...N BOY FOUND.

Neighbors Think he was Murdered but Inquest Indicates he Died From Exposure.

Horace Marvin, son of Dr. Horace N. Marvin, of Kitt's Hammock, near Dover, Del., was found dead in a marsh on his father's farm last Saturday afternoon.

An autopsy was performed Sunday morning on the body which seemed to show that the child died from exposure. Why the searchers failed to find the body, if it had been where it was found all the time, can only be conjectured and the countryside is firm in its belief in foul play.

It is generally believed that the verdict of the coroner's jury will be in accordance with the opinion of the physicians who were present at the autopsy and, that officially the tragedy of the little lad will end there. However, that may be, but it will never end the mystery so far as many of the neighbors of Dr. Marvin are concerned, as well as his physician and his own family. It will be officially recorded that the boy, who would have been 4 years old Saturday, wandered to the marshes, was overcome by weariness, numbed by the cold, and, falling, lay there until death relieved his sufferings.

But the countryside does not believe this. Its own unalterable argument is that the body was not where it was discovered during the whole of the time since March 4, because that very place has been comparatively dry at times since the disappearance, and it has been burned over, walked over and almost raked over by many men, official and private searchers. Even if there are no marks of violence upon the body, it is asserted, the boy could have been kidnapped, held until the outcry alarmed his captors and then, after being starved to death, the body might have been dropped in a place where it was certain to be found. The people will not change their opinions, even when assured that the body shows signs of having been in the water off and on for two months. "Not there," they declare.

This is the theory constructed by the officials after the autopsy caused them to abandon the idea of violence: He was in a strange country, a city boy who had never been in the country before. His cousin, Rose Standigh, had gone to the house. One of the four men working on the place remembers now that he had told the lad that morning that down at the bay in the summer he could see mermaids and sharks and things, and the boy determined to see them at once. He toddled down the lane which runs to the west of the old barn down to a fence 300 yards away. His way was barred there by a high fence and he turned eastward. He grew weary then, heavily dressed as he was, and sat down perhaps. When he was rested and arose he was lost. There is a little hollow there and he could not see the house. He continued eastward until his way was barred by another fence, and then he turned northward. This was a barbed-wire fence and the tired little fellow followed this until he came to the marsh, covered with skim ice. Unwittingly he stepped upon this and went through to his knees. He tried to save himself. There was some struggle, but exhausted nature gave way and he fell half in the water and half out. From this position there was no escape. It was bitter cold that day and insensibility came perhaps in a few hours. The shouts of the searchers on all sides of him were not heard. In the northwest wind blowing his weak moans could not be heard. The following morning there came a thaw, with rain. The ice melted and the body sank. Detectives and private citizens passed and repassed the spot, the grass covered the body and it could not be seen when the water was low, and when the thunderstorm of Friday brought the body to the surface it set the scene for the last act of a tragedy that has stirred the country. The boy was not drowned. The authority for this is Dr. James H. Wilson, one of the best-known physicians of that part of Delaware, who performed the autopsy. The effect of the water in which the body was immersed was, of course, noticeable, but water was not the cause of death. Neither was violence of any kind. There was not on the body from its feet to the crown of the head any mark or bruise to be seen. There was the mark over the right eye which is entirely superficial, and the eye itself was atrophied, but this is ascribed to decomposition. The stomach and other organs were in unusually good condition, although the lungs had collapsed. As a precaution the attorney general had the organs taken by a professor in Philadelphia. He will analyze the contents of the stomach and subject the other organs to microscopic examination. When this report is received the coroner's jury will render a decision, and this will be next week.

