SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1906.

One of the worst boys in the schools of New York has been converted into a model pupil by a surgical operation. Why not extend this principle to the heads of bad trusts, and turn them into saintly philanthropists by the simple operation of removing their adenoids?

Dr. Osler's reported comparison of the American collegian's deficiency in the classics to the excellence of the English standard suggests that, in view of the chloroform theory, life becomes entirely too short to spend more than the most casual interval in the realms of ancient history.

Chicago's Four Hundred have been cut down to 189. It must give the excluded ones a terrific jolt to be thus cast out of the social Eden among the unsympathetic and jeering masses of the common people. But, then, so loosely constructed are the social ranks of this benighted country that there is really nothing to prevent the castouts from assembling and forming an exclusive aristocracy of their own.

The war over simplified spelling is now on. The President is sending to Congress all executive communications spelled in reformed style, and Congress proposes to print all these communications in the old style, according to Webster or other standard dictionaries.

The contest is an interesting one, and bets are about even as to who will weaken, the President or Congress. The matter took definite shape in the Committee on Appropriations, from which was reported last Friday the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, containing the following paragraph:

Hereafter, in printing documents authorized by law or ordered by Congress or either branch thereof, the Government Printing Office shall follow the rules of orthography established by Webster or other generally accepted dictionaries of the English language.

This is a broad provision, and covers all the work done at the Government Printing Office, because such work must be "authorized by law." If this paragraph is adopted by both houses of Congress, the President will be confronted with the alternative of abandoning his attempts at reform spelling or veto ing an important appropriation bill.

Under his direction, all the executive documents this year have been printed in accordance with the modified spelling system, and the 300 corrected words which were promulgated have been used. This provision in the appropriation bill completely nullifies the Presidential order, and the issue is direct and clear cut.

President Roosevelt according to a dispatch from Washington, yesterday, will withdraw his simplified spelling order to the public printer, and hereafter all documents from the executive departments will again be printed in the old-fashioned style.

Two clergymen protest through letters in last Saturday's Baltimore Evening News against the attitude of that paper in relation to that part of State's Attorney Owens' Sunday law crusade which is directed against the social clubs. The News goes a long way to justify the club selling liquors on Sunday. After answering these correspondents, it has the following to say in reference to prohibition:

In the letter of Rev. Charles W. Baldwin the general question of prohibition is raised, in addition to the question of law enforcement. We have entire respect for the position taken by him and other Prohibitionists; but we have, upon more than one occasion, expressed our emphatic dissent from it. If a prohibition law were enacted, here in Maryland, an entirely different question as to law enforcement would arise from that which we have been discussing. If both branches of the Maryland Assembly were to pass a bill, and by the signature of the Governor it were to become a law, prohibiting the sale of liquor in the State, that law, the deliberate act of the Legislature, would be binding on all good citizens. But we do not believe it actually could be effectively enforced. We do not believe that any law of this character can be put into efficient action without the backing of an overwhelming public sentiment. The mere dictum of a majority would not suffice; and we believe the demoralization it would produce through wholesale violation and evasion would be greater than any good it might accomplish.

And we go farther than that. We should not favor a prohibition law, but should oppose it, even if it were practicable to get the law effectively enforced. Nobody can deny that drink is responsible for a vast amount of misery. But we believe that it is also responsible for a vast amount of happiness. All men are not cast in the same mold, and it is a happy thing that they are not. To many thousands of men, drink—not drunkenness—supplies something that enriches and brightens life. To make everybody conform, in matters directly affecting himself and his private life only, to standards set by the majority, would be to abridge what is already reduced to small dimensions by the exacting conditions of modern life—the play of individual peculiarities, the satisfaction of individual tastes and proclivities. We should be unwilling to purchase perfection itself at such a price. It is not to the removal of everything that may be a temptation or a snare, but to gradual progress in making the best of the opportunities around us, that we must look for the increase of human welfare and human happiness.

For chapped and cracked hands nothing is quite as good as an application of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Put it on before going to bed, use an old pair of gloves and see what a difference the morning will bring. J. S. Denny and Wye Mills drug store.

A Mother Testifies

This is to certify that my daughter was down for almost one year with a cold. The doctors finally pronounced it consumption. We had given up hope for her recovery. I was given a sample bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. I gave it all to her in about three hours. It stopped the cough, and gave her rest. I sent next day and bought a 50c. bottle and began giving it. In three month's time she was well. There can not be too much said in favor of Foley's Honey and Tar. It saved my child's life. Mrs. George Batson, Fountain Grove, Mo.

Three sizes—25c, 50c and $1.00. The 50-cent size contains two and one-half times as much as the small size and the $1.00 bottle almost six times as much.
