AFTER GEORGE'S SCALP.

Jas. T. Bright Says He is Still in the Field With His Tomahawk.

Last Saturday's Baltimore American contained the following information: "Mr. James T. Bright, leader of the Independents in Queen Anne's county, and who was at the Hotel Rennert yesterday, said he intends to keep up the fight in the county against the regular Democratic organization, headed by Mr. John E. George, former clerk of the court. 'The Independents hold the balance of power in the county,' said Mr. Bright. 'All we ask is a square deal. That will be a hard proposition in the future, as Queen Anne's has been added to the list of Wilson counties. Just think of the last election in the county! Out of a total registered vote of 4,800 the successful party polled only 1,400. Over 2,000 votes are not accounted for.'

"It is understood that disruption in the ranks of the regular Democratic organization in the county is threatened. Mr. George failed to land a single state appointment for any Democrat of the county. Among the applicants was Mr. Wm. McKenney, who is the leader of a large element which has hitherto adhered to the organization. He is not in an amiable frame of mind, because of his failure to land a place.

"The Republicans are angry over the failure of the Senate to confirm the nomination of Mr. Mallalieu as minority member of the Board of Election Supervisors. As a result of the failure to confirm the nomination Mr. Anderson, a Republican, and who is a brother-in-law of Mr. John E. George, holds over. Mr. Anderson's name was not on the list submitted to the governor by the Republican State Central Committee. The Republican leaders of the county are contemplating addressing an open letter to Governor Crothers, in which they will ask the appointment of some other Republican in place of Mr. Anderson, who, they say, is not their choice as minority member of the board."

Republican primaries were held in the several districts of Queen Anne's county last Saturday, and the Republican County Convention met in the court house Monday afternoon. Delegates were elected to the district convention which met in Salisbury Thursday and to the congressional convention, which meets at Oxford City in August. Resolutions were adopted indorsing the administration of President Roosevelt and the nomination of Hon. William H. Taft for the presidency of the United States. The following resolution was also passed: "That the State Central Committee and one Republican from each district in the county be made a special committee to wait upon Governor Austin Crothers and register a protest of the Republican party of Queen Anne's county against the retention of William H. Anderson as a representative of the Republican party on the board of election supervisors in this county."

15,000 Made Homeless by Fire in Chelsea.

An apparently insignificant fire, which started among rags on a dump in the city of Chelsea, Mass, Sunday was fanned by a northwest gale into a conflagration which obliterated nearly one-third of the city. Five hundred dwelling houses and public buildings were destroyed, 1,500 families were driven from their habitations and 15,000 people made homeless. Five lives were lost, one a woman, having shot herself in a frenzy over her inability to save her property. From 50 to 75 persons were injured. The loss is estimated at $13,000,000.

The burned area covers the business section of Chelsea and is a mile and a-quarter long and three-quarters of a mile wide. Showers of burning embers were driven before a sixty-mile-an-hour gale. The structures destroyed include thirteen churches, five banks, two hospitals, five schoolhouses, the city hall and several stores and factories. The flames wiped out the business section and spread to the water-front and East Boston. Thousands of refugees fled from the city. While the fire was at its height several big oil tanks exploded. The firemen asked aid from all nearby cities. The fire started at 10.40 A. M., and was not under control until 10.50 P. M. The fire, which was the worst Greater Boston has known in many years, defied the utmost effort of the combined fire departments of Chelsea and several nearby cities and a large detachment of Boston firemen and apparatus.

The recent session of the legislature failing to again postpone the relisting of personal property throughout the state, it becomes incumbent upon the county commissioners of the several counties to have this work done this year. The commissioners of this county determined at their meeting Tuesday to begin the work soon. Two assessors for each district will be appointed shortly, and the work will begin simultaneously in each district immediately thereafter. It is estimated that it should be completed in about six weeks.

Miss Frances Karbinos, of Baltimore, obtained a verdict for $15,000 damages against the Delaware and Chesapeake Railroad Company and the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company in the circuit court for Caroline county, at Denton, Wednesday, for injuries received by her on August 18, 1905, at Kenton, Del. While crossing the railroad tracks Miss Karbinos was run over by a locomotive and her left leg was cut off. At the time of the accident she was 17 years old. DR. RICKARDS WANTED.

Caroline County Authorities Have Charge of Intent to Kill Against Him.

The Baltimore police have been asked to assist in the capture of Dr. Henry N. Rickards, of Ridgely, Caroline county, who has been indicted by the grand jury of that county on the charge of assault with intent to kill. Dr. Rickards came into prominence in 1906, when he successfully fought extradition to Maryland after being arrested on the order of Marshal Farnan in Denver, Col. To assist in the work of running down Dr. Rickards, Detective Thomas F. Hogan, of Baltimore, has been assigned to the case. Detective Hogan knows Dr. Rickards well, for it was he who was sent to Denver to take him to Baltimore.

