasonable methods of correction are arrived at. Many farmers are beginning to feel like settlers living on the edge of an Indian country.

There is a large per cent. of negro men who are unwilling to work and who live upon the labor of their women or upon what they can steal. From this class come the more serious criminals, whose petty offences have been so trifled with that their fear of the white man and the law has vanished. Hard labor under superintendents with full authority to flog for any lack of industry or respect will soon convince these people that they must go to work or leave the state, and will make the negro tramp shy of our borders.

When establishing, therefore, a central hanging place for negroes, for that is what it will amount to in the main, it becomes us as Christian people, desiring to do our duty to our neighbors and ourselves, to undertake the regulation of this race in the proper spirit and the creation of penal institutions so organized that they will be effective for this regulation.

Without doubt, if anything along the lines of these suggestions were attempted there would be an outcry from ignorant and prejudiced philanthropists in Massachusetts and elsewhere, but they are mostly faddists and absolutely ignorant of the emotional character of the ordinary negro, and equally ignorant of the present rapid degeneracy of this race and its urgent need for firm and friendly help.

An observing editor went to church, and in his next issue said: "We attended church last Sunday and listened to a very good sermon, as sermons go. We enjoyed the singing and stood up with the brethren and sisters while they sang the good old hymn, 'Shall we know each other there?' While the hymn was being sung we glanced about us and counted a dozen members of the congregation of the church who do not speak to each other when they meet on the street or elsewhere. The thought occurred to us, why should they 'know each other there' when they seemingly don't know each other here?"

EVERYBODY COMPLAINS.

Continuous Wet Weather Causing Sickness and Annoyance—Cause of Suffering.

Continued and almost record-breaking spell of wet weather is causing trouble in nearly every section of the country and to people in every line of business. Housewives are complaining of the mould that forms over night on food-stuffs, on clothing and cooking utensils and of the dampness that penetrates every nook and corner, invading sugar, salt and flour receptacles and ruining these commodities. Contractors complain that it is impossible to make any progress on outside work, while it is impossible to handle sand or to have it delivered. Farmers complain that the rain is running unpicked fruit and doing great damage in the country. In fact, the almost daily deluge is causing great inconvenience and damage, as well as untold sickness.

According to C. F. von Herrmann, section director of the United States Weather Bureau, there has been a heavier rainfall and a greater amount of humidity this summer than during a corresponding period for the last three years. Since 1870, when the weather records were first regularly preserved, there have been only three years in which the amount of rainfall during June, July and August has equaled that of the same period this year. They were 1870, 1889 and 1903.

"The cause of the excessive amount of rainfall this summer," said Mr. von Herrmann, "is due to the continued development of moderate areas of low barometer over the Atlantic Coast States. There has even been a great barometic depression in the Southern States and those bordering on the Great Lakes, which has had an important effect on the weather in this vicinity.

"There have been no severe storms this summer, although it is true we have had several bad thunderstorms, because all the depressions of the barometer have been moderate in their character. There is absolutely no connection between the great rainfall and humidity of this season and the recent earthquakes, as some people imagine. Scientists throughout the country are inclined to believe that the latter were due to the softening of the earth's crust in the regions where they occurred.

"The great humidity has been due to the abundant precipitation of rainfall and the high temperature. The higher the average temperature the more moisture the atmosphere is capable of containing. As an illustration of my point I shall give an example. If the mean temperature of the atmosphere is 70°, each cubic foot of it, if saturated, is capable of containing 8 grains of moisture; but, on the other hand, if the mean temperature is 90° the amount of moisture that a cubic foot of it is capable of holding is doubled. It will be seen that the moisture contained in a given amount of atmosphere does not vary directly as the temperature.

"The air has been highly saturated with moisture this summer, and it is due to that fact that we have experienced the sultry oppressiveness of the heat. The air near our bodies becomes saturated with perspiration, which is unable to evaporate in the outer air because of the great amount of moisture in the atmosphere. We experience a very uncomfortable feeling, as nature's method for the disposal of the effete matter of the body is seriously interfered with and the normal respiration of the system is impaired. The dryer the air the easier it is to bear the heat, as the evaporation of the waste products of the body goes on without interference and the temperature of the system is kept at a normal point.

