SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1907.

An Ohio woman has obtained a divorce because her husband ridiculed her poetry. This is justification for homicide from the standpoint of the poets.

The Texas man who has predicted the end of the world for August next evidently has lost sight of the fact that the weather may be warm enough without it.

Carrie Nation has abandoned the wild and woolly, not to say, the unappreciative, West, and will go to Washington to live. She will bury her hatchet. Under the circumstances, she does not think that its use in fighting the demon rum is such a capital idea.

Some compounders wish to label medicines containing alcohol as containing "spiritus rectificatus." This is almost on a par with the action of the manufacturer who printed his label on a dark-colored paper in ink nearly the same color, and in type of almost microscopic size.

As the conditions exposed now appear, San Francisco was so honeycombed with graft that the only wonder is that it stood until an earthquake shook it down. Nothing was overlooked, apparently, that could pay tribute; even a prize-fight trust was held up and hit hard.

It seems it is quite possible for a man to be at the same time insane from a medical standpoint and sane legally. Perhaps in that great and glorious future of human enlightenment which is coming along sometime all law will be rejected as a patent absurdity which is in direct conflict with self-evident reason and fact.

In his Harvard speech the President revived the term "mollycoddle," and now he has brought out from cold storage where it has recently been reposing the equally expressive "mugwump." Mr. Roosevelt has shown a preference for the m's in enriching the country's language. The rest of the vocabulary will be awaited with eagerness.

A speaker in Washington at a public meeting has started a new idea which may prove very helpful if generally adopted. Being anxious to speak on a particular subject, he offered to pay $2 for every minute of talk. The offer was accepted and he talked $100 worth. If this practice becomes popular, it will either shut out tiresome speakers or capitalize their prosiness, in either case a public benefit resulting.

The simple statement made at various times by ignorant persons accused of grave crimes, that "de debbil had gotter inter me," is probably worth in its pristine veracity and general comprehensiveness all the fine-spun theories on volitional insanity and brainstorms which the most learned alienists have been able to invent. It seems to be the explanation which covers the whole ground of action.

Owing to a religious wave in a Mississippi town, the members of the grand jury became conscience-stricken over their violation of the Sunday liquor law and indicted themselves, paying their fines and getting a lecture from the judge. The court of conscience, once a case gets fairly before it, is apt to be a thorough one, though perhaps committing the legal fault of preferring facts to technicalities.

The cleverest lecturer yet, and the one bound to win most proselytes, is one in Chicago who is telling the women there of the moral obligation of getting new dresses every six months as the best way of averting financial panics. She reminds her hearers that men have millions invested in factories and enterprises concerned with the making of new fabrics and new fashions, and that if women refuse to change their styles every season then will come a depression in business following the lack of trade in these enterprises, which will react disastrously on the entire financial world. And besides the appeal to the moral principle—always a strong one with women—what a strong argument she is putting in their hands in demestic debates on the necessity of new clothes. A woman's love of dress and extravagance will mean one thing to a husband, but an appeal to ward off a great financial panic quite another.

Stuyvesant Fish says the President cannot see his own faults. Still, there are plenty of gentlemen in the railroad business who are willing to point them out to him.

A Western railroad has forbidden its section men to wear red shirts because of the tendency of engineers to confuse them with danger signals. This is a popular movement. Red shirts ought to be abolished on general principles.

The state food commissioner of Ohio has found in a city there a quantity of Easter cheap candy so injurious to health that he has ordered it all to be confiscated. This is a new and particularly mean form of the massacre of the innocents.

A Pennsylvania legislator has introduced a bill providing for the appointment of women judges. If the measure becomes a law it will be a reversion to the old tradition, in which justice is invariably pictured as a lady all ready for a game of blind man's bluff.

Paterson, N. J., has come into the limelight again, naturally, with the champion criminal. This is a man who, when arrested and sent to jail, stole the brass fittings of his cell, the goods being found on him when he was arraigned in the police court on the first charge.

DeWitt's Little Early Risers The famous little pills.

Don't Neglect It

It is a serious mistake to neglect a weak heart. It is such a short step to chronic heart disease. When you notice irregularity of action, occasioning short breath, palpitation, fluttering, pain in chest or difficulty in lying on left side, your heart needs help—a strengthening tonic. There is no better remedy than Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. Its strengthening influence is felt almost at once.

"I have used 10 bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and can truthfully say it has done me more good than anything I have ever used, and I have tried nearly everything that I know of. The doctor who attended me asked me what I was taking and I told him Dr. Miles Heart Cure, he said it was not going to do me any good, but it did. I have not taken any for a year now, and while there is occasionally a slight symptom of the old trouble, it is not enough for me to continue the use of the medicine. If I should get worse I would know what to do. Take Dr. Miles' Heart Cure as I did before, I consider myself practically cured of my heart trouble."
S. H. DUNNAM, Livingston, Texas.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.