The charge for which Dr. Rickards is wanted grew out of a peculiar circumstance, according to the Baltimore police. About the middle of March a four-dear-old infant was found in the kitchen of Harry Ritchey, at Ridgely. How the child came there or where it came from no one had been able to discover. As Mr. and Mrs. Ritchey had no children, they decided to adopt the little girl and grew very much attached to it. All Caroline county began discussing the matter and developments were eagerly awaited.

On Sunday night, April 5, about 7 o'clock, there appeared at the home of the Ritcheys, the police say, a man said to be Dr. Rickards. It is alleged that he demanded the infant, saying that its mother would be down on the evening train. Mrs. Ritchey declined to give up her pretty "daughter," and Dr. Rickards, it is charged, drew a pistol from his hip pocket and demanded the child. Mrs. Ritchey screamed and her husband ran to her assistance. Before he could speak, he was also confronted with the pistol. The two men got into a struggle and Mrs. Ritchey grabbed up her infant and ran from the house to the home of a neighbor. Dr. Rickards, it is said, missed the child and quickly followed, but he was not fast enough, for Mrs. Ritchey had landed safely with her charge.

Dr. Rickards did not try to gain entrance to the neighbor's house and immediately left his home. Since then nothing has been heard from him. The following day, Monday, April 16, the case was reported to the grand jury and the next day several indictments were found against the doctor. The state's attorney of Caroline county telephoned Marshal Farnan, Baltimore last week asking him to arrest and detain Dr. Rickards on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

Dependable Workmen are Wanted.

Work makes men. Luck usually fails. Pluck nearly always wins. To succeed in anything one must overcome obstacles. Force and fibre are built by hardships. Grit is as necessary in the making of a man as is gumption. Hardships are not always handicaps. Often they are helps. You will understand this better in twenty years. Meanwhile, permit one who has lived that twenty years and more to advise you in this. Hang onto your job until you are sure of a better one. Dependable boys are in demand. And no boy can be depended upon who does not finish the task he sets his hand to do. However disagreeable our work, do it thoroughly. Do it better than the average boy will do it. In that way you will come to be known as a dependable boy. And mind you this: Men everywhere are looking for capable, honest, gritty, dependable boys. The sooner you let people know that you are that kind of a boy, the sooner you will get a better job. And don't be in a hurry to give up the work you already have. Be sure something better is offered. Wait a while. Do your work well. Promotion will come. And do not envy the boy who has an easy time. You would much better pity him. He has a good time now, but some day he must "make good." With his flabby muscles and his easy habits and his many wants, he stands a far poorer chance than you. Remember above all, young fellow, you are making a man of yourself.

Kodol for dyspepsia has helped thousands of people who have had stomach trouble. This is what one man says of it: "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Gentlemen—In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. I could not digest anything I ate and in the spring of 1902 I bought a bottle of Kodol and the benefit I received from that bottle all the gold in Georgia could not buy. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic. May you live long and prosper. Yours very truly, C. N. Cornell, Roding, Ga., Aug. 27, 1906." J. S. I had one foot in the grave, but Electric Bitters put it back on the turf again, and I've been well ever since." Sold under guarantee at J. S. Denny. 50c.

WHAT NEXT?

A Cult Which Believes in This Enlightened Twentieth Century, Marriage is a Sin!

After living until she was 29 years old without having made the acquaintance of a man, Miss Ada Pratt, member of the Woman's Commonwealth, that regards man as essential evil and marriage as a mortal sin, met B. Franklin Hoover, a hotel clerk, and married him. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover are now spending their honeymoon in Philadelphia.

The cult was formed at Waco, Texas, nearly thirty years ago by Mrs. Martha McWhirter, who announced she had had a visitation from the Almighty and had been told that it was sinful to live with man. Mrs. Pratt, mother of the now Mrs. Hoover, was one of the early converts. She left her husband and joined the colony Mrs. McWhirter had formed, and two months afterward Ada was born. Ten years ago the "Commonwealth," moved to Washington, taking up a large farm of 172 acres in Montgomery county, Maryland, and a large house in the city. The children were taught to beware of men. Of course, they saw men. Mrs. Hoover says she often noticed them. But she never paid attention to any of them until she met Hoover.