The jury of inquest arrived at the farm at 11 o'clock Sunday morning and, after a cursory view of the body went to the marsh where the body was found by Ollie Pleasanton. The distance was marked as they walked in a straight line, and it was found to be just 1700 feet northeast of the haystack where the lad was last seen. A stick marked the spot where Pleasanton found the body floating, as he says, Saturday. This was about six feet from the solid ground. This does not mean necessarily that the body lay at this spot, for the storm of Friday night, if it brought the body to the surface, may have shifted its position as well. The jurors saw this and then returned to the house for the autopsy. The clothing first was found to be exactly as it was the day the boy vanished. The little red cap was still pulled down over the ears, the little red mittens were on the hands, the reefer coat and the "Buster Brown" suit were not disturbed. In the pockets were 2 pennies and three little china dolls, all of which had been broken.

The continued wet weather does not argue well for farmers of this county. While some have finished planting corn there are others who have not been able to break their ground, and in many instances. It is impossible to get a team in the fields to do any plowing on account of the softness of the ground. Not only are the corn growers sad but the truck grower has a grievance, it is impossible to put truck in the ground and what has been planted is growing slowly.

The annual petty thieving of flowers and vegetables has already begun. We would advise parents to keep a watchful eye over their roaming, wandering children unless they desire trouble. Spring chickens are already going on the market, and some are commanding fancy prices. Some farmers' wives claim that it cost as much to raise them as they bring, and that the ones becoming the proper size from the middle of May to the first of June are much more profitable than those needing much care during the colder months. They also claim that the eggs will net more money by being sold during the winter at the prevailing prices than by setting them and running the risk of losing a part of the eggs and raising only about one-half the chickens hatched.

CANNOT TAKE PLANTS.

Attorney General Bryan Says all Oysters Under 2½ Inches Must be Left on Bars.

A conflict of opinion has arisen in regard to the construction of two oyster laws passed at the last session of the Legislature in which the attorney general antagonizes the position taken by the Board of Shell Fish Commissioners.

The trouble arises from an apparent conflict between the oyster culture law and a cull law subsequently approved. The oyster culture law, by Section 3, made it lawful between April 15 and May 15 for any tonger to take oysters from such natural beds as might be designated for the purpose by the shell fish commission, to be sold only for the purposes now permitted by law, and in addition thereto to persons engaged in the industry of planting and cultivating oysters. The object contemplated by this section was to utilize for the planting industry areas in which seed oysters form, but in which they do not as a rule mature. There are places of this kind in the upper bay where oyster spat strikes and oysters are set which are generally killed out by the amount of fresh water poured into that part of the bay before they can grow to market size.

But in addition to passing the oyster culture law, the Legislature passed a cull law which requires all oysters taken from natural beds at any time to be returned forthwith if they are less than 2½ inches long. The law was approved the day after the oyster culture law was approved, and hence, figures as a later enactment. Being advised by their counsel that it could not reasonably be construed to apply to the taking of seed oysters from the designated areas for planting purposes, the Board of Shell Fish Commissioners in their order designated certain bottoms in the upper Chesapeake stated that all oysters valuable for planting purposes might be taken whether above or below 2½ inches in length.

In an opinion sent last week to Governor Warfield at his request, Attorney General William S. Bryan, Jr., ruled adversely upon the construction put by the shellfish commission. The attorney general, in a studied opinion, which he reached after long deliberation, decided that all oysters less than 2½ inches from hinge to mouth should be returned to the waters from which they were taken. Mr. Bryan holds that this would be so even if the oyster culture law was of later enactment, as it does not specifically declare that seed oysters may be taken, but simply mentions oysters, so that it is a reasonable inference that only such oysters as the general law permits to be taken are contemplated. He cites as a general principle that one law can repeal another law by implication only when there is a clear repugnancy between the two acts, and when it is impossible for them to be so construed as to enable effect to be given to both of them.

Oyster planters are, therefore, in accordance with the opinion, not allowed to take the small oysters for planting from April 15 to May 15 in the upper Chesapeake waters set apart by the shellfish commission for this purpose, and a consequent loss will be entailed upon the 800 planters who had leased 4,000 acres of bottoms for planting in accordance with the terms of the Haman bill. If an attempt is made to take the small oysters the oyster navy can interfere, and the offender is liable to arrest. With but a few days remaining in the present planting season, there is little likelihood that a test case will be made, but in all probability a hard fight will be made to get a different interpretation upon this section before this time next year.