"The winds here in the summer generally blow from the south and southeast. They are not dry, as they come directly from the Atlantic Ocean over a comparatively low country. It will be seen that there is not much chance for dry weather, except when there is a shift to the north or northwest. It is from those directions that the winds generally blow during the late fall and winter, and it is for that reason that an extreme amount of cold should be more easily endured than a similar degree of heat. In the former case nature is allowed to carry on her removal of the waste moisture of the body, not only without interruption, but with the assistance of atmospheric evaporation."

Summer Diarrhœa in Children.

During the hot weather of the summer months the first unnatural looseness of a child's bowels should have immediate attention, so as to check the disease before it becomes serious. All that is necessary is a few doses of Chamberain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy followed by a dose of castor oil to cleanse the system. Rev. M. O. Stockland, pastor of the first M. E. Church, Little Falls, Minn., writes: "We have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for several years and find it a very valuable remedy, especially for summer disorders in children." A western paper says that you can tell a successful farmer by looking at his horses; you can tell a slovenly woman by looking at her hair; you can tell the dry goods box statesman by looking at the patches on the bosom of his pantaloons; you can tell the poisonous serpent by the bluntness of his tail, but the easiest thing of all you can tell the enterprising merchant by a glance at the local papers. This is not divine revelation, but it is business and gospel truth.

The thousands of school children who have been having a glorious time during the summer will soon take up their daily school duties. There is little rejoicing, as usual, among the children, but a few weeks will suffice to get them interested and working like bees. THREE DEATHS.

One in Sudlersville and Two in the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore.

Lemuel C. McGinnis, Jr., a recent graduate of Washington College, died at the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore on Thursday of last week, aged 19 years. Sometime ago, Mr. McGinnis sustained an injury to his head from which he never recovered, and it produced an abscess on the brain. The deceased was the son of Lemuel C. McGinnis, of Crumpton. The remains were taken to the home of his parents Friday and funeral services were held Saturday afternoon.

Samuel Phillips died at the home of his son, George W. Phillips, near Sudlersville, Thursday night of last week. Old age was the immediate cause of his death. Mr. Phillips was a native af Queen Anne's county and was born September 17, 1825. Mr. Phillips followed farming all of his life until he was compelled to retire by the infirmities of old age. He was twice married, his first wife being a daughter of the late Captain Noah Merchant, from which there are two children living. His second wife was Sarah E. Stafford and from this union there are six children living. Funeral services were held at his late home last Saturday afternoon and interment was made in Sudlersville cemetery.

William O. Flowers, of Centreville, died at the Maryland General Hospital, Baltimore, last Sunday, after an operation for bladder trouble. Mr. Flowers had been a sufferer from this trouble for two years and about two weeks ago went to the hospital seeking relief. He was born near Dover, Del., and was 59 years of age. He moved to Centreville in 1871, where he has lived ever since, conducting a blacksmith and wheelwright shop. On December 29, 1875 he married Miss Emma R. Costin, daughter of the late James H. Costin, who with two children, H. Holton Flowers and Miss Bertha Flowers survive him. Funeral services were held in the Centreville M. E. Church at 10.30 o'clock Wednesday morning and interment was made in Centreville cemetery.

Station Agents Demand More Wages.

When the Pennsylvania railroad station agents met in Dover, Del., Monday to consider and discuss the new Hepburn Rate Bill, under which the government will exercise supervision of the railroads, it was thought they were altogether a prosperous looking and contented lot of men. But there was just a little feeling of restiveness permeating the atmosphere late Monday afternoon. The Pennsy workers, the bone and sinew of its service over the entire Delaware and Maryland peninsula, held a little meeting of their own, and, it is said neither the trainmaster nor division freight agent participated.

The objects of the meeting were kept secret, but it transpired Monday night that the agents decided that they ought to have more pay, and appointed a committee to wait upon the operating department of the Pennsylvania system and request an increase in the scale. "And why should we not have it?" asked one of the agents in the course of a spirited discussion. "Considering the responsibilities upon us, the steadiness of our service and the active work we do, and then considering the increased profits of our company's business and the safety with which the whole gigantic service is operated, we are paid nothing like a salary commensurate with our performance of duty."