"Five of the girls grew up," she said, "and then slipped away to be married. Of course, they were regarded as sinners. I thought them bad. But about a year ago I went down town with a girl friend and she introduced me to Mr. Hoover. Somehow or other I could not get him out of my mind." Hoover went to Chicago, and then to Philadelphia, and wrote his intention to Miss Pratt in Washington. "I was crazy to see him," she admitted, "and decided to risk the fear of my mother's displeasure and give him a surprise party. So I slipped quietly out of the house in Washington and went to Philadelphia. When I found Mr. Hoover he was greatly surprised. 'Well, will you marry me?' he asked. It took me by surprise, although I was not wholly unprepared for it. 'I'm willing,' I said finally." The ceremony was performed after which the bride wrote to her mother, but has not received an answer yet. "I am afraid she never will forgive me," she said. "She always was very strict with me. There are still three unmarried girls at the Comonwealth. They are 23, 28 and 33 years old."

Governor Vetoes Worcester Oyster Bill.

Governor Crothers has practically cleaned up the file of measures in the executive office which had previously been passed and sent to him for his approval or veto. Among the bills to which is Excellency refused to give his approval were many of only local importance. One, however, was the bill to exempt Worcester county from the provisions of the Haman oyster law, and about which there had been so much discussion. In withholding his approval from this measure, which was among the last to come to him, the governor made a lengthy explanation of his stand and the reason for his action. He said, in part: "This is a bill on its face local in character, but in fact state-wide in its effect, known as the Worcester county oyster bill. After many years of agitation upon this oyster culture question, the state adopted a policy of oyter culture for all the people in all sections of the state under the provisions of the act of 1906. To sign this bill would make an exception in favor of this county, while keeping under its provisions the other counties of the state, some of which were equally opposed to its provisions. Other counties would come to the Legislature and ask that they too might be exempt from its provisions. In my opinion, it would weaken the effectiveness of the measure." The governor also vetoed the bill regulating freight rates on the Chesapeake bay. The bill providing separate compartments in Chesapeake bay steamers for white and colored passengers was signed Monday.

One good thing follows another—in Maryland. The strawberry season is not far off.

State Treasurer Vandiver, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, has notified Governor Crothers that he will call the committee together at the Eutaw House, Baltimore, for conference April 29 or 30. The state convention will meet at the Auditorium theatre in Baltimore, June 10.

Death Was on His Heels.

Jesse P. Morris, of Skippers, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak and with such a fearful cough that my friends declared consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a-half bottles I was a well man again. I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung disease in all the world." Sold under guarantee at J. S. Denny. 50c. and $1. Trial bottle free.

Weeds May be Used for Forage and Manure.

After we shall have destroyed our forests to eke out the necessary supply of wood pulp we may possibly find a near-to-hand substitute in some weed now cast as rubbish to the void. According to analyses of eighteen samples of the more common weeds, made at the instance of the Department of Agriculture, it has been developed that many of them withdraw large amounts of nitrogen from the soil. The large amount of protein in the dry matter was particularly noticeable in purslane, lamb's-quarters or pigweed, and cheese weed or mallow. It is stated that there is more protein in the dry matter of these weeds than in either alfalfa or clover, and it is suggested that it is advisable to keep a few sheep on every farm for utilizing and controlling the weed crop in order that under such a system the land may be reclaimed and the weeds utilized for both forage and green manure. The farmer who knows his weeds may gather advantage and save money by reason of his knowledge. It is suggested by the experimenters of the department "that by judicious selection and simple methods of improving forage crops with reference to protein content the feed bills now made up so largely of expenditures for costly concentrated feeds to supply the deficiencies of farm feeds in protein may be greatly reduced."

Overhead Approaches to Steamers.

Several prominent officials of steamboat companies whose boats land at Light street wharves in Baltimore will go before the city and street railway officials in a few days for the purpose of launching a project for an elevated railroad on Light street from Baltimore street to Montgomery street. The object in having the overhead structure is for the protection and convenience of the thousands of passengers that go to and from the wharves every year. The plan in general is for a structure like the elevated railroad over North street. It would be built on a level with Baltimore street, and run all the way to the top of the hill at Montgomery street. At every intersecting street there would be a station, with steps leading to the street. At the streets between Pratt and Lee, in front of the steamboat wharves, in addition to the overhead stations, bridges to each steamboat wharf would be built. Then the passengers would not leave the boats from the freight gangways and wend their way among the longshoremen on the wharves to streets dangerous to cross on account of the number of vehicles. Instead they would leave the boats from the upper decks and walk across the street on the overhead structure and board the car at any of the desired stations.

Shoot and Club a Postmaster in Cecil.