B. Howard Haman, the author of the Oyster Culture law, is greatly disappointed that such an interpretation should be placed upon the order of the commissioners, which was issued under date of March 28, and he says that he dissents strongly from the attorney general's opinion. He made a strong plea for the law as it stands and the interpretation put on it by the commission, and said that the Cull act was passed to help the growth of the natural bars and that the Haman act made proper provision for seed for planting. He does not think the two at all inimical, and thinks the attitude of the fisheries' police could consistently be that of "hands off."

DEMOCRAT... CITY

Baltimore Will be Governed by Democrats After Tuesday, May 21.

The Democratic candidates swept Baltimore city in Tuesday's election. The candidates on the city ticket—J. Barry Mahool, for Mayor, Harry F. Hooper for Comptroller and Geo. N. Numsen for Second Branch of the City Council—were all elected by comfortable pluralities as follows: Mahool, 4640; Numsen, 8528 and Hooper 5081.

The Democrats carried three of the four Second Branch Councilmanic districts, the Republicans carrying one. There are three hold-over Democrats and one hold-over Republican in this branch, so that, with the election of Mr. Numsen and three councilmen Tuesday, the branch will have seven Democrats and two Republicans. The branch at present has six Democrats and three Republicans. To the First Branch of the City Council the Democrats elect 17 of their candidates, the Republicans getting seven. This is a gain of one for the Republicans, who only have six members of this branch at present. Although many men failed to express an opinion as to the $1,000,000 school-house and the $1,000,000 fire-engine house loan, both loan propositions were carried by big majorities, the fire loan getting about 42,000 majority and the school loan about the same amount.

Altogether there were about 93,500 ballots cast. This is about 1000 less than were cast at the McLane-Wachter election in 1903, and the percentage of the registered vote cast Tuesday was also a trifle less than in the 1903 contest. Because of the greater interest this year, politicians had figured on a larger vote than in 1903, but both sides say that they met with unexpected difficulties in trying to get the vote out.

Messrs. Mahool and Hooper seem to have polled about the normal Democratic vote. They both carried the same 17 wards, and Hooper ran considerably ahead on pluralities in nine of these, while Mahool ran ahead of Hooper on pluralities in the other eight wards. On the total vote for the whole city, Hooper fell only about 1200 behind Mahool, which is about normal, as the head of the ticket can always be counted upon to run somewhat ahead of the other candidates. Mr. Hooper, however, got a larger plurality than Mr. Mahool, due, apparently, to the fact that in many of the uptown districts Mayor Timanus received the votes of Democrats who voted the remainder of the Democratic ticket straight. Numsen's run was the surprise of the day. He got a much larger plurality than any of the other Democratic candidates. This was evidently due, in part, to the careful discrimination of independent voters who supported Timanus, but considered Numsen a safer man than Tattersall for President of the Second Branch, and in part to the knifing of Tattersall, by Wachterites, who were sore at his having gone on the Timanus ticket, and by Timanusites, who had little use for Tattersall.

Mr. Mahool carried all but seven wards in the city. His strength was principally in East Baltimore. That Mayor Timanus carried such independent wards as the Fourteenth and Fifteenth and held Mahool down to a very small plurality in the Eleventh is evidence that many of the city's large number of independent voters supported him. The returns seem to indicate that but for the mayor's personal popularity and the general feeling that he had given a good administration the election would have been a veritable rout for the Republicans.

Wonderful Eczema Cure.

"Our little boy had eczema for five years," writes N. A. Adams, Henrietta, Pa. "Two of our home doctors said the case was hopeless, his lungs being affected. DISAGREEABLE PEOPLE.