William H. Jackson is Again Named.

The Republican County Convention met in the courthouse at Centreville Monday afternoon and elected the following delegates to the Ocean City convention, which met Wednesday. Thomas R. Price, Geo. E. Lane, Wm. J. Melvin, W. Bruce Sparks, John P. Forrester, Jonathan Chance, H. R. Bryan and Edward G. Hayden. The alternates were Leslie Booker, James E. Johns, Walton C. Orrell, C. E. S. Ringgold, Chas. H. Metzdorff, Edward Thompson, D. M. See and W. E. Lynch. No resolutions were adopted and the delegates were not instructed. William E. Thompson presided and George A. Barton was secretary.

Former Congressman William H. Jackson was nominated at Ocean City Wednesday by the First District Republican Congressional Convention to again contest with Congressman Thomas A. Smith for the honor of representing this district in Congress. The work of the convention was not only harmonious, but was enthusiastic, and Mr. Jackson demonstrated that he is a prime favorite and a power among the Republicans of this district.

Prof. Tyler, of Amherst college, said recently: "A man can live comfortably without brains: no man ever existed without a digestive system. The dyspeptic has neither faith, hope or charity." Day by day people realize the importance of caring for their digestion; realize the need of the use of a little corrective after overeating. A corrective like Kodol for dyspepsia. It digests what you eat. J. S. Denny and Wye Mills drug store.

"Make Hay While the Sun Shines."

There is a lesson in the work of the thrifty farmer. He knows that the bright sunshine may last but a day and he prepares for the showers which are so liable to follow. So it should be with every household. Dysentery, diarrhœa and cholera morbus may attack some member of the home without warning. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy which is the best known medicine for these diseases, should always be kept at hand, as immediate treatment is necessary, and delay may prove fatal. The racing was scheduled to sta... at 1.30 o'clock but, as the track was a little heavy, it was delayed until 2.30, which enabled people at a distance, who on account of the heavy showers in the morning were afraid to start thinking the track unfit, to telephone, and, after being assured that the races would be a go, they came and expressed themselves as well pleased with the exhibition. A number of horses from Denton, Church Hill and Sudlersville which were to participate in the races were detained at home on account of the inclement weather.

It is quite probable that last Saturday's races closed the season at the Gallowsfield Driving Park unless the managers decide to have a race after the Easton Fair.

As the lease on the track expires with this season, the stables, grandstand and judges' stand can be purchased on reasonable terms.

The summary of the 3.00 class follows:

Peach Crop 2,000,000 Baskets Short.

Chas. E. Kingston, division freight agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, whose headquarters are in Wilmington, Thursday, announced that the peach crop this year on the Delaware and Maryland peninsula falls 2,000,000 baskets below the railroad's estimate. Mr. Kingston's district embraces the Delaware, Maryland and Central divisions. He says:

"Our movement of peaches this year has been far below that of 1904. Last year the crop was a failure, but this year we expected shipments amounting to 3,000,000 baskets. Our movements, however, show not much over a million baskets. This has been a great disappointment to us and we share losses with the fruit growers.

"After escaping everything known to be destructive, the peaches almost reached maturity when they were attacked by blighted wet weather. The same adverse weather conditions tended to decrease other crops. As a result we have not been taxed on the peninsula to the extent that we were last year."

On several days during the past fortnight, however, the shipments of agricultural products on the Delaware division have been particularly heavy.

The commission and force will work between Annapolis and the northern side of Magothy river for a few additional days, and will then transfer their operations to the section between Thomas point and Herring bay. This is a large and important oyster section, offering a livelihood to a great number of watermen. The important beds of West river, Three Sisters island and Herring bay are within the section. It is anticipated that rapid work will be accomplished, as the beds are many large and unbroken. From Herring bay it is probable that the work will continue straight down the shore of Calvert county, and as the shore is almost entirely without indentations, it is probable that rapid work will be done.