Postmaster Morris, of Sassafras, Cecil county, was shot in the leg, then beaten with a club by three masked burglars who afterward compelled the postmaster's wife, at the point of a revolver, to give them $90 in cash. After obtaining the money the men ordered Mrs. Morris to get back to bed. While she was doing this intruders made good their escape. Before attacking the postmaster and his wife the burglars broke into the postoffice and stole a lot of stamps. They then entered the residence part of the building and made their way to the postmaster's bedroom. Mr. and Mrs. Morris were awakened by the noise and got up to make an investigation. One of the intruders made a rush for Mr. Morris and a short but fierce struggle ensued, during which the postmaster was shot in the leg, below the knee, by one of the other burglars. He continued to struggle with the first intruder, when one of the other men felled him to the floor with a terrific blow on the head with a club. While one of the robbers stood over Mr. Morris with a pistol the other two made their demands for money from Mrs. Morris, threatening to shoot her if she refused to comply with their request. She procured $90 in cash and some checks from a closet. The burglars took the cash, but declined to accept the checks.

Shortly after the robbery three men called at the house of a negro, near Sassafras, and inquired the way to Elkton. The sheriff and his deputy are searching for the burglars, but they have not succeeded in obtaining any clue. It was learned that the men stole a horse and carriage from a man named Morgan at Townsend, Del., and drove to Sassafras.

Improvements Due to Rural Free Delivery.

It is asserted by the Postoffice Department officials that since the establishment of rural delivery farm values have materially increased, and a good part of these valuations may be attributable to the introduction of rural delivery, as an establishment of a route brings a great influx of mail to the locality affected, and this is followed by an increase in the outgoing mail. There also has been a saving of more than $12,000,000 on account of closing small postoffices and discontinuing star routes. The number of routes installed during the fiscal year 1905-06 averaged 304 a month; during the year ended June 30, 1907, the monthly average was 163 routes. At present the average is little more than 100 a month. The requirement of the department that roads should be kept in condition to be traveled with facility has been an incentive on the part of those interested in the rural service to promote road improvement and repair. It is noted that throughout the country since the introduction of rural free delivery there has been a great improvement in the roads.

Ropes to Cows Prevented Teams Passing.

The Maryland Legislature at the late session passed an act prohibiting the hitching of animals on the streets of Tilghman, the home of Representative Jackson, who had the bill passed. The reason why the bill was passed is given as follows: In that town, which is near Easton, there is one long street, about a mile in length, with the houses scattering, and for some time certain of its inhabitants have been in the habit of tying their cows with a long rope on one side of the road to graze, and while so grazing the cow would go to the other side of the road, thus stretching a rope across the road, which made it very inconvenient and dangerous for teams going through the town, as many times horses would become frightened. Frequently persons traveling along the road have been compelled to get out of their carriages to drive the cow across the road before they could pass, as the rope hitched to the cow would prevent them from getting by.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

Borrowed Books Should be Returned.

Books are more than property, they not only have money value, but are repositories of the best ideas of the best brains of the world. They are the only inexhaustible storehouses of wealth ever devised, since they may be drawn upon without limit yet without diminishing the rich contents. When one offers the loan of his books therefore, he bids his friend partake in welcome of the good things which he has provided for his own delectation. One of the most unselfish of pleasures is to place into appreciative hands a book that has width and bottom and breadths of thought and wit; one that strengthens, brightens and benefits by its perusal.

Acceptance of the loan of a book carries with it the implied obligation to use it well and return it to the owner in due season. The booklover always feels complimented by the loan of a volume; the student and even the casual reader, if rightly balanced and appreciative of favors conferred, will read, digest and promptly restore a borrowed book to its owner, that its companionship may gladden his heart or he may send it out again as a missionary of confidence and good fellowship. Abuse of the loan of a book is a betrayal of confidence and therefore a vice. It is a disregard of property rights, and the wanton separation of friend from friend. It is the taking advantage of a good motive for the working of an unworthy one. It is, of course, true that many—the most, by far—of abuses of book loans come about by reason of carelessness, negligence, forgetfulness and the like. But do those things lessen the loss to the owner? Do they diminish his regret for the absence of a favorite author from his bookshelves?

Learn Telegraphy

Telegraphy is easily learned and intelligent operators draw good pay from the very start. Railroad telegraphy is the path that leads men who are painstaking and industrious to the highest positions in railroad service.

The World Needs More Telegraphers.

It needs more young men and women who have been taught the practical features of the profession, and are able to "make good" when put to the crucial test of actual and responsible work. Such knowledge can come only from a school that has a practical equipment and teachers who have had actual experience in the branches of service for which a student is preparing.

Learn Telegraphy In a Practical School.

At Laurel, Delaware, is located The Atlantic Telegraph Institute, a practical telegraph school, where all branches of the profession are taught in a thorough and practical manner, each being handled by a teacher who has had years of actual experience in the service for which he is training the students of this school.

That's the reason why our graduates are always in demand.

The Atlantic Telegraph Institute,