There are many who think that mental dyspepsia should be ranked among the recognized diseases. It is characterized by a sour visage, inability to see the good side of anything and a general disposition to make other people miserable. Not infrequently it is a direct outgrowth of the other sort of dyspepsia and disappears when the other yields to treatment. In this treatment well known medical men are now using with much success a prescription compounded of ¼ oz. Fluid Extract of Buchu, 1 oz. Bulso Mixture, ¼ oz Fluid Extract Gentian Compound and 16 ozs. water. If the stomach is sour, two tablespoonfuls of baking soda are added to the above. The dose is a tablespoonful three times a day, to be taken before meals. The materials for this prescription may be purchased at any reliable pharmacy at small cost.

...S. GOLDSBOROUGH AP-

Pointed Secretary to the New Mayor of Baltimore.—Will Enter Upon Duties May 21.

Mayor elect Mahool, of Baltimore, announced Wednesday that he would appoint A. S. Goldsborough as his secretary and that Mr. Goldsborough would take the oath of office May 21, when the mayor-elect takes his seat. Although the appointment is a personal one, it will probably meet with satisfaction among the Democrats who worked diligently for Mr. Mahool's election. Mr. Goldsborough, it is said, was not an applicant for the position, and it was only upon the insistence of the mayor-elect that he accepted. In making the announcement the mayor-elect said he knew Mr. Goldsborough could be re-elected chief clerk of the First Branch City Council. The council will meet in caucus within a few days, and he felt that the members should be in a position to elect the chief clerk.

Mr. Goldsborough is the son of the late Robert Goldsborough, of Centreville. On his mother's side he is a direct descendant of Levin Winder, who was Governor of Maryland during the War of 1812. Born 37 years ago, he is the same age as the mayor-elect. He was born in Centreville, where he lived until 1896. After leaving Washington College, he studied law at the University of Maryland. After being graduated in law he spent four years in his native town. In 1896 he went to Baltimore to take up newspaper work. In 1903 he became interested in the candidacy of the late Robert McLane for the mayoralty and made his first appearance in Baltimore on the stump. At the conclusion of that campaign he became chief clerk of the First Branch City Council. He was re-elected in 1905.

During the fall campaign of 1903 he was active in behalf of Governor Warfield's election. In the spring of 1905 he was secretary of the Loans Campaign Committee. He wrote the campaign text-book for that campaign and worked with the committee by day and on the stump at night. He was the assistant chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee, last fall. At the beginning of the mayoralty campaign he became secretary of the Taxpayers' Association at the invitation of ex-Governor Brown and at the personal urging of the mayor-elect.

Capt. Clash Finds a Friend in Time of Need.

Herbert B. Stinson, assignee, of Baltimore, sold Tuesday afternoon, the property of Capt. Cloudsbury N. Clash, at Centreville Landing, consisting of two large granaries, one small granary, one large phosphate house, one storehouse, 250 feet of wharf front, 50 square perches of wharfage fronting the water, small office and set of scales and a modern two-and-a-half story frame dwelling to Miss Susan H. Williams, for $5,500. Miss Williams is a friend of the family of Captain Clash, and upon the ratification of the sale will give them a life estate of the property, free of rentals or taxation. She is now traveling in Europe but, upon receiving the intelligence that the captain's circumstances necessitated his selling the home, she instructed her agent, Pere T. Forman, of Centreville, to purchase the property and dispose of it as above. Miss Williams is the wealthiest resident and property owner in this county.

A HUMAN BODY.

