SATURDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1906.

Five girls in a fashionable boarding school have formed a society to protest earnestly against the new spelling. They sign themselves Alysse, Mayme, Grayce, Kathryne and Carrye.

Chester Gillette's conviction of murder appears to have simply introduced a new stage of proceedings in regard to his case. His counsel explain that they have a year in which to take an appeal, and that meanwhile there are various ways of staying execution of the sentence. Just so.

It appears that the real cause of Commander Peary's failure to reach the Pole is the warmth of the Arctic regions. With the thermometer averaging only 54 degrees below zero instead of the 72 degrees below that had been expected, the Polar sea was not frozen hard enough to sit tight, and the explorers were baffled by breaks and open water. Well, here's hoping for all the cold weather Peary needs for his comfort on the next trial!

Much interest was attached to the meeting held in Baltimore on Thursday night for the enlightenment of druggists, grocers and consumers of drugs and groceries in respect to the new Pure Food law, which takes effect January 1 next. The principle of the law is that the buyer shall get what he pays for—the label shall represent exactly what a package contains. He is not to get something "equally as good," or better, but what he wants, or thinks he wants. No buyer really wants adulterants, fancy colorings, preservatives, etc., but "wants the real thing." This the new law is supposed to secure for him, and the public will watch with hopefulness its zealous enforcement. A great deal of harm is done at present to unsuspecting stomachs by the inclusion in drugs and foods of substances not "down in the bill." This abuse will doubtless be measurably abated after the end of this month.

At 10.30 o'clock Monday morning Hon. Victor E. Metcalf, of California, took the oath of office at the Navy Department as Secretary of the Navy to succeed Hon. Charles J. Bonaparte, of Maryland, who became Attorney-General. Former Attorney-General William H. Moody took his seat on the Supreme Bench of the United States.

The new head of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Oscar S. Straus, of New York, also took the oath of office Monday morning in succession to Mr. Metcalf. This change in fact, was the first to occur, and after Mr. Straus, the first Hebrew who has ever been a member of the Cabinet, had taken the oath of office and had been introduced by Mr. Metcalf to all the heads of divisions and bureaus, the retiring Secretary of Commerce and Labor went to the Navy Department and there took the oath of office of Secretary of the Navy.

The Baltimore American says in an editorial Wednesday, that "the possibilities and practicability of oyster farming are to be set forth specially next March to the communities residing along the sounds, armlets and estuaries of the Chesapeake. The oystermen have generally been opposed to the inauguration of a leasing system; they have apparently been impressed with a belief that the beginning of a system of producing oysters by cultural effort will have in it a menace to their interests as takers of oysters from the common beds and bars. Unbiased and disinterested observers, having an understanding of results in oyster breeding and planting from a knowledge of what has been accomplished in other states, do not agree that the fears of the oystermen as to ill results that will ensue to themselves from the inauguration of a leasing law are well grounded. On the contrary, there is reason to assume that the oystermen should be and will be, if they properly use their opportunities, the first and chief beneficiaries under a leasing system. There is no apparent reason why every tonger or dredger should not quickly develop into an oyster farmer. Under the leasing law he can stake off his claim, and whatever he makes to grow upon his leased bottoms is his property. The rentals which he must pay will constitute a really small tax in proportion to the protection which the state will assure to him."

The gloomy tendency of millionaires to look on money as a curse must be intensified by the jeering refusal of the public to accept their earnest warnings to beware of getting in love with its accumulation. As a matter of fact, the world at large insists on getting its experience of the danger of such matters at first hand.

The Oil Trust officials, in their pathetic plaint that anything said about the trust is believed, must reconcile themselves to the fate befalling even those who are as pure as ice, as chaste as snow in their business methods. In this unjust world, as the comic opera poet remarks, the consciousness of virtue is often its sole reward.

The simplified form of spelling will be continued at the White House in all correspondence emanating from there, notwithstanding what action may be taken by Congress in the spelling of public documents. The use of the simplified form will include all correspondence passing between the White House and public officials, personal correspondence of the President and, in fact, all communications which do not require printing at the Government Printing Office or any of its branches.

For chapped and cracked hands nothing is quite as good as an application of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Put it on before going to bed, use an old pair of gloves and see what a difference the morning will bring. J. S. Denny and Wye Mills drug store.

National hysteria seems to be in the air. We are just getting over our Japanese scare, and now comes a German scare in England that is even more absurd. The question has been seriously raised in the House of Commons whether there is any deal between the United States and Germany by which, in case Germany becomes engaged in war, its mercantile marine will be taken under the American flag. What next, we wonder.