It is worth while to remember that the human body has the most perfect sewerage system that has ever been devised. Just as in that of a great city, the sewerage system of the individual is designed to carry away the waste, which, allowed to collect, would cause discomfort, in all probability followed by serious disease. Hence the sewers of the body must not be allowed to become clogged. Yet that is just what is the matter with the man or woman who suffers from constipation. And when constipation becomes chronic more is required for its permanent relief than a mere passage of the bowels. Governing muscles must be strengthened and restored to their natural condition of elasticity. Many physicians of repute find that this can be done by the use of the following prescription: ½ ounce Fluid Extract of Senna; ½ ounce Rochelle Salts; 1 ounce Aro-Sagrada; 30 grains Bi-Carbonate of Soda; ½ ounce water and 1½ ounces Glycerine. A teaspoonful is given at bedtime and before each meal, and this is continued until there is free movement of the bowels. The ingredients indicated are obtainable at any first-class pharmacy.

MAY TERM OF COURT.

Chief Judge Alfred Pearce Delivered the Charge to the Grand Jury.

The May term of the Circuit Court for Queen Anne's county convened Monday morning at 10.30 o'clock in the court house, Centreville, with Chief Judge James Alfred Pearce and Associate Judge W. H. Adkins on the bench. Judge Crothers entered the court room shortly afterwards.

The January docket was called and adjourned and the following gentlemen were drawn as members of the grand jury: E. M. Forman, foreman; James Merrick, Jr., Saulsbury Seney, T. Roland Carville, D. Carroll Bryan, George W. Butler, Pere W. Ruth, Finley Roberts, W. E. B. Faithful, Nathan S. Powell, John P. Roe, William W. Nelson, W. B. Hollingsworth, Wm. Lynch, R. Leslie Merrick, John Rochester, George A. Whiteley, James B. Hopkins, Jr., J. Louis Rhodes, James L. Coursey, John W. Boggs, John N. Cook, W. P. Finley.

The following compose the petit jury: S. W. Seney, Henry Norman, John P. Arrington, Sylvester Fogwell, C. W. Clements, David Walls, W. D. Smith, A. M. Keating, Elmer Golt, W. E. Collier, A. W. Nichols, James E. Higman, Charles Joslin, W. T. McKenney, J. Medford Price, John R. Whaley, John McGinnes, Charles M. Lloyd, W. B. Earle, Jr., W. Lloyd Ford, Phil. H. Golt, R. B. Carmichael, Francis A. Emory, John E. George, W. C. McConnor.

C. Percy Merrick, of the First district, was excused from jury service on account of illness and John E. George was drawn in his place. E. Tilghman Paca, of the Fifth district, was excused on account of the illness of his daughter, and Wm. C. McConnor was drawn in his place.

After the grand jurors were sworn, Judge Pearce delivered the charge, in which he said in part: "I am advised that there is but one serious case for your consideration, that of homicide. It is your duty first to examine those cases now resting in the county jail, in order that the innocent may be speedily discharged and the guilty receive the punishments they are entitled to, and in all cases it is your province to examine only the state's witnesses, but you should indict no one whom you would not convict from the evidence produced before you, if you were sitting as petit jurors.

"The enforcement of the local option laws of this county have heretofore been regarded as exceptional and public sentiment has always sustained their enforcement, consequently greater respect has been shown them in Queen Anne's county than any other in the circuit. But recently there has either been a change in the views of the public or else the violators have become bolder, and while it is neither the province nor the purpose of the court to admonish you to deal with these violators any more harshly than in other cases yet, it is your duty to examine these cases with certainly as much care, zeal and diligence as any other and to bring all perpetrators to justice."

Judge Pearce then admonished them to keep secret their proceedings, both during court and for all times afterward and then called their attention to the law relating to embezzlers of public monies and abortion. He stated that their hours would be from 9.30 to 4.30, with a recess at noon of ½ of an hour.

Walter W. Derr, of Baltimore, and R. Groome Parks, of Chestertown, were admitted to practice at this bar.

The first case called was an appeal case of Dudley & Carpenter vs. Levi Eversett, suit on open account. Jury trial. Verdict in favor of Dudley & Carpenter for $2 less than was given by the magistrate. T. J. Keating for plaintiff and J. H. C. Legg for defendant.

TUESDAY.

The writ against Isaac Grollman, charged by Mrs. T. B. Eareckson with the use of insulting and abusive language, was quashed.

Martin Dougherty, charged with selling intoxicating liquors, was tried before the court and acquitted. Bright for accused and Keating for state.

The appeal case of Groome Parks, of Chestertown, against Leverage occupied the remainder of the day and a night session which was held. Parks claimed to have an execution upon a corn crop which Leverage bought at a constable's sale. Trial before court. R. Groome Parks and J. H. C. Legg for plaintiff and T. J. Keating and E. H. Brown, Jr., for defendant. Decision not announced.

WEDNESDAY.

The case of Beverdy Saddler, of Kent Island, against the board of county commissioners was continued at the instigation of the defendants' counsel, James T. Bright. Saddler was thrown out of his buggy, owing to the terrible condition of the county roads, and broke his arm. The suit is instituted to recover damages. P. B. Hopper and J. F. Harper for plaintiff.

The appeal case of Levi Pippin vs. George W. Carter was tried before court. Pippin placed executions upon the supposed crops of Carter, when his son, Henry Carter was the real tenant. Verdict in favor of Pippin. T. J. Keating for plaintiff and J. H. C. Legg for defendant.

J. F. Curlett, a Seventh Day Adventist, was tried before a jury for working on Sunday. Verdict guilty and fined $5 and costs. He refused to pay the money and was committed to the county jail for 30 days. Keating for state and Legg for accused.

The grand jury presented Horace Gibson, colored, for bigamy and T. H. Plummer for violating the local option laws.

T. J. Tarman was indicted in two cases for violation of the local option laws, and Hosea Young, colored, was indicted for shooting and killing Mayfield Carr, colored.

THURSDAY.

The criminal docket was taken up and Elizabeth Wilson, colored, was tried before the court for the larceny of goods valued at $8 from Mrs. Paul J. Richards, of Church Hill. Keating for state and Mitchell for accused. Verdict guilty and sentenced to one year in the Maryland penitentiary.

The case of Jacob Uber, indicted for the larceny of a horse blanket from Norman Walls, was tried before a jury. Keating for state and Harper for accused. Verdict not guilty.

G. W. Cloyd, a merchant of Plunk Mo., had a narrow escape four years ago, when he ran a jimson bur into his thumb. He says: "The doctor wanted to amputate it but I would not consent. I bought a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and that cured the dangerous wound." 25c. at J. S. Denny and W. E. Collier.

"Here's to your health and happiness"—DeWitt's Little Early Risers—famous little pills. Nasty, sick headache or biliousness may come on any time; the cure is an early riser. J. S. Denny and Wye Mills drug store.

A little Kodol taken occasionally, especially after eating, will relieve sour stomach, belching and heartburn. J. B. Jones, Newport, Tenn. writes: "I am sure three one dollar bottles of your Kodol positively cured me of dyspepsia, and I can recommend it as that was three years ago and I haven't been bothered since with it." Kodol is guaranteed to give relief. J. S. Denny and Wye Mills store.

THE KIDNEYS.

The kidneys must be numbered among the most vitally important organs of the body, as upon their proper action depends in large measure the general health. The diuretic properties of buchu are well known and appreciated by physicians everywhere, and it forms an important element in the following prescription, popular with medical men of standing as a successful remedy, in cases of kidney and bladder trouble: Fluid Extract of Buchu, ¼ ounce; Fluid Extract of Uva Ursi, ¼ ounce; Amet Cordial, 1 ounce; Fluid Extract Liverwort, ¼ ounce; water fifteen ounces. The dose is a tablespoonful three times a day, and the use of the medicine should be continued at least a month, in order that all impurities may be driven from the system. In connection with this prescription doctors recommend the drinking of an abundance of water. Any first-class pharmacy can supply the ingredients named.
